Board addresses student protest

By Douglas Ray

"It's hard to see the relevance of a staff member going to South Africa," said Jan Bone, an ex-board member. Bone spoke at the May 25 Board meeting against the Board of Trustees' decision to grant Christopher Kratz, placement specialist, a paid leave in South Africa.

Bone's main concern was with the board's fiscal responsibility. She has no objection to Kratz studying the job market in South Africa, but she should spend his own money. She explained she had taken trips with her husband to other countries, but at their own expense and during vacation.

Rex Burwell, English instructor, Phil Stewart, faculty senate president, and Lisa Aust, Harper student also voiced their concerns.

However, Burwell opposes any support of this exchange. He said, "The reputation of Harper was at stake. The college is showing their approval of a 'racist regime'." This stance, according to Burwell, would stunt the growth of the college—both students and staff.

Faculty President Phil Stewart said the union (locally local 1603) does not support or approve this paid leave. "The Union does not want to be associated in any shape or form with the board's decision," said Stewart.

Student Lisa Aust expressed her dismay that not one board member voted against the motion. She said, "Students and faculty are uninformed about South Africa."

Aust mentioned the protest held on campus last May, "has increased their awareness of the racism in South Africa. The protest was a success, many area newspapers reported it. The Daily Herald recognized our concern and published the demonstration—front page!"

Aust went on to say that Kratz should hold an open forum when he returns, allowing students, faculty and community residents to ask questions about his experiences in South Africa.

After citizen participation, Chris Howard, board member, motivated to amend the agenda by addressing this issue. The motion carried.

President Paul Thompson agreed with Aust's suggestion for an open forum, a time and date would be chosen when Kratz returned.

Each board member expressed concerns for South Africa. Member Molly Political activist John Gardner rallies students against the Board's approval of a paid leave to South Africa for Placement Specialist Christopher Kratz.

Stewart explained that the stands behind the decision of the paid leave. "The program for which Kratz is participating is a cultural exchange, and to support it would be a form of censorship."

Board members commended those citizens and students who voiced their concerns and students who became a learning experience for us all," stated Barbara Burton.

A key element in Harper College's commitment to academic excellence is the personal and professional standard of excellence brought to the classroom by the exceptional members of our faculty," said Barbara Burton, board of trustees chairperson.

She spoke in honor of Harper's Associate Professor of Adult Educational Development Pat Mulcrone, who was awarded the 1989 Distinguished Faculty Award at the May 21 graduation ceremony.

"I was honored to receive the award," said Mulcrone.

The award is given to the faculty member who has given the most respected contribution to the educational experience.

The award is determined by a faculty committee, who recommends faculty members to the Board of Trustees. The board then makes the final decision.

"I am currently working on my dissertation to complete my doctorate and plan to continue to offer many services to benefit the Harper College community," said Mulcrone.

"Pat Mulcrone is commended by all who know and work with her as an outstanding contributor to the excellence of Harper College; she truly deserves this award," stated Burton.

Observatory update

Groundbreaking for Harper's observatory is scheduled for July 20. This date marks the 20th anniversary of the Apollo 11 landing on the moon. Harper's Board of Trustees finalized plans at the May 23 meeting.

Paul Seipen, professor of astronomy said, "The project is alive and well."

Speech instructor to study in Shanghai

Dorcas DeMata Geiger, a part-time speech instructor, has been selected to study Chinese theatre this summer at the Shanghai Drama Institute. She is one of twelve people selected in the United States and the only one from the Chicago area.

The six-week program represents the first opportunity Americans have had to study theatre "at this level," said DeMata-Geiger.

Harper receives Laser-Jet Printers

Harper has received two Hewlett-Packard Laser-Jet Printers from the Zurich-American Insurance Foundation.

The gift, given to the Administrative Services Department, will enable students to learn automated skills and desktop publishing.

Engineering students challenged

Professor Michael W. Carroll challenged his Introduction to Engineering class to beat him in a race. The student that succeeded would receive an automatic A for the class.

Students had to design and construct a vehicle of soft wood and glue capable of carrying a bag of sand down a 14 foot track without spilling.

The result? Carroll's vehicle—undefeated.

Students benefit from campus jobs

By Phyllis Benson
Staff Writer

Most of the 22,000 students who attend Harper College work either full or part-time. And for nearly 300 of them, their employer is Harper itself.

Student aides who work on campus have a choice of positions ranging from clerical work to laboratory technicians.

Director of Financial Aid Frank Solano, whose office oversees the student aide program, completes a financial aid questionnaire for the State of Illinois annually that includes statistics on the program.

Solano said that the types of positions available to students are categorized into three classes.

Class I positions, such as general clerical work, require no skill or prior experience and starting pay is $4.10 per hour.

Class II positions, such as laboratory and micro-computer aides, require some skill and previous experience. Pay starts at $4.50 per hour.

Class III positions, such as lifeguards, require more skill and experience. Starting pay is $5.00 per hour.

"Each department allows for an automatic raise of $2.25 per hour per semester," Solano said. "A student who starts in a Class I position at $4.00 per hour, can, in four semesters, work up to $5.00 per hour. Class II can work up to $5.50 and Class III up to $6.00," added Solano.

Each department allocates funds for student aides from their budget and hires their own aides.

"The expenses for 1988-1989 through April were $304,000 and expected expenses through the end of June will total $350,000," Solano said. Any departmental changes in class are submitted to the Financial Aid Office for approval.

Student aides can find more than wages while working at Harper—convenience and flexible schedules.

Scott Maurer, a full-time student who plans to go on to a four-year institution to study actuarial science, works in the Career Planning Center and Placement Office.

"I like working here because it's not overly busy, you're not overworked," explained Fransen.

"There is always work to do. People think that if you work in a library you have time to do your homework. That's not the case."

Fransen also spends about three hours each week tutoring in biology and chemistry, but he especially likes the flexibility the LRC offers. "If you have a test and can't come in," he said, "they're real good about it. It's been a really nice availability and a nice experience working here."

Library Assistant I Bonnie Peebles said that working at the

"It's very convenient," Maurer said. "Everyone is really friendly. I like being able to work with people."

"I have another job, too, but since I'm on campus it's a lot easier to stay in one place."

Diane Eaves is also a full-time student and works with Maurer in the Placement Office. The convenience of working on campus is what prompted her to apply for a student aide position.

"I couldn't work many hours with a major in engineering," Eaves said. "I'm here all the time anyway."

Employers who work with student aides find their service invaluable.

"It's wonderful having aides here," said Laurie Miller, the Placement Office secretary. "We would be hard pressed to do our job without them."

Tom Fransen, who leaves in August to attend the University of Illinois-Champaign Medical School, works in the Learning Resource Center.

Fransen described his former job as a junior high school science teacher, as "a combat zone." He finds working in the LRC much more calming.

"I like working here because it's not overly busy, you're not overworked," explained Fransen.

"There is always work to do. People think that if you work in a library you have time to do your homework. That's not the case."

Fransen also spends about three hours each week tutoring in biology and chemistry, but he especially likes the flexibility the LRC offers. "If you have a test and can't come in," he said, "they're real good about it. It's been a really nice availability and a nice experience working here."

Library Assistant I Bonnie Peebles said that working at the LRC is beneficial to both the students and the LRC.

"A campus job supplies the student with an income and can offer a schedule that outside employers cannot provide," she said.

"We really try and work around school. When a student has a test or finals and can't come in, we understand."

The LRC, which hires between six and eight students each semester, looks for students who can master the Library of Congress system.

"There are no set routines," Peebles said. "The students do whatever job needs to be done that day, whether it be shelving books, pulling carts or waiting on customers."

"We need to keep the system running with the flow of the day. Sometimes we have 200 students in here."

The LRC is also one of many departments that hires handicapped students. Michael Trippiedi, who is deaf, is a full-time student and a member of the Student Senate. He is taking courses in order to transfer and major in history.

Trippiedi began working at the LRC this past spring. "What I like about working here," he said, "is that I don't have to hurry. I can take my time."

Peebles, who uses sign language to communicate with Trippiedi, enjoys having him work as the LRC. "He cannot wait on the customers at the desk," she said, "but there are many, many other things he can do, like shelving and pulling carts."

Student aides may work a maximum of 20 hours per week on campus during the semester. They must be enrolled for at least six semester hours during the fall and spring and three semester hours during the summer.

Advertisements for student aide positions are usually posted outside the departments hiring or students may be referred by a counselor or the Financial Aid department.

The fetal stage, the second stage of growth, begins the ninth week after conception. Growth and development now continue until the person passes through adolescence.

Your article seems to say (statement not clear) the Supreme Court allows abortion during the first trimester only. Roe vs. Wade allows the states to regulate abortions after the first trimester. State control of abortion is an issue in the present case before the court.

Reading your article, I get the impression you would expect to find a pool of fluids (protoplasm) if you abort a fetus at thirteen weeks. Actually, you would find an easily identifiable human fetus with head, heart, limbs, and functioning organs.

My reason for responding your article is this: unless you base your argument on the facts, the abortion debate will continue forever. It would help if we stopped talking about a fetus being an "undifferentiated mass of protoplasm" until mid-pregnancy. Editor-in-chief reflects on first year

By Tati Vaughn
Editor-in-Chief

Four years ago, if someone had told me I would be a Harper student (much less Editor-in-Chief of the Harbinger), I would never have believed them.

I have to admit that I was not at all happy when my scholarship didn't materialize, and I would be attending a community college.

At the time, Harper didn't seem like a real college. How could I possibly get the same education, freedom, or fun as at a four-year university? As far as I was concerned, Harper was just a glorified high school.

The first few weeks here, I spent my time regretting the fact that my friends were away in exciting places like Urbana or DeKalb, while I was stuck on Palatine. I remember feeling lonely and depressed, because I really didn't know anyone.

After two weeks, I decided to quit pouting and make the best of things. My first step was to make an appointment with the speech team coach. (After competing for four years in high school, I figured that joining the team would make me feel a little more at home.)

Magically and overnight, things did not get better, because that just wasn't the way it worked. I did, however, make many close friends, and my attitude started to improve.

During high school everyone constantly hears the phrase "get involved," and by now, everyone's pretty sick of hearing it. Some sound advice is, however, that over-used phrase.

Becoming involved in an activity can help you meet people with common interests and give you practical experience in a field. Also, prospective employers look at an applicant's experience with student activities.

Harper has many clubs and organizations that appeal to different special interests. For a listing of these, see the back page of this special section. If you can't find something that appeals to you, come to the Harbinger, we can always use the help.

I also learned in my first few months that Harper is a real college. The classes are just as informative and challenging as the classes at a four-year school. Harper even has benefits over the big universities. Because of the smaller class sizes, Harper's instructors are more readily available for extra help.

Making the move to college can be nerve-racking or scary experience. I remember feeling like there was so much I didn't know. Phrases like "Writing Center," "IRC," or "DAWN" might as well have been Greek. This is the main reason that Taty and I decided to put together this special section.

We hope to give you information about some of the services and organizations on campus. Of course, more services are available than we could possibly fit in a four-page section, but this should highlight some of them. The services are listed in your Student Handbook, or you can get more information from the Center for New Students, the Information Booth in Building A or ask any other student.

Welcome to Harper College. The Harbinger staff would like to wish you good luck, and invite you to step by and see what we're all about.

Know when to drop a class. If you've fallen behind and have begun to fail, a seminar can help you reassess your course load.

If you ask a question and the answer is no, rephrase the question.

Introduce yourself to the person who has no other side of you in a class. Chances are that you'll be lucky as you are. Also, get their phone numbers in case if you need an assignment or have a question.

Ask teachers of the writing center for help right away. Don't feel lost for more than one day.

Have a good attitude. Your experience is as good as an aid as you make it.

Don't say it, write it. Writing is powerful and conveys more thought.

Select your courses based on the instructor, ask other students like yourself for recommendations.

Never lend your notes to anyone, go with them to make a photocopy.

Never leave books or valuables unattended. People will steal them!

Johnny B: Unleashed and live

By Jamie Beroun
Staff Writer

Did you really expect the Johnny and the Leisure Suits concert to be anything less than spectacular?

The show, starring the nutty Jonathon Brandmeier, morning DJ on the LTOP FM 98/AM 1000, had it all: rock n' roll, blues, comedy, a polka party and a beer chugging contest.

Johnny B had the a drink in his back pocket from the world go. Poplar Creek was wall to wall with loyal WLLP listeners howling with approval.

This extravaganza was as entertaining as the video tape of last year's performance also at Poplar Creek. It even had a few extra surprises.

The 12 member band played all the funny favorites, including Party Animals, When Friday Comes, You Won't See Me On MTV, How Am I Gonna Be a Dad, Neesh in My Mind and the raucous Moo-Moo Song.

The highlight was when the stage became the "Lovedate Lounge," the blues portion of the evening.

Special guest guitarist Lonnie Brooks jammed with morning news man Barry Kilman on the harmonica. Johnny and Barry teamed for a duet that was written about themselves and all the fun they've had in Chicago nights.

Chicago Bear Tom Thayer was the guest bartender at the Lovedate Lounge. He challenged Johnny to a beer chugging contest and won. Bear Mike Tomcrank was also on hand.

The show rolled on with How How How, Malin Loe in the Adlers and Country Music Star.

Another highlight was the performance of A Good Start by Woman, the handsomest song Jimmy "Blad" Weiser and Preakna Nian played the bride and groom in The Wedding of the Century.

The encore was, well...eray. Johnny was as pumped up as he was ten songs ago. They performed Prince's Let's Go Crazy, followed by the legendary We're All Crazy in Chicago. Johnny left the crowd in awe. He exited, suspended in mid air, screaming, "I love you, Chicago!"

Has off to the Leisure Suits Band. Congratulations to the two drummers, the trumpet section, the fiddler and the two sexy back up singers for a fine performance. Special credit should be given to the "Homo Dancers." They were four guys Johnny pulled from the front row just so they could share the stage and go nuts.

My thumbs are up for Johnny and the Leisure Suits for a fantastic evening of entertainment and a job well done. Yeah, baby!!!

Simple Minds: artistic over kill?

By Lisa Aant
Entertainment Editor

Many artists, because of fame and fortune, lose what was supposedly dear and new to their hearts. Recently band after band comes under the chopping block for copying attitudes, going pop or selling out to commercialism.

R.E.M. lost many fans for criticizing their audiences at concerts. U2's Rattle and Hum combined the very worst of American pop and drowned out The Edge's unique guitar style. Fine Young Cannibals sold out to top 40, and I wish George Michael would just give Mf a break. Don't despise some artists' reason true-to-the-fair as well as to themselves.

Simple Minds' latest album, Street Fighting Years, entered the charts at spot number 40 in the States, they deserve better.

The general tone and feel of the album is very melodic, sometimes melodramatic. This is not a dance party-type thing. Listen to it in the heart of the night or any other lonely time.

The title track, Street Fighting Years, is the wildest song, and unfortunately without a catchy tune, the composition is drab. The song sets the tone for the entire, late 1980s, this imagery is not many fans' and it's not. At times it's hard to tell where one song ends and the next begins. The only song in the first side that doesn't have a fade is the last.

The second side starts with a really strong Kiss It In. This track could be powerful, but it lacks driving energy, turning up the bass solves the problem.

The rest of the second side develops further. Mandela Day has some good energy, as well as a strong message. Tellus (I told you the best song on the album and should be the last, but they add a bridge, cover up Peter Gabriel's hole).

The album is a warm, like a story, an introduction, rising action, and a climax (which should have culminated with Belief Child). The music is emotional but it lacks depth. Without real raw energy, it almost sounds processed. The reason is painfully obvious: it was worked to death. Simple Minds was in the studio for an entire year from March of 83 to March of 84. The tapes are too perfect, the songs are always at the right level, and the false endings are just long enough to be confusing.

Simple Minds wanted this to be a work of art. They succeeded but need to learn when to walk away from their creation and let the music speak for itself. Every artist learns of the evils of touching up a piece too much. Simple Minds will also learn. This is a damn good album, but it is good despite the extra studio time, not because of it.

By Scott Seft
Staff Writer

When the summer heat becomes unbearable and freedom gets to you, you have an option to see some quality entertainment on the silver screen. This summer looks to be one of promise in the cinematic industry. It also looks to be the summer for sequels.

Starting off this sequel onslaught is Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade. Indy (Harrison Ford) returns to delight audiences once again in his quest for the legendary Holy Grail. This time, however, he has the help of his father Dr. Henry Jones (Sean Connery). This particular pair, combined with the ever-popular story line of Indiana Jones, should make the final chapter of this saga a box office smash.

Ghostbusters II, the sequel to the 1984 hit Ghostbusters, reunites a quality team for comedic success. Bill Murray, Dan Aykroyd, Harold Ramis and Sigourney Weaver all return under the direction of Ivan Reitman. Murray was a little wary over returning, in fear that Columbia Pictures just wanted a fast buck and might put out a schlocky sequel. The current production vows to be a summer success.

Karate Kid III will appear this summer in a theater near you. Both Noryuki "Pat" Morita and Ralph Macchio will be returning in hope that "Daniel" is still very popular and uplifting.

Danny Glover and Mel Gibson team again for Lethal Weapon II. The new action-comedy depicts the egotistical, nonconventional form of law enforcement that made the first one a winner.

Finally, to top off my list of the summer sequels is the returning team of the starship Enterprise in Star Trek V: The Final Frontier. Leonard Nimoy, William Shatner, DeForest Kelley and James Doohan encounter a renegade Vulcan who overtakes the Enterprise to attempt something that has never been done before. He is going to set a course for the center of the galaxy. This may be the last of the Star Trek saga, but it certainly looks like it won't pale by comparison.

If you are feeling independently wealthy and have nothing to do, why not look into a sequel? There is something for everyone.

Anyone interested in having their bands and gigs listed is encouraged to submit information to the Harbinger. Take a look at Harper sports ...

By Lou Nares
Sports Editor

Whether it's the wide range of excellent academic programs that offer quality education at a low cost or the beautiful campus surroundings that feature fine educational and athletic facilities, the student-athlete decides to attend Harper College for many different reasons.

The school's intercollegiate athletic program offers a high level of competition at local, state and national levels within the structures of the North Central Community College Conference of Illinois (NCC) and the National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA).

Many athletes have earned scholarships to four-year colleges and universities throughout the United States through recognition during NCAA competition.

Some of the athletes who earned scholarships this past year include 15 football players headed by quarterback Al Snyder (Lehigh) and defensive tackle Lee Wall (Illinois), women's basketball player Pascale O'Donoghue (Quincy), wrestler Mark Cicch (Wisconsin-Oshkosh), men's basketball player Joe Passi (Tulane), and women's track & field members Anne Thayer and Lori Wilkins (Wisconsin-Parkside), and Volleyball Player

Janice Word (Wisconsin-Parkside).

In order to participate in sports, one must be passing 12 credit hours per semester with at least an 1.75 grade point average. In most cases, tryouts are based on the amount of people turning out and availability of uniforms and equipment.

For further information on athletics contact the Physical Education, Athletics and Recreation (PEAR) at 397-3000, ext. 2466 or visit the PEAR office located in Building M. For now, here's a look at what each Harper team accomplished in past years.

Note: Harper College did not field a Golf team from 1985-1988 and that the school competed in the Illinois Junior College Conference (IJCC) from 1968-1970 and in the Skyway Conference from 1970-73.

Kastner era begins

New coach eager to begin rebuilding

By Lou Nauer
Sports Editor

Once again, the St. Viator flavor returns to the Harper-Men's basketball bench.

This time, it will be in the shape of former Lion basketball A-ha coach Paul Kastner, an Athletic Director, Head Boys Basketball, and Assistant Basketball Coach at Buckley-Loda High School, Buckley, Illinois for the past four years.

Kastner, 32, was officially named to the post June 1st. He replaces longtime St. Viator coach Bill Probst, who resigned during spring break after a two-year hiatus.

Also came the announcement of Duane Sell as assistant coach. Sell, 44, has been a chemistry professor at Harper for the past 13 years.

Athletic Director Roger Bechold said that Kastner's hiring came after a long and tedious selection process that began in April.

"We had 16 candidates formally apply for the job. After talking to six of those, we narrowed it down to three. Then we decided on Paul."

One of the qualities that impressed Bechold about Kastner was his positivism with the student-athlete.

"He's young, enthusiastic and he works hard. He wants to build a strong basketball program here," said Bechold, a former longtime Harper head coach himself.

Kastner's background in both athletics and coaching is one of great length. At St. Viator, he was a two-time All Area and All Suburban Catholic Conference selection in both basketball and baseball.

Concentrating on baseball, he went on to Tripp College in River Grove where he earned NaIC Player of the Year honors in 1976.

From there it was on to Eastern Illinois University in Charleston where he completed his athletic career by pitching for the Panthers baseball squad. It was also there that he began his coaching career by serving as a graduate assistant coach to the team in 1981.

He took his first basketball coaching job as an assistant at Sullivan High School in Sullivan, Illinois from 1983 to 1985. During that time, he also took an assistant baseball coaching job at Mattoon High School, Mattoon, Illinois in the spring of '85.

Then it was on to Buckley-Loda where he built a reputable basketball program in just a mere four years. He had a 61-3 record culminating with a 20-8 record and a Class A Regional Title last winter.

In addition, Kastner served as assistant coach for the Blue-Gray Region during last summer's Prairie State Games. He also worked as a coach for Team Clumps at Eastern Illinois (1984 & 1986), and at Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville (1982-1983).

At Buckley-Loda, his program boasted a couple of superstars from last year's team in All-State guard Brian Martin, who signed a letter of intent with Illinois Wesleyan University, and forward Ty Harwigier, who signed with Danville Community College.

It also boasted center forward Chad Hall, a 1988 Buckley-Loda graduate and a member of last year's Harper Basketball squad.

The new coach, who had learned about the job through an article in the Daily Herald that his in-laws (Michael and Pat Costantino) had given him, is very happy to be returning home.

"I've always wanted to go back. My wife Peggy is a 1975 Buffalo Grove High School graduate."

He's looking forward to returning home, too, and the in-laws are excited because they'll get a chance to see their grandchildren more, says Tyler, age 6 and daughter Tasha, age 2.

Kastner said with a smile, "He's always happy because he'll be fulfilling his dream of being a college coach."

"I wish I were starting tomorrow. I can't wait to get going. I've always had the desire to coach (college) basketball. I can remember seeing the basketball team at Tripp work out while I was practicing basketball and I dreamed of being a (college) coach. Now, it's come true," Kastner said.

Kastner faces the chore of rebuilding a Harper program that hasn't had a winning season since its 20-5 sectional championship team of 1985.

"The only way to go is up," he says. "It's a challenge, but hard work will turn this thing around. I don't set time goals, I don't predict wins. My number one goal for any team I coach is to play as well as they can at their meeting a goal."

Kastner does admit that he does have a hard-nosed, intense reputation as a coach.

"I've been told that my voice carries. I get upset but not during games," he said. "I express myself during practice. If I see something that I don't like, I'll be the first one to point it out. But once the game starts, no time for the players to show what they've learned during practice."

One thing remains common between new coach Kastner and his predecessor Probst is the common philosophy of defense.

"Basically, I believe in pressure defense. I like to dictate what the other team does. What we do best is get people to the spots where they can do well," Kastner said.

A big concern for both Bechold and Kastner is recruiting.

"We need for him to go forward and start recruiting because the level of talent has improved so much in our conference," Bechold said.

"I've gone up here each winter and I've seen some of the area teams. I've seen St. Viator, Wheeling, and Schaumburg a lot, so I've gained a feel for the area."

Plus, I've seen a couple of my players being recruited. Basically, I've learned a lot about showing a that you really want them and that you want them to feel comfortable with academics and athletics," Kastner replied.

According to Bechold, Assistant Coach Sell gives stability the position has never had before.

"Usually, the assistant coach was someone who's outside of Harper. With Duane, we'll have a contact person on campus that'll help the players out when Paul's not there. We think it's very beneficial."

Bechold added that, "He's very good working with students, he's dedicated and hard-working, and he already talked with IR area players about attending Harper."

Sell played basketball at Huntington College, Huntington, Indiana and coached for three years at Northview Public Schools in Grand Rapids, Michigan.

"I'm delighted about the job. I'm looking forward to working with Paul," the new assistant said.

All in all, Bechold feels confident about Kastner's ability to get the job done.

"I'm hoping that we're competitive. We can do well, but its gonna take time to build a successful program in the league that we're in."

Track team runs the distance

All-American Hollinsworth leads the pack

By Lou Nauer
Sports Editor

The Men's and Women's Track & Field teams completed a successful 1989 campaign as the women earned four Top Ten finishes and the men placed once in the Top 15 at the NCA National Championships last month in Odessa, Texas.

In addition, Women's Head Coach Rene Zettler was nominated for NCA National Coach of the Year honors.

Plus, Heptathlete Nikki Hollinsworth may have earned an at-large berth in The Athletic Congress Junior Olympics in Cleveland later this month. Hollinsworth, a freshman, set four personal records, placing sixth in the event 14,200 in 10 minutes, 40 seconds, earning All American honors. Her points total fell nine points short of automatically qualifying for the event.

Hollinsworth, an Indianapolis native also raced in All-American honors in the 400 meter hurdles (64.34, Fifth Place).

Fellow heptathlete Michelle Maxwell joined Hollinsworth among the Top Ten finishers in the event by placing ninth. Pam Weider rounded out the Top Ten Brigade with a ninth place finish in the 1500 meters.

Everything went just great. It was a good way to end the season. Zettler said. The only Men's representative, Hanses Threder, ran a 14.5 second mile, with a placing 15th.

"Not bad," an impressive Road Runner, Hans Threder said. It was a very hard race. I think it's a record for the team.

Box office implements TicketMaster

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-chief

Beginning the first week of classes, the Harper Box Office will become a TicketMaster outlet. In addition to selling the tickets on the TicketMaster system, all of Harper's events will be for sale through TicketMaster.

Kevin Geiger, Harper's Box Office Manager, feels that the addition of TicketMaster will benefit the Harper community in many ways. Harper's TicketMaster system will provide computer framing for box office student aides, cut down on work in the box office, and allow Harper more freedom to set up last minute shows.

The Harper Box Office sells approximately 20,000 tickets a year, but Geiger expects the new system to sell about 15,000 extra tickets.

The possibility of installing the system was originally discussed by Geiger and Director of Student Activities Jeanne Pankam during the spring semester of last year. "We started talking about it when Sportmart quit carrying TicketMaster. Harper students had to go quite a way to get tickets. This way, they have a close location," commented Geiger.

The Harper Box Office will be expanding its hours to accommodate the new system. The new hours are Monday through Thursday 10 am to 7 pm, Friday 10 am to 4:30 pm, and Saturday 10 am to 1 pm. For more information about the box office or its services, call 397-3000, ext. 2547.

"Measles is an epidemic in our own neighborhood," said Health Service Nurse Becky Santeler.

To date, 172 cases of measles have been reported to the Cook County Department of Public Health (CCDPH). "Reports of measles are expected to peak this month," said Santeler.

The best way to prevent its spread is to be immunized. The CCDPH recommends the following people be immunized as soon as possible:

1. Anyone between 15 months and 12 years of age, who has never received an immunization or was immunized before 1970.
2. Children, six months old through 14 months, who have had contact with someone with measles.

Harper-Triton agreement

Harper College and Triton College in River Grove teamed up this June in a cooperative agreement that leaves residents of both districts winners.

The agreement allows residents of Harper's district to enroll in specified programs offered by Triton. Harper students will be charged Triton's in-district rate, rather than paying out-of-district tuition. In return, Triton district residents can enroll in Harper's programs for Harper in-district tuition.

This agreement expands both communities' accessibility to a number of additional programs in the area at the most reasonable cost. Programs included in the agreement allow students to earn certificates or associate in applied science degrees.

Harper district residents can receive admission to Triton's programs in Automotive Technology, Basic Addiction Counseling, Dental Laboratory Technology, Diesel Technology, Laser Electro-optic, Machine repair Specialist, Magnet Resonance Imaging, Ophthalmic Technician, Photo Offset, Radiologic Technology, and Respiratory Care.

Triton's fall semester begins September 6. Class sizes are limited, and each program has specific admission requirements. For more information, including admission and registration details, call Harper at 397-3000, ext. 2502 or Triton at 456-0300, ext. 725.

Rene LeBeau, Harper's loss gone...but not forgotten

By Alisa Chinlund
Features Editor

The Harper community lost its beloved Pompon/Cheerleading Advisor Rene LeBeau, when United Airlines Flight 232 crashed on July 19 in Sioux City, Iowa on route from Denver, Colorado to Chicago.

LeBeau, one of eleven crew members, died when the DC10

"She had such a vibrant presence about herself"

-- Jeanne Panknin

crash landed and burst into flames.

During the '88/89 school year, LeBeau was the advisor to the pompon and cheerleading squads. She joined United Airlines as a flight attendant about seven months ago, yet she still found time for her duties to both squads.

LeBeau's love for pompon and cheerleading squads evolved when she was a fifth-grader and joined the cheerleading squad. She coached the Schaumburg Park District's pompon squad when she was a junior in high school.

Several years later, LeBeau joined the Harper College pompon squad. The second year she was captain. She studied dance for nine years, and later received her B.A. from Northern Illinois University majoring in dance performance in theater.

LeBeau's supervisor at Harper College was Student Activities Director Jeanne Panknin. "It's hard to believe that Rene is gone," said Panknin. "She had such a vibrant presence about herself. We will really miss her."

As advisor to the squads, LeBeau organized tryouts, helped the squads members with routines at practices, ordered uniforms, trained the squads at summer clinics, handled travel arrangements for events and carried out administrative duties.

"She was a vibrant person, coach and a good friend," said Suzanne Reid, captain of the pompon squad. "You couldn't know her and not like her. She was always happy. She had a positive outlook. She always looked for the good in things. No one can replace her. I keep expecting to see her come back. I can't believe she's gone."

Al Zauner, captain of the cheerleading squad also remembered LeBeau. "She was fun, as-servive, down-to-earth and a good friend. It was easy to relate to her. We will all miss her. She's going to be hard to replace."

Letters to the Editor

Public Issues and Policy

There seems to be more attention given to social justice issues on campus in recent months. The substance of these issues is not easy to deal with, in part because they involve formation of consensus. Coming up with a language to talk about rights is never easy.

A right is a moral claim that all humans have to allow them to reach some responsible end in society. Rights are based on principles that apply intrinsically and universally to all persons, not a particular group. When principles remain unarticulated or unclear, so will be the consensus of the rights of individuals in society and any claim of the common good.

My thanks to all those who have taken the time to express their views in the Harbinger, and to the newspaper for giving these issues time and space. I hope the nature of serious writing included here is something we can hope to see more of in future issues.

One always needs to keep hope throughout the struggle. The desire for a just resolution for all is a unique catalyst. It provides the courage and determination needed to move the dialogue from heat to light.

Dennis Darby

Thanks, Mr. Lucas, from Lisa

College students usually feel a unique loyalty to each other by virtue of a common experience. This, too, can be said about college faculty. Rarely do we fight, strenuously fight, about much of anything. Taught to be passive in order to absorb and learn, students sit quietly to let the teacher teach. We are passive, we defer all responsibility to the instructor. We do not question his teaching methods or his opinions.

Unfortunately, this passivity carries beyond the classroom in our everyday lives. We defer all authority without thought to the legitimacy this authority does or does not possess. We do not challenge the system because of apathy or fear of retaliation. We do not explore possibilities. Like a mirror, we reflect the information temporarily stored on the surface, instead of learning for ourselves.

Last semester some unusual things happened. Several men from the Republic of South Africa visited our campus and someone from our campus visited South Africa. The students as well as the faculty debated the evils of that country's policy of Apartheid. Some became bitterly divided. The one bit of sane discussion between opposing sides came when a group of students met with the South Africans. I was fortunate to have participated.

During the meeting, many issues were discussed in a calm and honest manner. While the position of the students changed very little, and the position of the South Africans changed very little, we do now see the opposition's stand more clearly. I do not agree with them, but I see they are human. They are not monsters brandishing whips and chains, but they have made mistakes and must now pay for them.

This meeting did not spontaneously happen on its own. Mr. John Lucas, the Director of Planning and Research, was the key in planning and organizing the discussion. On behalf of John Strain, and for myself, I would like to thank Mr. Lucas for providing more from the discussion than any book, class, or newspaper could have taught me. Thank you, Mr. Lucas.

Lisa Aust

Editorial Bits and Pieces

Kudos to the Program Board and Institutional Communications for finding a compromise on which everyone could agree. After the conflict over the title of "Eat Me Night," the two groups reached a decision that was in the best interests of both parties. (So much for this week's editorial.) Good luck with "Mastication Madness!"

Kudos to the Technology, Mathematics, and Physical Science Division for arranging Late Night With Neptune. The program, which consists of a guest speaker and live coverage from the Voyager II, promises to be interesting and educational for all who attend.

Kudos to the Center for New Students, the Program Board and everyone who helped make the Freshman Experience such a great success. Congratulations on a job well done!

Kudos to Kevin Geiger and Jeanne Panknin for arranging Harper's new TicketMaster system. The added convenience will be appreciated by both students and faculty.

Harper's campus seems to consist of a silent majority and a vocal minority. Kudos to those few students who had the courage to go against the majority and express their views on recent campus issues. The Harbinger hopes to see more students with the individuality to take action on their beliefs.

It seems like the cafeteria is taking advantage of its monopoly on on-campus food services. Perhaps they should remember that they're catering to college students who are on limited budgets.

Focus on faculty

Welcome

Over a dozen faculty were hired to replace employees who retired or requested a leave of absence. Several part-time faculty were promoted to full-time status.

This addition increases the ratio of full-time to part-time faculty and begins to focus on a concern expressed by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools in its 1987 report.

Meet Harper's new full-time faculty, as they join the thousands of strangers on campus this week. (More faculty members will be featured next week.)

Summer outdoor concert onslaught

By Jamie Breeson
Staff Writer

This summer, Alpine Valley and Poplar Creek music theaters were booked solid with some of the hottest bands of the past two decades.

The World Series of Rock, featuring Poison, White Lion, Tesla, Winger and The Bullet Boys, kicked off this summer's events.

Tesla was the standout of hard and loud play by performing Hang Tough and No Way Out from their current album as well as past hits including Little Sisti and Wander Day Cowboy.

One highlight was when White Lion dedicated their song Cry Freedom, from the big Game LP, to the students in China who are fighting for democracy.

Winger didn't cease to sway every woman at Alpine. Their hit Wagon Wheel was played by the Jimi Hendrix classic Purple Haze. They also played Spenters and Madeline.

Despite technical problems, Poison still played well. I enjoyed some of the music, but they didn't seem like they wanted to be there. They were playing just to finish.

Rolling into the month of June was The Steve Miller Band, and a fantastic show. Miller, by himself in the beginning, sang the mega-classic Space Cowboy.

The band joined Miller, and they played all the favorites, including Jungle Love, Take the Money and Run, Rickie Me, The Joker and Fly Like an Eagle.

After a break, the band returned for an unforgettable encore, which included Sungtown and Jet Airliner. The jam-packed Poplar Creek audience couldn't wait.

Metallica returned to Chicago for two sold-out shows that were as heavy, fast and powerful as ever. They played every show as if it were their last. Thumbs up for their return.

My treat for the month of August was Don Henley with special guests Edie Brickell and New Bohemians. It was a solid performance on both sides.

Hailing from Dallas, New Bohemians, opened with their smash hit What I Am.

Henley, the ex-Eagle, is on tour in support of his third solo album of this decade. The end of the 1980s, from it they played New York Minute, Heart of the Matter and the title song.

He covered his previous album, Building the Perfect

Beast, including Sunset Grill, Boys of Summer. All She Wants to do is Dance and the title song. They also played the classic Dirty Laundry.

Henley took control of the drums, and the band joined him to flawlessly play the Eagles' Hotel California and Life on the Fast Lane. After the two songs, Henley said, "I accept no substitutes."

For the final song of the evening he sang the legendary Desperado, as only Henley can. He left the Poplar Creek audience speechless.

Thumbs up for the band, two drummers, three backup singers, a keyboardist and two perfect guitarists.

I enjoyed every show that I saw this summer. My thumbs are up for all of them. Now I am ready for the onslaught of indoor concerts to come.

Fun Program

The Program Board has lined up great things for fall entertainment, most of them for free!

September 6, the capella group Regency will give a free concert in Bldg. A.

The Ice Cream Social on September 11 will feature Johnny B. Moore at no charge.

A terrific week of enlightening entertainment will be presented October 21 - 27, International Week, will present talent from many diverse countries and cultures.

Do the racist thing?

By Lisa Aust
Entertainment Editor

Let there be no doubt, Spike Lee is a very talented person. Perhaps, he even borders on genius. His grandeur comes not from without, but from within. His films give a unique glimpse into the heart of his thoughts, while being universal enough to compare with the thoughts of all mankind.

Lee exposes the truth. That truth can be a bit off beat at times, as with his first movie "She's Gotta Have It," but even then the viewer knows and sees the truth of the film mirrored in real life.

Spike's latest movie, "Do the Right Thing," is a testament to our society. Once again he has exposed the truth, and as with all knowledge, some would oppress it.

All summer long critics have crucified and torn this movie apart. They point out the racism and hatred and they proclaim, "This movie is EVIL. This movie will incite riots. This movie will set race relations back years. Spike Lee has gone too far." It is interesting that most of these critics have been white men. It is also fitting that none of their predictions have come true.

This movie does not create racial tension. "Do the Right Thing" reflects existing tensions. It is a hot day in Bed-Stuy, tempers are short, and prejudice is long. No one in this film is perfect. No one.

Every good deed a person does is countered with something bad or irresponsible. A drunkard has a heart of gold. A benevolent old lady watches out for the neighbors, but she has a hard time conquering her own self righteousness. A mother on welfare who treats her own mother horribly, but she loves her son.

Mookie, the star, is a pillar of strength and tolerance. He is constantly in the middle of racial tension and somehow manages to calm everything down. He is the father of an illegitimate child, and he does not take care of him. He also gets the nod out of hand.

Who would judge these people? These people are human; they suffer; they give; they need; they love; and they hate.

We see our selves on screen. Are we capable of judging ourselves?

Cabaret Auditions

Auditions for the musical "Cabaret" will take place Wednesday, September 13 at 7:00 p.m. in 0175, and Saturday, September 16 at 1:00 p.m. in A139. Callbacks will be on Sunday, September 17 at 1:00 p.m. in the Theatre, 1143.

Auditions are open to all students, staff and community residents. Everyone auditioning will be asked to sing, dance and read. Those auditioning should prepare a song, preferably from the musical. An accompanist will be provided. Comfortable clothing should be worn for the dance audition. Copies of the "Cabaret" script are available on reserve in the Harper Library.

Production dates are November 10, 11, 12 and 17, 18, 19. Contact Director Mary Jo Willis, at 397-3000 ex 2248 or ex 2285 for questions about auditions. Students interested in crew work should contact Mike Brown at 397-3000 ex 2244.

Adam West : Batman(ia)

By Lisa Aust
Entertainment Editor

Holy Harper, Batman! The Program Board has done it again! Pulling off one of the greatest capers of the year, the Program Board presented an evening of bat-entertainment.

On Wednesday, June 21 millionaire philanthropist Bruce Wayne (a.k.a. Adam West) graced the Building 1 auditorium for a fun-filled bat-evening of magnificent bat-information.

OK, OK, no more bat hype. There is already enough bat hoopla to fill a very large cave. Bat frenzy has taken over the world. Even my favorite fast food joint has joined the bat band wagon. It has gotten to the point of contemplating self destruction in order to escape the media bat blitz.

Now enter Mr. West. He walks onto the stage a very casual man. Dressed in blue jeans and sneakers, he looks more like the guy at the end of the block than a caped crusader. Although he doesn't look as bat over 40, he recently turned a ripe old age of 60. In fact West looks better than he did way back when on the television show.

West is refreshingly open and honest. Speaking on life after Bat Man, he was very funny, and revealed some little known facts, such as how much those tighty nicks. He impressed the audience with his incredible ability to keep a straight face. His ability becomes more awe inspiring when trying to duplicate this feat for oneself. Just try to say, "Watch out, Robin! Don't touch that golden pussy. It's radioactive!" without smiling.

West also revealed his true gentlemanly spirit by treating the audience with respect, especially the younger members. He went out of his way to answer the kid's questions, before he even considered the adults.

His sole criticism of the new Bat Man movie was in how it related to children. He thought it is too violent for kids, but otherwise omitted the cynicism portrayed in the Rolling Stone interview.

After seeing him in person, the old Bat Man seems have not so mysteriously gained new meaning and life.

How better to enjoy our planet than by leaving it?

August 24 and 25 Harper will have LIVE TELEVISION coverage of the Voyager II rendezvous with Neptune via NASA satellite. A television will be set up in Building D room 149, from 5:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. for public viewing. This coverage will not be available on public television.

Friday night, August 25 at 7:30 p.m., in D149, a guest speaker, Mr. Larry Boyle from the National Space Society, will review and discuss the events of the Neptune encounter.

Telescopes will be set up near parking lot 7 to view the planet directly, weather permitting. The viewing sessions will be held both nights from 8:30 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. This is also the night for the future observatory.

Voyager was launched in 1977. It will pass closest to the planet on Thursday, and then it will hurt out into deep space. NASA is hopeful that Voyager's power supply will last enough years to transmit information about the edge of the solar system.

For more information on Late Night With Neptune, call the Technology, Mathematics, and Physical Science Division at 397-3000 ext. 2374.

Summer Record Bonanza

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

The Cure Disintegration (Elektra)

Robert Smith continues to ood himself with every release from the Cure. The new album Disintegration can be described as the music of dreams; the soundtrack of sleep. Most of the album's twelve tracks are dreamy, not as much lyrically as musically.

Any fan who accused the Cure of "selling out" after 1987's Kiss Me, Kiss Me, Kiss Me, can rescind their judgement after listening to Disintegration, which does not cater at all to the uninitiated. For some inexplicable reason, however, the LP is doing great on the charts, and the Cure seem to have hit a new peak in popularity, considering their two nights at the Rosemont Horizon (August 31 and Sept. 1). More power to them...so far this is easily the best album of the year. For a full review see the May 11 1989 issue of the Harbinger. Rating out of 5: *****

Peter Gabriel-Passions (Virgin)

Subtitled Musica for The Last Temptation of Christ, this is basically the long-awaited soundtrack to the controversial Martin Scorsese motion picture, scored by Peter Gabriel. Gabriel's label, Virgin Records, saved themselves the potential of boycott from religious groups by promoting the album as the new product from Gabriel as opposed to the soundtracks of the film.

Instead of resorting to the usual musical cliches for religious film scores, such as bells and chimes, Gabriel has formulated a musical odyssey into the world of eastern music with help from guest musicians such as Shankar, Youssou N'Dour, and David Sancious.

Gabriel is becoming less predictable with every release. The excellence of this album proves Gabriel's golden touch with every musical style in which he dabbles. Rating out of 5: *****

Love And Rockets-Love And Rockets (Beggars Banquet)

Ever Murphy doesn't like to look at the charts these days. The members of Love And Rockets, Murphy's former bandmates from Bauhaus, have brought a single up to number 3 on the Billboard Hot 100 chart. So, since it is extremely atypical of the usual Love And Rockets fare. The song is good, and the album (their fourth) is good, but it's a bit disappointing when compared to the quality of their previous releases.

The wonderful harmony of the voices of David J and Daniel Ash is not utilized as much as it should be. More "empty" songs are on this album than on earlier L&R releases, but in this case it was a deliberate move on the band's part. The best track, Round For Hell, is an enjoyable rule on a ball board train on which "the devil himself was engineer". For a more complete review see the May 11 1989 issue of the Harbinger. Rating out of 5: *****

The Men They Couldn't Hang-Silvertones (Silvertones)

Silvertones is an impressive US debut from the British band The Men They Couldn't Hang. Their music is heavy with traditional Irish and Scottish flavor, complete with fiddle, penny whistle and harp.

The songs range from the hard-rocking Rosette to the slow and beautiful A Map of Women. Deserving praise are the lyrics, mostly by bandmember Paul Simmonds, and the production by Mick Glossop, who produced the album Friends by the Boldos. If you enjoy bands like Big Country or the Pogues, check out The Men They Couldn't Hang. You will probably find them hanging out on your turntable for awhile. Rating out of 5: *****

The Rainmakers-The Good News and the Bad News (Polygram)

The third album from the Rainmakers is, in a word, disappointing—in two words, VERY disappointing. The fault lies not in the band, who play as faultlessly as ever, but mainly in the production by well-known producer Jeff Glickman. The appeal of the Rainmakers was always in the ever-to-slightly off center music and lyrics. The intelligent but quirky lyrics are still in evidence, thanks in lead singer Bob Walkenhorst, but the music has little charm or personality.

The songs all blend into one another, without developing any kind of individuality, and the blame lies squarely on Glickman's shoulders. The Rainmakers should head back to former producer Terry Manning to regain their footing. The group will appear next month at the Park West for a WRRY budget show. The concert is highly recommended; unfortunately, the album is not. Rating out of 5: *****

Xymox-Twist of Shadows (Wing)

Formerly known as Clan of Xymox, the third LP from this band from Holland is much more accessible than their earlier releases. Xymox have abandoned their 4AD roots in favor of the possibility of greater popularity. The music still has a similar feel, but is a little more on the simplistic side than it has been in the past.

Fortunately, the complaint is a very slight one. Twist of Shadows is a marvelous collection of lush music, from the slow and moving Tonight to the dance club hit Obsession. Coupled with the fact that this album is easy to find at a very low price, this is one bargain not to be passed. Rating out of 5: *****

Local Band Listing

Anyone interested in having their bands and gigs listed is encouraged to submit information to the Harbinger. A brief biography, profile of the band and a list of dates, times and places the band will be playing should be included. There is no eligibility for listing. All applicants will receive equal consideration.

Corporate Achievers acquire business Formulator, Inc. run by Harper students

By Ed Wallace and Dan Piszczek

Formulator Incorporated, a dental supply company, moved its operations to the Harper College campus last April.

The company was donated to the Harper Foundation by Ron and Lynne Coleman. It is now being run by members of the Young Corporate Achievers, a business club on campus open to all Harper students. The foundation has allowed the students to manage the company free of faculty intervention.

Since taking control of Formulator's advertising department, I have coordinated a press conference and am currently working on a new catalog for Formulator. This has allowed me to develop a strong resume as well as give me a head start in the marketing aspect of the business world," stated Director of Advertising, Dan Piszczek. Students currently employed by Formulator include Edward Wallace, President, Anthony Gatica, Executive Vice President, John Fallabee, Vice President of Marketing, Jeff Biesinger, Vice President of Purchasing, Dan Piszczek, Director of Advertising, and Reggie Dulaka and Paul Hoy, Associate Directors of Advertising.

Other students who recently graduated from Harper, but were instrumental in Formulator's initial success are Don Grant, Janice Ward, Roy Krugler, and John DeNovi. With these departures, Formulator's is left with openings in sales, accounting, and research and development.

This is an exceptional opportunity for students at Harper. It allows them to apply the knowledge gained from the classroom to problems faced in the business world," commented Wallace.

Any student interested in participating in the project should call 937-3888 ext. 2970, or stop by the company's office, room 1240c.

WHCM seeks DJ's

WHCM, the Harper College radio station is a student-run organization that broadcasts throughout Building A and over cable. Each student that participates is given a two-hour radio show one day a week.

The station provides opportunities to learn about the radio business, have fun, and meet new people.

WHCM staff members must be Harper students with three or more credit hours.

Any student who is interested in joining the radio staff should come to room A130c and visit the station, or contact Diana Dickson at 937-3888 ext. 2388.

After lunch the group will proceed in Springfield to tour the Capitol, the Old State Capitol, Lincoln's home, Lincoln's Tomb, and the Illinois Vietnam Memorial. The day will end with a shagbaked dinner.

Women's tennis team aims for nationals

By Eric Bingham
Sports Editor

Last year, Harper's women's tennis team missed going to nationals by one-half point in a disappointing third-place finish at regionals. This season, third-year coach Kathy Chamberlain doesn't want to settle for less than a national berth.

"My goal is to finish at the top of the conference again," said Chamberlain, a former tennis coach at Fremd High School for 10 years. The Lady Hawks took second in the North Central Community College Conference (NCC) behind perennial power Illinois Valley (IV).

"The other goal I have this year is to qualify for nationals," she added.

Needing to place first or second in regionals, Harper finished third behind Illinois Valley and College of DuPage.

Achieving those goals could be a challenge for Chamberlain, as she is confronted with the loss of four key players to graduation. Included in that group is last year's first singles player Cheryl Pizereck, who only lost one match last year. She has since moved to Eastern Illinois University on a tennis scholarship.

Despite the loss from last year's squad, Chamberlain will have the services of one returner, Beth Kelly.

Kelly was the Lady Hawks fourth singles and second doubles player last year.

"She's a line player," Chamberlain commented. "I'm hoping, being the only sophomore, that she provides the leadership that experienced players usually do."

Supporting Kelly this year will be two key prospects, Lisa Berg and Amy Ashley. Berg played first singles for Schaumburg High School, while Ashley did the same for Elk Grove High School.

"I'm real pleased," Chamberlain said of this year's recruiting. "I had 15 girls show interest and can only play six. My first year here I only had three girls come out, so I had to go out and dig people up."

"I'm still encouraging girls interested in the tennis program, that weren't aware of when practices started, to come and see me about getting started."

With the personnel coming out for the team, Chamberlain now has to point her players in the right direction.

"I look at the team concept," she said. "Our team is only as strong as our weakest player."

There's that old expression of practice makes perfect. Chamberlain continued, "I believe in practicing perfect. I think you need to have a concentrated effort in practice. It's a mental game...that's the nature of the sport."

Chamberlain said she also thinks that a player should be a "thinking player that can analyze the game."

With all of this working for the Lady Hawks, who's going to stand in their way?

"IV is still the team to beat," Chamberlain said. "They have LaSalle Park as a looker, which is always a tough school. They'll have another strong team. They're the team to beat this year, no question about it."

She also mentioned that COD would be tough again this year.

They usually start slow because of their late start, we can usually hit them early," said Chamberlain. "But by the time they get to regionals, they're in full swing."

"Last year at regionals we found ourselves, hoping for certain teams, like DuPage, to lose their matches. What we should have done is just go out and play our game, do it ourselves. We grew as a result. It was a learning experience, a coming of age. That's what it's all about."

Returners, newcomers to guide volleyball squad

By Eric Bingham
Sports Editor

"A loss is not a defeat" is the philosophy of second-year volleyball coach Julie Ellefson-Kuehn.

"Don't get me wrong, I don't like to lose," she clarifies. "I consider improvement a victory. Winning is a bonus."

Bonuses were hard to come by last year for Ellefson-Kuehn as the team finished 0-8 in the North Central Community College Conference. With three returners from last year's squad, the Lady Hawks seem to be on track to win their share of matches this season.

One of the returners is Sharon Allen.

"Sharon is the key team leader," said Ellefson-Kuehn. "She's assuming the role, not in a pushy or dominating way, but being able to rally the team."

Jennifer Stach and Linda Hand are the other two second-year members. Ellefson-Kuehn expects Stach to be a top front row player for Harper, while she's counting on Hand to contribute as a key server and with an important back row effort.

Although it will be a plus for the Lady Hawks to have some of the women back, one key loss to graduation is that of Janice Word. The leader of last year's team, she now competes at the University of Wisconsin at Parkside on a scholarship.

"She was a gift," said Ellefson-Kuehn of Word, "just an outstanding player."

Ellefson-Kuehn's hope of another player like Word would now seem to lie in her incoming group of recruits.

Near the top of the list of those newcomers is Nicole Boddie, a two-time All-State recipient from Schaumburg Christian. Others that will take part in the Lady Hawks' fate include Karen Szilc, Sue Trachsel and Marge Mackey.

"I'm excited with the prospects this year," Ellefson-Kuehn said. "I'm looking for good things from them. Most of them seem to have more experience (at the high school level) than in the past."

With this experience working for them, Ellefson-Kuehn is striving for two main goals this year.

"Individual team growth and some conference wins," she said. "I'm looking for some good, solid, competitive volleyball."

"The girls have a good attitude and they've been working their butts off."

"I'm happy where we're sitting," she added. "We're ahead of where we were last year. If we just keep it going."

"We have the ability, we should be able to play with everybody," Ellefson-Kuehn said. Amongst those the Lady Hawks will face is their toughest challenge will be College of DuPage, Illinois Valley and Jeff.

"COD has a new coach, but they have always been tough, so it may not make a difference," said Ellefson-Kuehn.

"I'm confident where we're at (compared with last year). The girls have the will to work, and that should get us through."

Late night with Neptune

By Lisa Aust
Entertainment Editor

Voyager II has provided more information about our solar system's planets in the past 12 years than humans have been able to discover since Galileo.

Harper paid tribute to the accomplishment this past Thursday and Friday nights, with its presentation, Late Night With Neptune. Featured were live television coverage via NASA satellite, a guest speaker, and an opportunity to view the planets through a telescope.

Friday, Larry Boyle, guest speaker from the National Space Society, presented material spanning Voyager's existence. Boyle revealed Voyagers discoveries as miraculous considering it is, "sent, artistic, and legally deaf."

The craft is "sent" in that its main memory is burned out. "Artistic" because the distortion of space travel must be taken into account now that the primary receiver has been lost. NASA programmers must alter the signal on Earth so that it will become distorted to the proper signal once it reaches Voyager.

The craft is "legally deaf" because it lost its primary receiver.

Board approves Biennial Goals

By Marc Balke
Staff Writer

Harper's Board of Trustees approved the 1989-1991 Biennial Goals in July. The goal is to address the issues and concerns made by the Harper community.

Plans and concerns included: student success, enrollment planning, technology programs, baccalaureate programs, marketing, employee support, and affirmative action plans.

Many changes will be made; however, change in the curriculum will further benefit the student.

Harper wants to be established as a major contributor to the resources of the community. This will include business and industry, and to expand knowledge of the international environment.

To accomplish this goal, the following guidelines have been established:

- Develop a plan by spring 1990 that will result in the addition of international experiences to existing and new courses offered.

- Establish and staff an office for international affairs by fall 1990 that will assume responsibility for all international programming functions. They will also serve as the clearinghouse for all international studies.

President Paul Thompson is pleased with the Board's approval of the Biennial Goals and hopes this is a start to a great future.

Many of the changes are planned to be completed by the fall of '90.

Student and faculty alike, enjoyed Harper's presentation of, "Late night with Neptune"

Paul Siperia organized the event and considers it to have been a success. "Of the five installations in the area with Neptune coverage, only Adler and Triton had a larger turnout." Estimated participation ranged from 200 to 340.

Thom Nelson, student, was impressed with the technology of the project. Nelson said, "It's incredible that they can get images sent from Voyager which only has a 1 watt generation."

Harper did not have similar coverage of Voyager's other planetary encounters because of its recent acquisition a satellite dish.

Citizenship or GED concerns, no problem for AED

By Phyllis Benson
Staff Writer

Harper College offers four different types of educational programs to meet the needs of an ever growing population in the 200 square miles of District 512. Transfer, Career/Vocational, Continuing Education and Adult Educational Development.

Adult Educational Development (AED) offers placement tests, advancement and classes in non-native literacy, basic skills, GED (General Educational Development) and pre-GED.

Courses in citizenship training, pre-employment skills and business/industry BASED (Based Academic Skills for Employee Development) are also offered.

Patricia Mulcrone, adult educational development associate professor and chairperson for 11 years and the 1988-89 Distinguished Faculty recipient, said there is a need for adult education to be available in the Harper College community.

"Fifteen percent of the adults in the Harper District," she said, "do not have a high school diploma. There is a whole segment of the population not prepared for college work."

Other figures show at least 35,000 speak a language other than English as their primary language, 10,000 immigrants, 7,400 with eight years of education or less, 1,500 families below the federal poverty level and 19,000 adults on public aid.

"I feel that adult education is really needed," Mulcrone said. "It's a service the community needs. I have seen in my own family that education can make a difference."

"I came here from Italy at the age of five. I had the advantage of the school system in the usual way. I can see a difference in the opportunities available to them."

Placement tests are given to new students to determine reading and math levels for native students and oral skills and reading for non-native. Classes are then recommended and when coursework is completed, help in the transition to college level work is offered.

Some students take AED courses and college level courses concurrently, Mulcrone said. The Basic Skill and Pre-GED programs cover reading, English and math skills at the pre-high school level. Consistent attendance can show typical grade-level improvement after 30 hours of instruction.

"That's a good level," Mulcrone said. "It takes a child in grade school one year to move one grade level and adults can progress much faster."

secondary level grades 9 through 12, is often 8 to 16 weeks and consists primarily of a high school review.

A citizenship training class is offered for persons seeking permanent residence or citizenship under the Amnesty program.

Nearly 1,000 non-natives attended last year, Mulcrone said. Satisfactory progress must be demonstrated and a certificate of satisfactory progress is issued to give to immigration authorities. Courses are offered at the Northeast Center and two local churches.

AED also offers pre-employment skills covering the job search and recruiting. The Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA), funded in part by the Northern Cook County Private Industry Council, provides these services. Tutors, fees, materials, books and reimbursement for child care are also provided through JTPA.

"We make it possible for some people who could not otherwise afford college to go,"

In addition to meeting the needs of residents of Harper's district, AED also attempts to meet the needs of the 16,000 businesses and industries.

Due to the rapid expansion of more technical jobs, Mulcrone said, employers are faced with replacing or retraining many loyal, good workers. They would rather upgrade employee skills.

BASED (Basic Academic Skills for Employee Development) provides on-site classes and basic skills development. AED has been working with Motorola for the past two years and with 15 other small businesses including hotels and hospitals.

Mulcrone, who is an associate professor and a former English and journalism instructor, has a staff to handle 4,000 students per year who use AED. "We have a variety of specialists contributing their expertise," she said.

A student advisor, two supervisors for literacy/GED and business and non-native, a JTPA specialist and 45 to 50 part-time instructors are involved in the program at any time.

The Adult Educational Development department received several awards during 1988-89.

The American Association of Community and Junior Colleges honored Harper for its work with Motorola.

The Northern Cook County Private Industry Council named Harper and the AED as an "Outstanding Educational Partner."

Mulcrone who works under the supervision of Dean of Special Programs and Services Elizabeth McKay said, "a degree enrichment could not be accomplished without the support of the institution."

Profits add up at Bookstore

By Erik Warner
Staff Writer

The school-owned bookstore, managed by Pat Furtak, tries to keep its high prices down by pricing to cover costs and taking advantage of text buyback services.

The publishers recommended list price is used to determine price. Profit is made on the sale of texts, but the money is used to lower the cost of labor and operation.

Profits after costs are used to finance next year's operations and to subsidize the food service program, which loses money, said Dean of Business Services and Finance Victor Brenner who supervises the bookstore operations.

In addition to the sale of items in the store, profits are made when books are bought back from students. In the past, Harper bookstore bought back only texts they would be able to resell next year. Now, Follett's, a publishing company, buys back books that other schools can use. Follett's pays Harper a commission on books it buys. Both Harper, making a profit on books it has no use for, and the students, able to resell more of their texts, come out ahead.

"The money (from Follett's) goes into sales," said Brenner, "it brings the cost (of texts) down, but the price of books is going up."

Texts the bookstore carries are decided upon by the full-time instructors. Before a semester, instructors are asked to give a list of books needed for their classes. Books can change from one semester to another because most teachers want to use the newer books available.

"A good teacher wants to use the best texts to teach their classes," said Brenner. Having to always buy different books keeps prices high. "We're not a K-Mart, or Crown Books, we can't overbuy because of the short life of text books," concluded Brenner.

Education suffers as teacher shortage continues

By Amy Hudson
College Press Service

Students on half the campuses in the country will find their schools suffering from some sort of shortage of professors this fall, the American Council on Education (ACE) predicts.

While experts have been forecasting shortages in the 1990's, will suffer drastic faculty shortages—perhaps up to 100,000 campus-level teaching jobs will remain unfilled for lack of qualified people—the ACE report is the first to indicate the problem may have started.

Half the campuses surveyed earlier in August by the ACE, a trade group for college presidents based in Washington, D.C., reported their searches for qualified teaching applicants take longer than in previous years.

"There is a crying need for people to go teach."

— Dick Willis

When they find someone to hire, half the schools say they're having trouble convincing the applicants to take the job.

"We've seen the proportion of campuses reporting difficulty in this area nearly double in the last two years, and we expect this trend to continue into the 1990's," warned the ACE's Elaine El Khawar, author of the report.

El Khawar found colleges are having the most trouble finding computer science, math, health, and business professors.

Nationwide, 15 percent of all the tenure-track business professorships went unfilled for the entire 1988-89 school year, estimates the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB), the St. Louis-based group that accredits campus business curricula.

To keep up, campuses will need to hire 37 percent more professors by the year 2001, estimated Mike McGuire, senior planning officer at Franklin and Marshall College in Pennsylvania, where he recently finished a study of faculty attrition at 29 institutions.

For students, it means more of their classes will be taught by graduate assistants and, presumably, not as effectively as they would have been with fully trained professors at the head of the class.

Louisiana State University, for example, has lost so many professors just in the last eight months that some of its administrators are worried some LSU programs may lose their accreditation.

Ten of LSU's 18 accounting faculty members have left since January, reported department Chairman Vincent Brenner.

In all, 120 professors have left LSU's 18 Baton Rouge campus in 1989, provoked by uncertainty over what will happen to them after a reorganization of the state's higher education system and by persistently low salaries.

At the 14-campus California State University system, administrators are gearing up for a shortage of 10,000 to 11,000 faculty over the next 10 to 15 years, thanks to a projected surge in enrollment and mass retirements of professors hired during the 1960's, when the CSU system was being formed.

To combat the problem, CSU is offering financial incentives and even to forgive loans to students who agree to go on to get doctorates and, ultimately, teach at CSU.

Right now, the Ph.D. pipeline isn't providing the numbers needed, said CSU spokesman Steve MacCarthy.

"We're never had a year where we've been fully staffed."

— Vincent Brenner

The bottom line is that we have to get more people into the Ph.D. pipeline," McGuire added. Bachelor's degrees in fields like engineering and computer science are winning students starting salaries of $40,000 to $45,000 this summer, the College Placement Council in Bethlehem, Pa., reported in late July.

As a result, students can choose between making a good salary or going on to grad school for four more years, during which they often will go deeper into debt. With their doctoral degrees, moreover, they would then face a career of teaching which would earn them far less than they could make in private industry.

Shrinking federal support for colleges since 1980 has made it even harder for colleges to find money to raise professors' salaries, some observers noted.

Yet, at least in LSU's accounting department, finding qualified professors has always been a battle. "We've never had a year where we've been fully staffed," Brenner declared. "The accounting shortage has been going on for 20 years."

To fill the gaps, Brenner has relied on graduate students to teach middle level classes, thus defying AACSB accreditation standards.

"It can be destroyed in a matter of one or two years," Brenner said of the department's reputation. "We're going to be in really bad shape."

There's a crying need for people to go teach," added Dick Willis of the Engineering Manpower Commission in Washington, D.C., who said that some 1,800 of the 20,000 available teaching positions were vacant last year.

Willis, like most others, thinks this is just the beginning. Franklin and Marshall's McGuire agreed. "We've still got five to eight more years before things get critical."

McGuire also foresees weathering universities raising other schools for faculty, causing huge rifts in the quality of education among various schools.

In a separate report, University of Colorado College of Business officials complained in early August that they were losing faculty members to better-endowed campuses. While top business schools can pay professors $120,000 to $150,000 a year, CU's average is closer to $60,000 a year.

"The bottom line...we need more people."

Editorial Bits and Pieces

Congratulations to the Technology, Mathematics and Physical Science Department on an excellent job with Last Night With Neptune. The program was interesting and exciting, as observers saw up-close photos from a planet previously unexplored (at least by human eyes).

Kudos to the PALS group, run by DAWN. It's wonderful that students now have peers to turn to with their problems. For more information, see page 10.

The Harbinger welcomes letters to the editor or stories and columns by Harpers students, staff, faculty, or members of the community. If you have something on your mind, write it down and bring it by the Harbinger office, room A 367.

Harper's generation gap

Last year, five students from area high schools completed a special section of Math 202 offered especially for them. This fall, special class sections of Philosophy 205 and Literature 115 are being offered for senior citizens only, with about 12 students enrolled in each section.

As this campus has become aware of the issues surrounding segregation, I have to say that I was surprised to hear these bits of news. It seems that we have, first, a type of reverse discrimination and, second, a separation of generations that will only hinder the learning experience of all involved.

While one of the goals of a community college is to reach out to different populations in the community, I feel that this could be accomplished without separating Harper's oldest and youngest members from the student body as a whole. Harper already gives a substantial discount to senior citizens (they pay $6 per semester hour), and by offering the Math course to outstanding high school students, Harper is reaching out to these groups. Why does the administration feel that these groups must be segregated?

According to Dean of Technology, Mathematics, and Physical Science George Dornier, part of the consideration for the Math 202 course is to let the high school seniors have a taste of the college atmosphere. However, the course is taught by a high school teacher. How can these students get a feel for college life if they are separated in a class by themselves with a teacher from high school? A large part of the college experience is the interaction with other students.

Likewise, by separating senior citizens from the Harper student body, we are stunting the growth of both younger and older students. There is so much to be learned from more experienced members of the community and both groups can benefit from ideas and questions from another point of view.

Where will the segregation end? If we are going to separate students because of age, why don't we continue the idea throughout the campus? Why not offer classes specifically by age group? We could have separate registrations for 17 and under, 17-30, 31-45, 46-60, and 61 and older groups? This way, nobody would have to interact with students outside of their own age group.

A major benefit of a community college is the opportunity to meet people from many different age groups, interests, and ways of life. The college experience is so much more than just classrooms, teachers and textbooks. It is also about the thoughts, ideas, questions, and experiences of classmates. By separating certain age groups from the student body as a whole, Harper is denying its students some of the resources that make attending a community college a learning and growing experience.

Club apathy on campus

Clubs and Organizations Day is once again upon us. Actually, it is two days—September 18 and 19 from 9 am to 2 pm in the Building A lounge. Given the amount of organized groups on campus, it was apparent that substantially less than half of them showed up for last semester's gathering.

Much has been said concerning campus apathy. Many club leaders constantly wonder how to get the students involved. Much energy goes into the promotion of clubs and events. It seems that attendance at Clubs and Organizations Day should be a priority for all groups on campus. How can an organization get members if students don't know it exists? Non-attendance undermines the group's success.

It also disappoints the clubs that do attend. Their enthusiasm is offset by the complacency of those that seemingly don't care.

This trend can be reversed. It's simple. If you are a member of a club or organization on campus, speak to your president about attending. It's fun and good for inter-organizational relations, so please make an effort. See you there:

Focus on faculty

Welcome

Over a dozen faculty were hired to replace employees who retired or requested a leave of absence. Several part-time faculty were promoted to full-time status.

This addition increases the ratio of full-time to part-time faculty and begins to focus on a concern expressed by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools in its 1987 report.

Meet Harper's new full-time faculty, as they join the thousands of strangers on campus this week.

Petty : Solo

By Jamie Benson
Staff Writer

Tom Petty, with help from fellow Wilbury, Jeff Lynne, and Heartbreaker, Mike Campbell, has come up with his first-ever solo album entitled Full Moon Fever.

The making of this album wasn't planned. Petty and Lynne met at a stoplight in Los Angeles. The two of them started writing songs with guitarist Campbell.

The first five tracks are enough to make you want to stick around for the rest of this incredible album. Love is a Long Road shows Petty asking for a second chance at a relationship, while Free Fallin' has him doing the heartbreak.

I Won't Back Down has the tough guy, take no ball-anism Blazin' Down a Dream has Petty and Del Shannon driving along with the stereo blasting and the top down. It is highlighted by a relentless attack of Campbell guitar licks.

There is a wonderful version of the Byrds Free or Whole Lot Better. Yer So Bad tells the story of how Petty's sister "got lucky, married a yuppie and took him for all he was worth."

The next four tracks, Depending on You, The Apartment Song, Alright For Now and A Mind With a Heart of its Own deal with the aftermath of a rotten relationship.

On the Zombie Zoo, Petty gets help from the late, great Orbison, on background vocals. Harrison lends a hand on guitar in I Won't Back Down.

Full Moon Fever shows the continued brilliant singing/songwriting abilities of Petty. Credit should be given to his fellow Wilburys even though this is considered a Petty solo project.

Full Moon Fever is sure to clear up any doubt you may have had about Petty. He can write and he sure can sing. This one is a winner. Thumb up from that concerned writer.

Reviewing Summer

By Scott Seidl
Staff Writer

This summer Hollywood has been quite busy making sure quality entertainment was readily available for audiences everywhere. To review the entire list would be too extensive, so I will offer you the top ten hits for the summer of '89. David Letterman, eat your heart out.

Number ten

Honey, I Shrunk the Kids
Rick Moranis plays an absent minded scientist trying to conquer molecular breakdown when his children fall victim to his shrink ray. The children then face high adventure trying to survive their jungle-sized back lawn to get to the safety of the house.  1/2.

Number nine

The Abyss
James Cameron directs his underwater epic dealing with the rescue of a disabled nuclear submarine. During the retrieval process, the members of the rescue party encounter danger, love, hope and something not of this world. ***

Number eight

Ghostbusters 2
Ivan Reitman pulls together the seven alumni from the first film (Akroyd, Ramis, Murray, Hudson, Weaver, Morahan and Potts) to make an enjoyable sequel under Columbia's name. If you enjoyed the first, you will more than likely have fun at part two. ***

Number seven

Dead Poet's Society
Take Adrian Cronauer, tone down his zanyness a bit, add a larger spectrum of emotions and you have Robin Williams' most powerful role to date, John Keating. Keating is a poetry professor at a conventional school who teaches with very unconventional methods.  1/2.

Number six

Parenthood
Director Ron Howard takes a look at three generations of a family unit and how they deal with child raising. It stars Steve Martin, Jason Robards and Rick Moranis.  1/2.

Number five

Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade

After the bombing of the second installment, Harrison Ford returns to finish the trilogy with a bang. With the help of Sean Connery, Ford pleases audiences with the dashing implausibilities of Jones.  1/2.

Batman
Bob Kane's fictional vigilante loses his blue lights for a costume made of a bullet proof alloy to battle his arch-enemy, The Joker. Jack Nicholson is the perfect choice for the psychotic Joker, opposing Michael Keaton as the capped crusader. The only problem is we don't see enough of Keaton. Rumor has it we're in store for two more with Danny Devito in for the Penguin, and Robin Williams as the Riddler.  1/2.

Number three

Do the Right thing
Actor/director Spike Lee takes us into a character study of racism and discrimination. In the sweltering summer heat of the Bronx, attitudes and tempers fly in this realistic drama. ****

Number two

Lethal Weapon II
Mel Gibson and Danny Glover team up again as the dynamic duo of the 80s to battle the crime world in this action comedy. Gibson is as cocky as ever as detective Riggs. You can't help but cheer him on and laugh all the way through this film. Finally, a sequel that is as good if not better than the first. ****

...And now the number one choice of summer movies...

When Harry met Sally...

Rob Reiner directs this romantic comedy documenting the twelve years of hatred, friendship and love of Meg Ryan and Billy Crystal. Ryan and Crystal show us situations which could have happened in our own relationships, in a very realistic way. Emotions run wild in this Summer hit. ****

Well there they are as I saw them, good to better to best. All in all a summer to remember on the silver screen.

As the critics say on T.V., "Unit next time, save me the aisle seat." Better yet, save me a seat towards the front, in the middle (I usually forget my glasses).

Meet Darlene Iverson

By Michael Waskiewicz
Happening Editor

"I want everyone to know my name and come up here (to the student senate office) and tell me their opinions, ideas, and complaints. I mean, that's my job—to get their opinions across to the school. I really try and help." Says Darlene Iverson, 19, and Harper's Student Trustee.

Last April, Iverson was elected to the Student Trustee position. As trustee, Iverson takes an active role at school board meetings, voicing student opinions. One of Iverson's goals is to take measures concerning the recycling of paper and aluminum at Harper.

She finds being trustee challenging, hard, and very nerve-racking. She does not complain, though, because she enjoys helping the students make a difference.

Iverson doesn't plan to pursue politics as a career, but does admit that it is a possibility. She is, however, working towards a degree in the medical field.

In her spare time Iverson is a big mover and is attempting bike riding. She also shops for fun and helps in student activities. She feels it is important to keep active.

"The best decision I ever made was the decision to come here. I wasn't afraid to get involved here. I think I would have been intimidated somewhere else. People complain that there's nothing to do, but how do they know if they don't get involved? You have to make the best out of work and school."

Anyone with questions, comments, or opinions about school, Iversons welcome them to use the S.C.I.Q. box, or even talk to her personally. "Students need to know that I'm here for them," she says. "I want to help."

Cabaret Is Coming!

By Michael Waskiewicz
Happening Editor

Auditions for Cabaret will begin on Wednesday, September 13 at 7 P.M. and Saturday, September 16 at 1 P.M. in A139. Following the auditions will be the call backs on Sunday, September 17 at 1 P.M. in J143.

Auditions will be open to students and the public. They will entail singing, dancing, and reading. Mary Jo Willis, the director of the play, suggests that everyone prepare a song (preferably from the musical) that will show vocal appreciation, dress comfortably, and be prepared.

The musical needs three women leads, eight women chorus members, three male leads, and eight male chorus members. Also needed for the backstage are make-up people, and crew workers. Copies of the script will be available in the reserve section of the library for those interested.

Cabaret is set in Berlin during the chaotic time of 1930. The cabaret was the scene for the destruction of personal lives and values caused by the growing Nazi influence. Along with its music, and its original plot, Cabaret has become one of America's most popular musicals.

Willis has some advice for those trying out: "The audition," she believes, "is to present yourself in a way that will be remembered by the directors, and the way to do that is to be prepared."

You've got PALS

By Michael Waskiewicz
Happening Editor

Are you feeling a little down? Has the world got you frustrated? Do you need someone to talk to, but just have no one to go to. Well, don't let that get you down, you've got PALS!

PALS, Peer Advisors Listening to Students, is a new organization sponsored by DAWN, Drug, Alcohol, Wellness Network. It is set up to help students and anyone willing with their problems. No matter what the subject of the problem, the advisors are there.

PALS is made up of student volunteers who have been trained to share and listen to peer problems. They're trained to be, well, pals. Most students who join find the experience most rewarding. "We've met people, learned how to talk, but most important, we've learned about feelings. We really can help," says Jean Tutt, student advisor.

The students are trained to deal with many problems ranging from family matters to poor study habits. They can also give referrals to those who choose to pursue help outside of the student advisors. All meetings with the advisors are completely confidential and are devoted to relieving stress and tension.

To find the peer advisors, all one has to do is look for the umbrella. It looks like a hot dog stand, but it's not, it's PALS. Peer advisor, Dean Morgan, tells that he is "afraid no one will take

Coach to lead intramurals

By Eric Bingham
Sports Editor

If being a part-time instructor and head basketball coach wasn't enough, Paul Kastner has also taken on the responsibility of Harper's intramural program.

"Dan Koss (Kastner's predecessor as basketball coach) held the position previously," said Kastner. "I expressed interest that I wanted the job. About 2 months after I came here, a decision was made and I was given the position."

"Kastner was hired on as the head basketball coach," said Physical Education Dean John Getch. "Seven thereafter, Koss retired. We hired Kastner because of his Masters in physical education and his experience at Eastern Illinois. He also had expressed interest in the position."

Getch also said he found Kastner's schedule to be compatible with the job.

Kastner will draw from his experience at Eastern to try and make it a smooth transition.

The first semester will be trial and error," Kastner said. "We're going to offer many different programs at different times to help accommodate the student."

Included in these programs are wrestling, baseball, tennis, flag football, free throw contests, table tennis, billiards tournaments, basketball, floor hockey, racquetball, volleyball and wallyball.

"I want to try to improve participation," Kastner continued. "In a school this size we should have more people out here."

"I'm going to encourage everybody to come out and take part," he added. "Intramurals is a good way to offer kids an opportunity to play team sports without the serious competition. If the kids want it, it's out there."

Kastner and Getch will both try to reach the students to find out what they're interested in and at what times.

"We plan on using the newspaper and providing information in the 'M' Building," said Getch. "We will also have posters and hope to get students to help with promotion."

With basketball season approaching, does Kastner feel he'll have a problem budgeting time?

"I don't really know," said Kastner. "I've been able to squeeze each one from each other. As long as I keep doing it, there shouldn't be a problem."

Coach seeks team of '80's title

Football team to begin season against University of DuBuque Saturday

By Eric Bingham
Sports Editor

In the National Football League, the San Francisco 49ers have been called the team of the '80's, not without debate.

In the North Central Community College Conference (N4C), Harper seems to be destined to hold the same title.

Winner of four regional and six conference titles in addition to not losing to an Illinois community college in two years, the title of "Team of the '80's" may already belong to Harper. Head Coach John Eliasak, shooting for his sixth straight bowl appearance, wants to eliminate any doubt.

"We want to be the team of the '80's," said Eliasak, who came to Harper in 1971 after a three year stint at Fenwick High School as an assistant and a one year term at North Park College as the defensive coordinator. "There's no question that's something we're shooting for. I would also like to go to the national bowl game in Oklahoma."

The latter could be the real challenge for the Hawks. The National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) takes only the top two teams from its final rankings for the Coca-Cola-sponsored national title game.

"That means we have to stay undefeated," Eliasak said.

A task in itself, as Harper faces perennial Michigan powerhouse Grand Rapids, Joliet, College of DuPage, Illinois Valley, Triton and Augustana. The one advantage in the Hawks' schedule this season is that they face Joliet, COD, IV and Triton at home.

Last year was a surprise, commented Eliasak on Harper's 9-2 season. "We had a terrible schedule. We were losing at the half during four road games last year, but pulled each one out. Now those games are at home. The conference schedule favors us."

The conference is going to be real tough this year, as always, Eliasak said. "We have three teams ranked in the top 20 in the pre-season poll. I don't think that's ever happened in any conference anywhere in the nation."

Coach: John Eliasak

"It's (winning) all relative," he continued. "You can't tell what they're (other N4C teams) got coming back in (personnel)."

Returners for Harper will include from the defensive line Joe Belcher, Steve Renshaw, Jason Holmes, Kevin Ferry, Eric Brown, Pete Milazzo and John

In the secondary, Lamoni Calhoun and Roland Carrington will be around for a second year.

Newcomers Eliasak is looking to shore up the remaining spots and provide some needed depth at Chip Holman, John Renshaw, Jason Holmes, Kevin Ferry, Eric Brown, Pete Milazzo and John Stedman.

"Our run defense will be the strength this season," said Eliasak. "The pass defense I'm not too sure about right now."

Offensively the Hawks will be led by returning All-American RB James Haywood. Clearing his way are second year starters Bob Redel and Brian Canoy. Other sophomores are Juan Taylor, Mike Korgan and Brad Jones.

"We have some speed offensively," said Eliasak. "Our receiving corps is a solid bunch, but there's not much depth. Only two guys are returning from last year, so we'll have a fairly new line."

"Our biggest question mark is at the quarterback position," he added. "I've got three freshmen, Lari Sydnor, Jerry Chaney and Dave McClan, all trying for the spot. I'm just waiting for one of them to step forward and take control."

Special teams will be led by K Tyler Hill. The punter position hasn't been as readily chosen as three players vie for the spot.

"Special teams looks to be improved," said Eliasak. "Our punting game last year was weak, so that will be definitely improved."

Filling all of the positions won't be a problem, as the Hawks have been fortunate to avoid injuries and ineptitude.

"The only major set back has been the possible loss of Terrence Terrell (possible broken toe)," Eliasak said. "As far as ineptitude, a couple of guys won't be here, but nothing unusual."

Harper will open its season against the University of DuBuque on Sept. 2. The following week, the Hawks will face off against Grand Rapids or Michigan.

"It's going to take a while for our offense to get set," Eliasak continued. "The offense won't operate at peak until the third or fourth game. Our defense will have to keep us in the first couple of games."

Overall, Eliasak says that the team isn't as big physically, but the team's speed and agility are improved. Maybe be this "Team of the '80's" can run away with a national title.

N4C to see numerous returners

Joliet, Rock Valley led by new coaches; Harper still top choice in conference

By Eric Bingham
Sports Editor

Harper's road to a sixth consecutive bowl game appearance will be filled with tough obstacles this year.

The Hawks leading computers are full of returning starters. This, and as Harper Head Coach John Eliasak said, "everybody will be gunning for us."

This is a roundup of the North Central Community College Conference (N4C) returning starters, team goals and the respective coaches' outlook.

College of DuPage
Head Coach Bob MacDougall is returning with six players from last year, three each from offense and defense.

Tom Mitchell will try to shore up the secondary for the Chaparrals, while teammates Mike Brystrol and Mike Calogian help piece together the line.

On offense, C Randy Winter will be taking to Curt Miller for the second straight year. Miller may be looking for WR Lance Lewis to help lead the offense.

"If we can stay healthy, we'll make a run for the money," said MacDougall. "It will be a pretty good year."

MacDougall said he thinks any of five teams could have a shot at the conference, with Joliet and Rock Valley a year away from being near the top.

Triton
"We lost a lot to graduation," said Head Coach Ed Yonkus.

The Trojans still have eight players returning from last year's team, five on defense and three on offense.

Three second-year DL, Jason Bennett, Kelly Neill and Tommy Walker will be the force behind Triton's defense.

Behind them are LB Mark Thornhill and DB Anthony Burton.

Linebackers Dan Pendzinski and Bob Fandulinski will try to open holes for RB Maurice Watkins in the Trojans' offensive attack.

"We've got a very tough schedule," said Yonkus of the upcoming season. "I just want us to improve every week."

"I don't know what everybody else retained," Yonkus said of the N4C. "I expect Harper to be extremely good."

Illinois Valley
The toughest defense could come from Oglesby this year, as the Apaches are facing a season with seven returners.

"Most important is to have players graduate in the two year time span they're supposed to finish in."

Joliet head football coach Joseph Redman

Lawrence Magliod and Curt Seel will be on the line with Ron Moran and Eric McGish taking two of the linchpin spots.

Wes Wilson, Pete McAdams and Keith Jones are the keys in the secondary.

Offensively, Head Coach Vince McMahon has four second-year starters including QB Kenton Carr.

Carr will get some protection from OG Derrick Buear while looking to hit WR Kevin Jones. If Carr opens for the run through, he's got Lanny Stevin in the backfield to pick up a few yards.

"We just want to be as good as we can be," McMahon said.

Although McMahon put Harper, Triton and COD in the top three spots in the conference, he said he wasn't sure who was going to win it.

Moraine Valley
Following a 5-6 finish in the N4C, the Marauders are on the edge of breaking loose...or falling flat.

Split Ends Jim Sammons and Tony Wolanski along with TE Rob Gee and OL Jim Hood will be counted on to help MV's offense crack the top three in the conference.

Defensively, DE Steven Beck and John Young will try to hold down opponents running game while providing a pass rush when necessary. Aiding in these duties will be LB Kevin Carr.

"The conference has been dominated by Harper, COD and Triton," said MV Head Coach Dennis Buear. "I expect it to remain the same."

"We're just going to be competitive with other community colleges," he added.

Joliet

Head Coach Joe Redman has the difficult task of trying to step in and take over as one of two first year coaches in the league. He's got some returning personnel to aid the transition, though.

Providing the protection on offense will be Larry Fornellus and Jim Quinn. Ballhandlers include TE Kent Pellegrini, WR Demetrius Johnson and RB Brian Cobble.

"We want to be able to control the line, on offense and defense," said Redman.

The defense line has just one returner in Louis Craig. Behind Craig will be LB Marcus Campbell and Larry Sims and Chris Wierdeman in the secondary.

Construction to begin

By Marc Balke
Staff Writer

Harper's Space Program Analysis is complete and construction may soon be under way. Plans are being finalized for the construction of three new buildings: Building X, Maintenance and Storage; Building W, Bookstore; and Building L, Performing Arts Facility and Classrooms. Expenditures for the project is estimated at $16,350,000, much lower than January's projection of $20,500,000. Construction of the buildings require extensive preparation and financing to begin. Harper's main concern is to make it campus more accessible to more students, within the budget.

"The challenge is to have a space plan that will not compromise Harper's standards of excellence with regard to educational quality, efficiency, and comfort," stated President Paul Thompson.

The study, approved in 1985, was intended to improve the educational facilities of the college by reviewing the original Campus Master Plan and its existing facilities. A balance was made for present and future program requirements, including current available space and projected use of space.

"In the past, classes have been fragmented. Specific classes are rebooked within the same area. For instance, art classes are located in Buildings C and U," said Vice President of Administrative Services, Vern Manke.

The last buildings constructed on campus were Buildings I, J, and M, all which were built in 1980.

A definite date for construction has yet to be decided.

Observatory groundbreaking

The Harper College Observatory, dedicated on July 20, the 20th anniversary of the first moon landing, is in progress.

"It now lies in the hands of the contractors," said Assistant Professor of Astronomy Paul Sipera.

The concrete floor of the $41,000 project will be poured before September 12, Sipera said, and the bricks are scheduled to arrive on site that date.

Located adjacent to parking lot 7 and the pond on the north side of the campus, the observatory will house one huge telescope under the dome.

Three to four times larger than the observatory at Dwight D. Eisenhower Junior High School in Hoffman Estates, it will also house storage facilities for current equipment.

"Many of the smaller telescopes that we have in the department now are in storage," Sipera said.

"The nice thing about the observatory is that we can put the equipment we have stored somewhere it will be usable."

A fundraising program entitled "Buy a Brick" allows a student, or any person, to buy a brick of the new building with their name and a registration number on it.

"Eventually," said Sipera, "they will be able to go into the building and look up their number and find out where their brick is located."

The sale of the bricks, which now stands at 650 sold, will provide continued support for the observatory.

The sale of bricks will be ongoing, Sipera said, until all bricks are sold.

Persons interested in purchasing a brick may stop by Sipera's office in D245 or mail 15 with their name to TMA&P, Division, Harper College, Algonquin and Roselle Rds., Palatine, IL 60067.

Race starts for Student Senate

By Alex Chinlund
Features Editor

Student Senate, Harper's student government organization, is holding its general election for academic division senators.

Students who would like to represent one of the six divisions: Business and Social Science, Liberal Arts, Life Science and Human Services, Physical Education, Athletics and Recreation or Technology, Mathematics and Physical Sciences, must fill out a Declaration of Candidacy Form in A336 by 2:00 pm on September 7. The elections will be held on September 18 and 19.

Five other students are members of the senate: the Student Trustee, Darlene Iverson, a counselor aide and three club and organization members: The Cosmo Club, Aids and Club and Organization Council, it is selected by the elected senators.

Participation in the Student Senate gives you an opportunity to become involved in campus life and offers a unique learning experience," said Director of Student Activities and Student Senate Advisor Jeanne Pankratt. "You can build up your resume while learning managerial skills."

"The Student Senate represents the Harper student body in the faculty, administration and the Board of Trustees," said Pankratt. "They work on special projects, policies and issues which directly affect students."

Some of the projects include budgeting the student activity fee funds, choosing the graduation class gift, and

Barcodes help LRC efficiency

By Erik Wurter
News Editor

Have you ever known just part of the title of a book you wanted? Or part of the author's name? The new easy-access system in the library will help you find books you want, no matter how obscure or how little you know about them.

Harper's LRC is being converted to a computerized card catalog, which enables students to find information with speed and ease.

The system can find books from part of an author's name or parts of a title;

additionally, it suggests titles that have similar information. The catalog also finds chapters of books that have related information.

The easy-access catalog tells the user if books they want are on shelf and, if not, the due date they are due.

There are 24 terminals available for students to use the easy-access catalog, including one terminal with an adjustable table for patrons in wheelchairs.

Currently, only a small part of the LRC's books are in the computer. All material should be loaded and the system running by spring semester.

The search for an automated catalog began during the 1984-85 school year. 18 months were spent checking systems in other schools to help Harper select the best one for its needs.

Library cards will also be a new addition for the LRC. Along with the barcode system, this makes it easier for the LRC to track books.

Other efforts to automate the LRC include the Wilsonline system, a computerized periodical guide, which is updated every six months.

The project was headed by Linda Glova, overall automation manager, and Mary Seavers, barcode project manager.

approving new club and organization charters.

Each senator is required to join at least two college committees such as Academic Standards or Cultural Arts, as well as various senate subcommittees.

"The Student Senate gives students a chance to be involved on an actual senate, to help make decisions on issues, and to represent the students," said Iverson. "You can make a lot of friends, see a different view of school, work with the administration and an advisor to get things done, and even chair a committee."

No experience is necessary to become a senator. Applicants must be in good academic standing, and enrolled in at least three credit hours to be a senate member or run to be an officer.

Even as the commercialized remembrances of the 1969 Woodstock music festival unfolded, failing miserably, the National Association For The Advancement of Time called for a "Boycott the Past Week."

"We're getting pretty fed up with baby boomers reliving their childhood in prime time," complained NAFTAT President Bruce Elliott, 27, of Los Angeles. "Meanwhile, all other lives are brushed aside as irrelevant. We wait to end the sixties in our lifetime."

"The voice of today is being heard under an avalanche of retro-culture," Elliott maintained. "When four out of five pop radio stations play oldies, when topical theater is pushed aside for a revival of 'Hair,' something is wrong."

Cruising For Students

It may be far smaller than South Carolina, but Daytona Beach (Fla.) Community College appears to have a little bit better sense of what actually interests students.

Hoping to convince students to enroll, DBCC ran a series of sexually suggestive ads in the personal columns of local newspapers during the summer.

A sample: "Single woman looking for intellectual man to discuss English literature, philosophies of the Western World and to take some classes of mutual interest at Daytona Beach Community College." Signed, Bright, Eyes.

In another ad, a fictional "Sally" offered to let a man who took an air conditioning course at the school take her to the movies.

Who Says Poli Sci Doesn't Apply To Real Life?

Officials at Pan American University in Edinburg, Texas, say they've hired a collection agency to try to pry $9,100 owed to the university out of the Texas County Judges Association.

The association, it seems, still hasn't paid for facilities used to stage a January, 1988, debate by the six Democrats then vying for their party's presidential nomination.

More Examples Of How Science Enriches Our Lives

Citing the results of a Cornell University study that determined how to configure women's washrooms, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo in July signed a law that will require all public buildings erected in the state after June 1, 1990 to include six toilets in women's rooms for every four in men's rooms.

Walkers raise funds for handicapped

By Jamie Benson
Staff Writer

Eight people were led by organizer Kevin O'Connell in the American Handicapped Association's (AHA) Second Annual 'Helpful Hearts and Hands Walk-A-Thon'.

The walkway event started on July 28 and covered 250 miles. The group walked from Springfield to Barrington, 40 miles per day.

Harper students Tom Downs, Greg Chapman, Steve Drury, Jim Hoffman, Craig Iverson and O'Connell participated in the walk. They were joined by community volunteers Lynn Cenek, Scott Engmann and Karin Forbese.

The walk was held to raise money for the AHA, and to heighten the awareness concerning the handicapped community in the Chicago area and throughout the state of Illinois.

"We have raised close to $6000, and we are still open for donations," said O'Connell.

"All my efforts did a great job and should be commended," exclaimed O'Connell. "Some had to see a way through their own injuries to help others. He added that Cenek's determination was amazing."

O'Connell said, "I think those who have given I appreciate all the donations, and I hope that more will continue to Humanities department offers sign language courses

By Phyllis Benson
Staff Writer

Every student seeking a degree of Associate in Science or Associate in Applied Science is required to take courses in humanities.

Humanities deals with human thought and relations and traditionally includes the study of art, history, philosophy, music, literature and foreign language. Harper College recently expanded its humanities offerings to include sign language courses and a linguistics course.

"For the past year and a half or so," said Associate Professor and Student Development Counselor Phil Trover, "sign language has been included as a humanities elective."

Three courses in sign language are offered:

Basic sign language (SGN 101), worth four credit hours, is for students without any experience and introduces American Sign Language. Emphasis is on vocabulary and finger-spelling, development, syntax and basic sign principles, and development of expressive and receptive skills. SGN 101 is the prerequisite to SGN 102.

Intermediate Sign Language (SGN 102), also worth four credit hours, is the continuation and development of SGN 101. It is the prerequisite to SGN 103.

Advanced Sign Language

(SGN 103), worth three credit hours, provides a historical overview of American Sign Language and an in-depth examination of the structure of language, English and sign syntax and ASL principles and application.

A new course that didn't exist a year ago, said Trover, is Linguistics 105. Introduction to General Linguistics (LNG 105), worth three credit hours, introduces the nature and structure of language including universals and tones.

and functions of phonology, the study of speech sounds; morphology, the study of form and structure; and grammar.

Letters to the editor

An Open Letter to the Harper Community

I am writing on behalf of the Ad Hoc Committee on Firearms to Smokers to inform all members of the Harper community about the newly proposed Campus-wide Smoker-Free Environment Policy. This policy, if passed by the Board of Trustees, would outlaw all smoking or tobacco use anywhere in campus buildings. Use of tobacco would be expressly permitted on campus outside of buildings.

This draconian measure was the subject of a coded bullet distributed to Full-time Faculty and Staff and Part-time Staff on Monday, September 5. The bullet offers a Life-or-Death Choice, for or against, with no reasonable options for smokers.

The Palatine City Council recently passed a similar measure, but grandfathered in current tobacco users, permitting them to smoke in restricted areas; some commercial concerns have outlawed air purifiers in small areas set aside for smokers. The only positive option in this policy for smokers is to accept total prohibition of smoking inside of buildings on campus and go stand outside in the deal of winter to smoke. We in the English and Philosophy Departments try to teach our students to reject the either/or fallacy only to find it part of an official college survey.

It is the sincere hope of the committee that far-minded non-smokers, who, as the majority and for their health, deserve preference over the wishes of smokers, will not support this attempt, most surely an example of tyranny of the majority, to "create business in their smoking collusion" by enforcing this kind of hardship upon them.

Q: Is There Anybody out There?

A: Nope.

An open letter to the Players, the Writers, the DJs and the Senators--

If you have been a regular reader of the Harbinger in past semesters, you're probably familiar with what has generally been termed "the apathy problem." When I wrote for the Harbinger in '82, '86, '87, and Spring '88 there was an apathy problem. I've read through issues of the Harbinger dating back to '75 and there has always been an apathy problem. Judging from what I've read about this dreaded apathy problem it's a wonder that Harper didn't shut its doors years ago.

But the truth is that there is no apathy problem. There simply is no apathy. The entire, long-running issue stems from a simple misconception that has been magnified out of proportion because, by its very nature, those people who hold it, and who are best served by it, have access to Harper's media.

We should realize by now that the apathy problem is one of self-serving illusion and not a lame student body. The answer lies not in exhorting students to rally round the ticket office, but in redefining the problem--in stating the problem for the first time as it is instead of how some of us would like it to be.

Evilmaster

If half the people at Harper didn't care what went on, then they could be called apathetic, but no one cares, and in the history of Harper, no one ever has! That's not apathy, that's the way it is.

Harper is the drive-thru restaurant of higher education. Taco Bell doesn't sell pennants and pin ponos or accuse the eating public of apathy when they have a bad quarter and we shouldn't either. People come to Harper, get what they paid for, and go. They have neither the time nor the inclination to pretend that Harper is the sister institution of U of I. It's not.

They're third cousins, twice removed. When we hear the word apathy used to explain unattended events, students are being made the scapegoat for a bumbling Program Board or Cultural Arts Committee. Some events draw big numbers and make big money. Others are targeted to a select few and sustain acceptable losses. Some are so incredibly insane that they bring the terms "malfeasance" and "mismanagement of funds" to mind. It wasn't student apathy that signed a contract with Jimmy "Dy-no-mite" Walker.

More often though, we hear the word apathy used with regard to Harper's sports teams, the Harbinger, WHCM and the Student Senate. It is important to remember that Harper is not one of the big schools, it's more like a scaled down version--a practice field. At Harper, the sports teams don't exist for the fans, they exist for the players. This new paper and the radio station don't exist to serve readers and listeners, they exist to serve their staffs. Saying that the Student Senate is important doesn't make it true. It's not. If any of the teams or this paper or the radio station or the senate were to disappear tomorrow, it would make not one iota of difference to any Harper student except the players, the writers, the DJs and the senators.

And this isn't a bad thing. It's great that Harper provides the teams, the newspaper, the radio station and the senate for those of us who wish to take advantage of them. Apathy is the term that players, writers, DJs and senators lash out with when they forget this basic precept of their position and develop a hunger for recognition. From this point of view, the student body is not apathetic--it's just right. Players, writers, DJs and senators must remember that they are here for themselves--that their brightest moments are theirs and theirs alone. They should struggle for the sake of the struggle and toward that end they should maintain their focus. Measurements of success should be made against personal standards and not on the basis of response from fans, readers, listeners or constituents.

If recognition for my columns were meat and potatoes I would have starved long since, but I have other reasons for writing them and the Harbinger satisfies those reasons perfectly. Recognition is more like a special, seldom-served dessert.

To the greedy, manipulative and successful students at Harper:

We are the Young Corporate Achievers, and we hope to see YOU at our next meeting, Friday at 12 pm in room 255.

What can you expect from this club? A visit to the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, on the floor with traders. A visit to Motorola, where automation has replaced manpower in the making of cellular phones. Young Corporate Achievers strives to keep meeting. We have businessmen and women give talks on their careers, to shed some light on what it takes to make it in the competitive business world.

You may be shouting now, "Sounds terrific!" Well, on the club's expense we have beach parties and pizza parties, to name a few. Your ideas and input shape the agenda for future meetings and activities. You have a choice!

Today's question: What is Formulator, Inc.? Give up? It is a Harper College owned and student run company. That's right! In fact, only Harvard and one other top school in the country have the same opportunity. Although Formulator is separate from the club, many of its employees are drawn from the Young Corporate Achievers. We like to think of this company as an internship, there is not much money, but it makes any resume stand out. Also, you now have experience.

Are you still awake? Now doing? This isn't a lecture, this is your future! Call us at extension .970 to let us know if you are interested in club, or be at our next meeting.

To money, success, and Fame,

The Young Corporate Achievers

Almodovar habla una idioma universal (Almodovar speaks a universal language)

Julieta Serrano performs in "Women on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown."

By Michael Schweisheimer
Staff Writer

Hitchcock means quality film to almost all Americans. In Spain the name to look for is Pedro Almodovar. He is a young director who started out as a telephone operator in Madrid and, without a decade, went on to write, sing, perform and finally direct.

This month Harper College is scheduled to show three of Almodovar's most talked about films including, "Women on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown." "Women on the Verge" was nominated for the 1993 Academy Award for best foreign film. This film, his seventh feature, is a complex film about a woman obsessed, and a man avoiding.

Always successful, Almodovar's films are a feast for the eyes. This film can be seen on Thursday, September 28.

The films will all be shown in the Building 1 Theater, J 143 at 7:30. Admission is $2.00 for Harper students with an activity card and $3.00 for the public.

The first film in the series, "What Have I Done to Deserve This?" will be shown on September 14. This film stars Carmen Maura as the heroine of this very feminist film.

On September 21, "Law of Desire" will be shown. Again Carmen Maura stars in this sexy film of an absurd romance.

All films will be shown in the original Spanish with English subtitles. Any language barrier encountered will be overcome by the universal language of film, which Almodovar speaks fluently.

All of Almodovar's films are known for their humor and irony. His films are so ironic, in fact, that in Spain the press uses the term Almodovarian to describe an ironic situation or personality.

His humor and style are based on his past experiences. He uses the bright colors of women's fashion, margaritas and the humorous style of movies from the fifties, sixties and early seventies to create the atmosphere which is strictly Almodovarian.

Definitely a director worth experiencing, this film series will afford an opportunity to know Almodovar through his films.

Antonio Banderas and Maria Barranto face off.

Jerry B. Moore with Bonnie Lee will be performing at Harper. Story is on page 8.

Culture Quest

Young Peasants on Their Way to a Dance by August Sander

Crossing the Ohio, Louisville
by Danny Lyon

Art has many faces and forms. The whole feel of a culture can sometimes be examined through its art. The western world has embraced the still action of a camera, perhaps to capture a single pure moment from a world of intense change.

The Art Institute of Chicago is featuring The Art of Fixing a Shadow, an exhibit on over 150 years of photography. The history of photography as an art form will be covered by almost 400 black and white and color prints from over 200 photographers.

The Art of Fixing a Shadow traces the evolution of photography through each new artistic movement, technical improvement and cultural mandate.

The show will be on exhibit from September 16 through November 26, in the Daniel F. and Ada I. Rice Building of the Art Institute.

William Henry Fox Talbot, an Englishman, invented the negative-positive process of photography, making it possible to duplicate prints from a single negative. He called this process "the art of fixing a shadow."

The age and topics of the photos makes them a useful tool to examine our own past. The exhibit aims to show how the aesthetic potential of photography grew and has become realized.

The Art Institute will also be giving free public lectures to go along with the exhibit starting in September and running through November.

The Johnny B. Moore Blues Band with Bonnie "Bombshell" Lee will be the main event at Harper's annual Ice Cream Social, sponsored by the Program Board, will be on Wednesday, September 13 at noon.

If the weather permits, it will be held outside in front of Building A. If it rains, the event will be held inside, in the Building A Lounge.

The band gained notoriety recently by performing at the Chicago Bluesfest. The band can be described as versatile. It combines classic, urban, country, delta, R&B and swing blues.

Moore originated from Clarkdale, Mississippi, but now resides on Chicago's west side. He has risen quickly through the Chicago blues ranks.

Moore backed the indomitable Koko Taylor as one time. His debut LP Hard Times can be found on the B.I.U.E.S. R&B label.

Lee is from Texas and has performed with Muddy Waters, among others. Johnny Winter recorded her signature song I'm Good.

"I expect them to be a really good show," says Justine Lovitch, Afternoon Activities Director for the Program Board. The real highlight of the event will be the sundaes, on sale for 25 cents.

Meet Stuart Kravis

By Michael Waskiewicz
Happening Editor

If you've even been to tutoring, you've probably seen Stuart Kravis. Stuart Kravis, 19, has been an English and math tutor for over a year.

"When students are having a tough time in class or just have a question, I feel I can help. It gives me a great deal of satisfaction," boasts Kravis. "I really enjoy it."

Kravis is attending his last semester at Harper with two years behind him. He plans on transferring to the University of Illinois-Champaign and continue studying business and pre-law. After graduating the University of Illinois, Kravis would "hopefully" like to go to law school at the University of Chicago.

On his spare time Kravis enjoys bowling, fishing, going out with his girlfriend, Kristi, borrowing his brother's Calculus book, and visiting other friends in college.

"If there's anyone who is having trouble in their classes they should come to tutoring. They shouldn't be afraid. Everyone here is real casual. They'll actually have fun, and probably learn something too!"

It's Pretty B.A.S.I.C.

By Michael Wasiewicz
Happening Editor

"Students come to college for the intellectual part of their lives. Sometimes, though, students need to fill other parts. That's what B.A.S.I.C. does, fill that other part," tells Paula Tabor, Baptist Student Minister.

B.A.S.I.C., Brothers And Sisters In Christ, is a student-run organization set up to fill the students' religious part of school. B.A.S.I.C. welcomes people from all denominations. They do not discriminate. Their goal is to try and help students grow emotionally and spiritually by applying the Bible to real life.

B.A.S.I.C. is not just about the Bible, though. B.A.S.I.C. prides itself in its community contributions by going to conferences, seminars, and even soup kitchens. B.A.S.I.C. makes several trips a year to inner-city shelters to look and serve food for the homeless.

"Most students who join the Brothers And Sisters In Christ want a little more than their normal religious practice."

—Jan Halsical

Basically, B.A.S.I.C. is an organization where people can just hang out. Most students who join the Brothers And Sisters In Christ want a little more than their normal religious practice. They need to be part of a group. Says Jan Halsical, Student Outreach Chair person:

B.A.S.I.C. provides students a chance to meet other people at school and lend them the opportunity to contribute to the community. Anyone interested or needing information on B.A.S.I.C. should contact Paula Tabor at 997-1000, extension 2242 or 2081.

Hawks win home opener

Harper blanks Dubuque while scoring eight TDs

Harper College's football season is off to its winning ways again this year. The Hawks destroyed the University of Dubuque junior varsity 54-0 in Harper's home opener Sept. 2.

Led by James Haywood's two touchdowns, the Hawks cruised to a 41-point lead in the first half.

Neither team threatened in their first possessions. After exchanging punts, Dubuque found themselves on the 49-yard line of the Hawks. The Spartans promptly fumbled the ball, with Harper recovering on Dubuque's 47-yard line.

Two plays later found Haywood standing in the end zone and the Hawks on top 6-0. Kicker Tyler Hill added his first of six extra points to help Harper take a seven-point lead.

Midway through the first quarter, Harper came up with its second turnover, an interception by Chip Holman. About three minutes later Harper quarterback Lars Spodin hit Brad Jones for the Hawks second TD.

After receiving a Spartans' punt, Harper drove for its third score, a Spodin-to-Haywood pass play for a 20-0 first quarter lead.

Dubuque coughed up the ball again early in the second quarter. Harper's Larnest Calhoun recovered, giving the Hawks a fourth scoring opportunity. Capitalizing on the chance, Spodin threw his third TD pass of the half allowing Harper to assume a 27-point lead.

The Spartans threatened Harper's shutout in the second quarter when they drove deep into the Hawks' territory. Harper had given up five straight first downs, but was able to hold Dubuque scoreless.

The Hawks' Tom Fuhler recovered Dubuque's third fumble and ran it in for a touchdown. Harper's Jerry Chaney took over at QB and proceeded to hit Juan Taylor for a 45-yard gain to the Spartans 2-yard line.

Brian Canoy ran it in from the 2 to give Harper a 41-0 lead going into the locker room.

Both teams opened the second half without a serious threat. It wasn't until RB Marcus King took over and collected more than half of his 115 yards in driving the Hawks to their seventh touchdown.

Harper Coach John Eliausk had substituted most of his starters in the fourth quarter, but that didn't stop the Hawks from marching down to score one more time with a minute left in the game.

The victory is the first and only win for Harper in the new season. The Hawks will travel to Grand Rapids, Michigan to face off against Grand Rapids Community College. Game time is 1:30 pm.

After six years, golfers ready to tee off again

By Chris Cotsiopoulos
Staff Writer

Golf is returning to Harper College following a six year hiatus.

Eliminated as a participation sport in 1983 due to financial difficulties and the resignation of the coach, according to Dean of Physical Education John Glick, it's making a return in the 1989 season.

Cross-country, added to Harper's sports to replace golf, will play roll reversal this year. It is being dropped in place of golf.

There were a lot of factors, said Athletic Director Roger Bechhold regarding the athletic department's decision to drop cross-country in favor of golf. "It seems there will be more participants in golf. It's also a conference sport."

In addition, Cross-Country Coach Roger Thiberge stepped down at the end of last year, fueling the switch.

Head coach for this year's squad is Jim Karras, a former student and golf participant at Harper in 1976-79. Karras said he is looking to set a base this year that could make the Hawks a solid contender in years to come.

The team will feature Scott Brokaw, Rick Diem, Brian Frank, John Gillespie, Paul Kenney, Sean McInerney, Tim

McLean and Dave Wascher.

Karras said he feels the team's strength is in its short game, where he has been working with them the most. He also mentioned his goals for the year include winning conference and possibly a national appearance.

The team "meets" out five players in every meet and scores from the top four players are kept. Pat is traditionally 28% for a team round. Karras said he hopes this year to break 300 as a team.

The Hawks' open their season at The Village Links in Glen Elly against College of DuPage. Players began teeing off at 1:50 pm.

Race on for Student Senate

By Phillip Benson
Staff Writer

Question: What are your specific plans if elected to the Student Senate?

Karen Westrich, Psychology

"Student Senate seems to be the perfect opportunity to become involved in Student Activities. Psychology is an essential part of the Student Senate. You must realize how to communicate with people in order to get anything resolved. I would use this opportunity to increase the student voice regarding issues pertinent to the Harper environment."

Physical Education

Lou Nantz, Jr., Undecided

"I have a good rapport with the administration and the team. I'm aware of the problems they have and can help them out any way I can. Harper offers tremendous opportunities and I'd like to help the bridge open for students to help them aware of what Harper has to offer. This is a chance to represent the college and the Physical Education Department equally."

Technology, Math and Science

Paul Dylstra, Physics

"I attended several senate meetings. A lot of ideas came out of those meetings and, with the right input, I can see things running more smoothly. I think cooperation and working together as a team is necessary to get things done. I would like to get involved, try to make a difference and meet a few new friends."

Business and Social Science

Edward Wallace, Business

"Having served on student needs for a full term last year, I have an accurate idea of what duties it calls for. I strive to keep myself aware of student concerns. I keep myself involved in many clubs and activities, including President of the Young Corporate Achievers, the Science Club, the College Republicans and the Program Board."

Chris Cotzopoulou, Journalism

"I feel I would be an excellent addition to the Student Senate because of the leadership that I have shown. I was co-captain of the cross country team a year ago and am currently in my second year as a supervisor for the Harbinger. I possess leadership qualities and I'd like to see the Senate prosper under that leadership."

Liberal Arts

Michael Trippodi, Liberal Arts

"I'd like to help the Liberal Arts Division to be aware of the disabled students here at Harper. I was a senator representing the Special Services and Programs Division last year and I also chaired the Student Senate committees overseeing the student leaders election. I would like people to be aware that deaf people can do almost anything."

Donald Bussey, Liberal Arts

"These areas I feel require student leadership are an unacceptable traffic situation at both campus exits, lack of student involvement and participation in college-sponsored activities and the perception that personal safety on campus is in question. I want the students to understand what I am trying to do. Freshmen identified and solutions implemented."

Student Senate elections were held Monday, September 17 and Tuesday, September 18 from 9 am to 8 pm.

Seven candidates ran for openings in the five divisions of Technology, Mathematics and Physical Science; Business and Social Science; Life Science and Human Services; Liberal Arts; Physical Education, Athletics and Recreation.

"The ballot boxes will remain sealed for 24 hours after voting ends," said Jeanne Parkman, Director of Student Activities and Student Senator Advisor. The winners will be announced today.

Results of the Student Senate elections will be announced in next week's Harbinger.

Harper reaches for students

By Marc Balke
Staff Writer

Harper's outreach to in-district High School students has proved to increase enrollment. The program reaches out to prospective students who may have an interest in attending Harper.

Steve Catlin, Dean of Admissions, attributed Harper's growth to its main feeder schools, districts 211 and 214, Barrington HS and St. Victor HS.

Students are attending Harper because it has smaller classes, a professional faculty, educational programs, close proximity to Chicago and low tuition.

Constant efforts are in full force to persuade students to attend Harper.

"Currently, we were mailing directly to the prospective student, the parents, and use the Student Ambassador program," stated Catlin.

This program selects students to become involved in student support activities that are designed to assist new and prospective students.

They go through training and participate in recruitment, publication of a newsletter, telephone campaign, student presentations and developing correspondence for new applicants.

The program sends a graduate of the high school besides attending with an Admissions Office employee.

The ambassador talks to students about the many classes and programs that are available. Students are given a personal insight and are invited to tour the campus and experience "campus life" for themselves. This gives the High School student an opportunity to talk to people their own age and get a feel for the campus.

Students are reminded of the full tuition scholarships that are available to those who graduate in the top five percent of their class.

Materials are currently being taken to represent the same ideas and apply them to Jr. High Students, this will enable them to get an idea of what Harper has to offer.

The class of '93 will face tougher requirements when enrolling at Harper. They will need to have completed four years of English, three years of social studies, three years of math, three years of science, and two years of a language, music or art.

These tougher stipulations, Catlin said, "will better prepare students when transferring to a four-year institution." Thus making Harper a more reputable community college.

Catlin said that the outreach is an ongoing process that is changed and modified according to the students' needs. In the future, students will be targeted according to the degree program they are pursuing, making the process even more detailed.

Last call for Happy Hour

New law bans price reductions

By Erik Wurrier
News Editor

A recently passed law in Illinois brought Happy Hour and other price reductions to an end.

Happy Hour encourages people to drink more and to drink faster," said James Long, executive director of the Illinois Alcoholism and Drug Dependence Association. "This brings up blood alcohol levels rapidly."

The move began when two towns in Senator William Mahur's (R-Illinois) district passed their own laws banning Happy Hour. Mahur, who sponsored the Illinois Senate bill, said, "It needed to be made a state-wide law to have an effect. Local businessmen expressed their concern over people going to drink in other towns."

The law is "another weapon in an arsenal, and we need an arsenal to fight alcohol," said Long.

The law prohibits five basic tenants: one person may not buy two drinks at a time for himself; an unlimited number of drinks may not be sold for a fixed period of time at a fixed price; prices of a drink may not be lowered for one day; drink size can't be increased without proportionately increasing price; and drinks may not be used as rewards for games.

Intended to lower alcohol-related arrests, the law eliminates traditional hours of high alcohol consumption.

This law is not meant to inhibit legitimate business practices, continues Long.

Businessmen are still allowed to offer free food; include drinks as part of a meal package; include drinks as a hotel package; and to sell pickers to two or more people.

Violating this act may result in the suspension of the bartender's license.

The law was signed by the Governor of Illinois on August 11, 1989, and immediately took effect.

Mark Stankle, a student and bartender, said, "It's almost a senseless law. People might get less drunk, but they're still going to be dangerous when they get on the road."

Another student, Debs Polatka, said, "If people are going out drinking, they're going to drink regardless of cost—since you're there for Happy Hour, you're going to stay after prices go up."

Questions regarding the law and what business practices are still allowable should be directed to the Illinois State Liquor Commission in Chicago.

Students Aren't Educated

College professors think their students are not very well educated.

Three-fourths of the 5,100 college teachers queried last spring by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching said their undergraduate students are "seriously under prepared in the basic skills."

Complete results of the survey, which the Washington, D.C.-based Carnegie group conducts every five years, will be released in November.

Professors at two-year schools complained more frequently, with 84 percent saying students lack basic skills. Sixty-five percent at liberal arts colleges said their pupils don't know enough.

Two-thirds of those surveyed thought colleges spend "too much time and money teaching students what they should have learned in high school."

The data, says Carnegie President Ernest Boyer, prove "the nation's public schools are disturbingly deficient."

Standardized Tests Biased?

Nearly two-thirds of the students who became National Merit Scholarship semifinalists in 1989 were males, and the phenomenon was more proof that standardized tests are biased against females, a test critic group said in early September.

After combing through public records released by the Educational Testing Service (ETS), FairTest, based in Cambridge, Mass., reported that only 12 percent of the semifinalist last year were female, even though they earned better grades in high school.

Females are under-represented because the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test (PSAT)—the test used to award the scholarships—is slanted against women, charged FairTest's Sarah Stockwell.

Tests aren't the problem, claims Nancy Burton of ETS, the company that writes the PSAT. "Men and Women aren't getting equal educations. We can't agree that any question women don't do well on should be thrown out."

Test critics scored a major victory last February when a federal judge ruled that New York state could not rely solely on Scholastic Aptitude Test scores to award scholarships because the test questions reflect a male bias.

This year, the first one in which grades were factored into the New York scholarship formula, females won $2.8 million more in scholarships than they did in 1988.

Janice Gams of the College Board, which sponsors the tests, says the disparity between scores is because women take more liberal arts courses, which tend to be easier than math and science courses, which males are more likely to take.

Harbinger MIA

By Erik Wurzer
News Editor

Resulting from a custodial accident, the Harbinger failed to be printed last week.

When Lisa Aust, Harbinger's Managing Editor, arrived on September 13 to give the paper to Des Plaines Publishing's courier, she was unable to find it.

"I looked everywhere at first, under the couch, on the floor, and in all the offices... then I made a list of what could have happened to the paper," said Aust.

Only four people have keys to the office: Tan Vaughn, Editor-in-Chief; Allison Strauss, Photo Editor; Mark Balke, Business Manager; and Aust, Managing Editor. The only others with access to keys are Student Activities, Public Safety, and the custodians.

A phone call to Public Safety confirmed nobody was let into the office that night.

The search was taken to the custodians supervisor, Charles Hearn, who promised to investigate and get back in the paper the next day.

Aust asked to check the trash containers, but was not allowed because of health codes. Shortly after, she looked at her own.

When I got there, the computers were starting to close. I stood there and watched and got a sinking feeling. When they opened, there was so much junk that even if the paper was there, it was unrecognizable.

When Balke arrived at 7 pm, he and Aust went to talk with Don DeBasc, Administration Director, to get answers. A brief call to Charles Hearn, overall custodial supervisor, and a 15 minute wait got answers: a custodian admitted to throwing out the paper accidentally.

After a staff meeting the same day, Vaughn made a list of requests to reconcile the situation.

The requests, made to Dr. Bonnie Henry, Vice President of Student Affairs, were: Reimbursement for charges from Des Plaines Publishing for not printing the Harbinger; reimbursement for any refunds to advertisers; reimbursement for salesperson's commissions on ads for the September 14 issue; reprinting of the 1,000 destroyed flyers, and a letter of explanation from the college to all affected advertisers.

The next day, the letter, the flyers and commissions were all replaced. No refunds had to be given to advertisers and charges from Des Plaines Printing have not been assessed.

There was "no pressure put on the responsible custodian, he was just doing his job," said Jim Hauser, 3rd floor supervisor of the custodian.

The custodians claim the paper was near the trash, while the Harbinger staff claims it was left on the table in the center of the room.

"I'm really happy with the response from the school and cooperation from the administration," said Vaughn. "Throughout all this we got a lot of support from other clubs and organizations, and appreciate it."

Teachers bike across America

By Phyllis Benson
Staff Writer

For two years, Associate Professors John (Jack) Dadds and Peter Sherer planned to take a trip across the United States. This summer they carried out that plan.

On bicycles. "The country is the big ride to cyclists," said Dadds, who has been cycling casually since 1960. Sherer for the last 15 years.

There are organizations that take people across the U.S., said Dadds, but after careful study of maps, they decided on their own route.

Dadds and Sherer started in San Diego, California, after visiting relatives, seeing childhood homes in Kansas and Nebraska and allowing time for a four-day stopover in Chicago. They finished the 3,427 mile adventure 49 days later in New Jersey.

"Before you start," said Dadds, "you think of it as an athletic and logistic experience, wondering how you're going to bike so many miles. But, as more time goes by, you see it as a human experience."

Armed with 18-speed touring bikes, Dadds and Sherer carried packs, weighing 35-40 pounds each (including a tent, sleeping bags and spare bike parts).

Averaging 80-100 miles per day (the longest was 115 miles) the two professors, alone most of the trip, faced the elements and assigned a point value "to all the awful things that could happen," said Dadds.

The misery index, as it was called, included snow, rain, heat, humidity, headwinds, locust storms, sandstorms, hills and bad roads. They hit them all.

"We were heading east from Colorado Springs to Lyman, Colorado," said Sherer, "and were followed by a large, black, monstrous thunderstorm. We watched it out in a small town and left when it stopped. We wanted to hit Lyman before dark."

"But," said Dadds, "when we left, we were in the eye of the storm. We hit it again on the open prairie. We had 15-20 miles to go in a blinding storm with night falling. A kind woman at a motel in Lyman washed and dried our clothes for us."

But it was the people and the incredible scenery they remember best.

"The value of the trip was in meeting the people and seeing things and places in a way I never have before..." said Dadds. "I wouldn't have driven through all of those small towns."

"When the landscape is up close and gradual," said Sherer, "you study the land, the people and towns, rather than glancing like when you're in a car."

In Colorado, they spend all day riding up one mountain and day riding up one mountain and you go slow. The memory stays strong and vivid."

On a Navajo reservation in Tuba City, Arizona, Dadds and Sherer got caught in a blinding, red sandstorm.

The only motel was ridiculously expensive," said Dadds, "and the town was on a mesa so we couldn't pitch a tent. We were the only Anglon and finally met another one. He invited us into his home for supper with his wife and four kids and to stay overnight."

"That was typical behavior of the people we met," he said. "Not every place was friendly, however."

At Salt and Sea, an inland sea in the desert in California, said Dadds, "we stopped in the tiny town of Mecca. There was no place to stay. The people were mostly migrant workers and very unfriendly. We were told in no uncertain terms not to stay after sunset."

So Dadds and Sherer slept in the desert near the side of a mountain and the desert floor.

"About five miles away," Dadds said, "was Interstate 10. All we could see were these lights moving across the horizon. We couldn't hear anything. It was like something out of science fiction."

Other adventures awaited them. The food, for the most part, was a lot of grease they said. They hit a star road in Ohio and Dadds' bike, but not Sherer's, got covered with it.

They saw a teenage boy in Amish country riding his horse and buggy, a pair of furry dice hanging over the top. They endured the desert 95-100 days, all day, where a trend had buried water for them half way across the 110 mile Mojave.

"The worst state to ride through," said Dadds, "was Pennsylvania. Not only do the roads go straight up and over the mountains, the drivers were the worst. They threw beer, rocks and glass at us."

Iowa was second. "When we hit Iowa we said we joined the 4-H club—heat, headwind, humidity and hills."

The land, with its contrasting beauty and desolation, left its imprint.

"I was struck by how much desert is out west," said Sherer. "There is miles and miles of it from San Diego and, except for the mountains, straight through to eastern Colorado."

"Imagine the wagon trains," said Dadds. "How dispiriting it must have been to see, day after day, nothing but desolation. We went about 50 miles a day. They went about ten."

Dadds and Sherer plan another trip next summer up the Mississippi from the Gulf to the Canadian border. They have become better friends, and individuals, because of this.

"When you're miles from no place," said Dadds, "you get to know your friends, and yours, if, a little better."

When Betty Dwyer, part-time student from Liverness, made her first three-armed-dress at age 12, she never imagined it would open the door to a career as a seamstress.

"My mom taught me the basics of sewing," said Dwyer, "how to operate a sewing machine on a straight or zigzag stitch and how to follow a pattern."

Dwyer took it from there. She did not take any home economics classes in grade school, clothes from easy patterns for articles like pajamas. They had simple patterns back then," said Dwyer. "They were eighty-five cents at the time and now they're $6.00 a piece."

Dwyer did not enjoy reading the patterns. "I looked at the pictures and made alterations based on how I thought the garments should be done."

In eighth grade, I made a doll that looked like one of the Osmonds," said Dwyer. "I had a pattern for the doll but not for the outfit. I made him a jumpsuit that looked exactly like the picture. I realized at that point, if Originally, she wanted to be a dancer but her dad suggested she learn how to sew. She joined a dance group while at Southern Illinois University. But, the only dancing jobs she landed were as Sylvester the Cat and Wife E. Coover at Great America during the summer of 1976.

Her aunt at Great America helped pave the way for a career in costumeing. "I helped redesign the costumes which had wiggle-heads, no armbands, and fiberglass heads," said Dwyer. "The costumes were very hot. Take fur and fiberglass. I added a false-moisture undercoat the result to make breathing easier."

Dwyer suggested additional changes to make the following year's costumes a little more comfortable for the performers. As designs for improvements were used for the next year's costumes, lightweight heads made out of foam instead of fiberglass.

Dwyer constructed award-winning Harper outfits for her fellow Delta Zeta sorority members at SIU.

Yet, her career as a seamstress/costume designer didn't take off until her oldest son Christopher was two weeks old. Dwyer created a tiny clown costume to match her own clown costume.

After her second son, Kevin, was born, she created replicas of farmmen's coats for both boys and converted their double stroller into a face engine with a bell and red felt lights.

Since then, Dwyer has made costumes for everything from poodle-skirts and ghostbusters to a cockroach for Harper's last Post Fest.

Recently Harper College staged a production of "The Frog Prince" written by Donald Leonard Jr. and David Renier. The play an adaptation of the Brothers Grimm classic, tells the story of a frog waiting to be kissed by a princess.

Dwyer made seven costumes for the play—two costumes for the frog prince and one each for the king, the princess, the courtier, the wicked witch, and the sorcerer.

"I've given me pictures of how he wanted the costumes to look," said Dwyer. "I had to do research to find out what was already in the pattern books, and create something from different patterns and my imagination."

Dwyer utilized fabrics in deep blues, emeralds and golds to give the king a regal appearance. "The costumes (make) the Disney-type characters in the play come to life," said Leonard.

The self-taught seamstress created designs that resembled "The Frog Prince" pictures based on her ideas, and assorted pattern designs.

Even though Dwyer has had experience designing clothes, she did admit that she would like to take Fashion Design classes such as costume history and draping, and perhaps, one day design clothes for the stars.

Putting together the Harbinger

By Marc J. Balke
Business Manager

Producing a weekly 12-page newspaper may seem easier than it is. The process is long and takes many people to produce it. The Harbinger, the student-run newspaper of Harper College is no exception.

There are three management positions: Editor-in-Chief, Managing Editor and Business Manager. They oversee the entire operation, and each work approximately 40 hours per week. Working with them are seven supporting editors: news; features; entertainment; happening; sports; layout and photography, all of whom are responsible for the copy and layout of their page.

Under the editors is a staff of fifteen, including writers.

Each Tuesday a staff meeting is held to discuss the upcoming issue. The number of pages is then decided, depending on that week's revenue generated through the advertising department. Story ideas are discussed, page and photo assignments are handed out.

By Friday all the advertisements to be put in the issue are laid out according to the advertisers specifications. Most of the ads in the paper are designed by the business staff.

Monday morning all stories are due and are to be stored in the computer network. Stories are then edited for grammar, punctuation, style, and overall readability. Photos are later developed and are given to the individual editors for layout.

On Tuesday the final production of the paper is set into motion, while late-breaking stories are being written and final editing is being done, the pages are laid out. The process of layout and design is the most time-consuming. The staff begins at 9 am Tuesday morning, and often finishes at 3 am, Wednesday.

More than twenty hours of writing, editing, re-editing, photo developing and laying out are invested in each page.

Early Wednesday morning the issue is re-proofread and rolled out. By 10 am the paper is sent to the printer, where 5 thousand copies are made. Later in the evening the paper is distributed throughout the campus in time for Thursday morning classes.

The staff is not paid, most are volunteers. The staff has dedicated itself to the Harbinger and its reputation, a paper that has served the Harper College Community for more than twenty years.

The Harbinger is 75% self-reliant, making it a separate business from the college. Friday

Tuesday afternoon the entire process starts over, again.

Editorial Bits and Pieces

It's a shame that three senate seats went uncontested. How can students not be apathetic about the student senate race when there is no race to begin with?

The recent addition of William Rainey Harper's bust is a long awaited addition to Harper's campus. We have not only a discernable piece of art, but we now know Harper was a real person.

Congratulations to Darlene Iverson on Clubs and Organizations Days. This year was the most successful so far.

It's about time Harper finally installed the automatic sliding doors in A Building. While this is another step toward disability awareness, we hope it doesn't stop here. Accessibility for the disabled needs to be spread throughout the campus. (Such as the new sidewalk connecting A Building with M Building so people in wheel chairs are no longer forced to go through the parking lot.)

By presenting lectures this year on controversial issues, the college has shown its willingness to educate in the face of a conservative community.

Kudos for one solution to several of last year's problems in the Game Room. By placing the game issue room at the far end of hilllands area, potentially intimidating traffic was eliminated from in front of the Student Activities Office.

Smokers have rights, too

Dear Editor,

I have been a witness to the mounting controversy concerning smoking on Harper's campus.

There are more non-smokers today than there are smokers. Because of this, people think they can tell the minority what they can or cannot do. They don't care whether it pertains to an individual's personal rights.

Smoking is a personal right. I can understand that some people are allergic to cigarette, cigar, and pipe smoke. However, the buildings on campus seem to have paper ventilation. So, this should not be used as an excuse to suppress others.

Currently, there are many places where smoking is prohibited, such as conference rooms, lecture halls, classrooms, rest rooms, hallways except where designated, and M building. I feel that this is more than adequate.

Rumor has it that smoking or use of any tobacco paraphernalia will possibly be banned everywhere on the college campus (including outside areas like the grounds). Which is bogus, because when you are outside all the exhaled smoke almost immediately dissipates. Also, most cigarette butts are biodegradable.

Reform of the rules is needed because there are many inconveniences, such as some one is able to chew tobacco products where smoking is prohibited. I have witness people spitting on floors, chairs, and in cups left out where they can be spilled to cause a disgusting mess that I personally would not like to clean up.

Just because some people are on a health kick and are refraining from smoking, doesn't mean I have to quit along with them. I find their actions to be offending.

Community spirit not dead

I had to reread the editorial by Peter Sweeney entitled "Is There Anybody Out There?" several times. I found it difficult to believe that anyone in college could have such a childish and ignorant opinion. He might be living proof that anyone with a pulse can get into Harper.

Mr. Sweeney encourages Student Senators, WHCM, Diso, Jockers, Program Board members, Harbinger workers, and athletes to accept the fact that students are not involved because that is the way it has always been. Perhaps Mr. Sweeney belonged in the 19th Century South, where there had been slaves for over 200 years, so the general population accepted it. Or perhaps Mr. Sweeney should have been in war time Germany, where it had been standard practice to kill Jews for over a decade.

To ask student leaders to accept apathy of any kind is not only ludicrous, but contrary to their purpose. To suggest that apathy should be accepted is a slap in the face to Laura Jacobson, Douglas Ray, Lisa Aust, John Gardner, Kevin Brown, Tony Laramie, Janice Word, Ed Wallace and countless other student leaders that have graced the halls of Harper College over the past two years.

Mr. Sweeney finally states that student leaders are the only ones who would notice if their posts were eliminated. I do not know enough about the Harbinger, WHCM, athletes or Program Board to create an intelligent argument, but I do know enough about the Student Senate to view the absurdity of that statement.

I do believe that students would have noticed if the Student Senate had not stopped the Environmental Health and Safety Committee from taking away the privilege to drink in class. I do believe that students will appreciate the observation that the last two Senates were instrumental in funding. I do believe that students have and do notice and use the legal services on campus that a former Student Senate set up and funded.

Maybe, just maybe, if more students were involved the Senate could have done more. Maybe there would be no tuition increase. Maybe there would be in every classroom. Maybe there would be a soccer team.

Are these things only for the Senates? I do not believe so. I do not believe that last year's Student Senate put on a collective 120-hour every week solely for their own benefit.

Perhaps Mr. Sweeney should take a closer look at himself and his goals as a member of the Harbinger and not assume that everybody else has no community spirit solely because he does not.

I consider the Harbinger the best hope for an active student body. It is disappointing to see that cynical, ignorant people can become its editors.

Anthony Garcia
Former Student Senator

First step falls short

During the last two years, the student leaders have been trying to persuade Harper to recycle paper, glass, and aluminum cans. One of Student Trustee Darlene Iverson's major focuses this semester is to convince Harper to do just that. Last semester the Harbinger began recycling our leftover papers.

The Harper community has also become increasingly aware of environmental problems. Palatine and Schaumburg have implemented massive recycling programs, and both communities have received overwhelming participation. People have become concerned about environmental issues. These issues will become more important in future years. Unfortunately, Harper seems to have been holding on to a destructive, bad habit.

Needless to say, the Harbinger was elated to see a recycling box appear, almost magically, in the A Building Lounge. Apparently, the boxes multiply rapidly, because within the last week the Lounge has become saturated with recycling boxes. It's too bad they don't spread over the rest of the campus. A casual observance of F & D Buildings during night classes would reveal garbage containers overflowing with aluminum cans. Sadly, there is not a single box in either building.

We counted 17 soda machines spread around the campus, four of which are in the A Building Lounge. Of the eight recycling boxes on campus, five were found in A Building, two in J Building, one in I Building (far from a soda machine, but next to a garbage can). We also found a homemade box in C Building.

While interviewing students and faculty on campus, it became obvious that the Harper community is more than willing to recycle if the means to do so are made convenient. A glance inside of the A Building boxes will show that students will do their part if these boxes are accessible. A glance at the garbage piles outside of the library will show what happens when refuse containers are not made available.

While the Harbinger applauds the efforts made to be ecologically-minded, these efforts have fallen short of meaningful. It appears it was a good idea that fizzled.

It is about time Harper gets into the 80's (it's almost the 90's) and take recycling as seriously as it deserves to be taken.

The Bankstatement is respectable

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

Most days I wouldn't want to receive a bank statement unless I know that my balance is respectable (which it never is). Last month, however, I received a bank statement that I enjoy over and over again: Bankstatement, the self-titled "debut" album from Tony Banks' new band, improves with each listening.

Perhaps fueled by the success of fellow Genesis member Mike Rutherford's solo project, Mike & the Mechanics, Banks formed a legitimate band for his latest solo project. There are definite drawbacks to this, as I will mention momentarily.

Banks' first solo release came ten years ago and was called Carious Feeling. It is easily one of the best albums of the seventies, running right up there with such classics as Fleetwood's Madman, Across the Water, and Pink Floyd's The Wall. The fact that not many people have ever heard of it results in even more delight when it is finally discovered. Banks handled the vocals over to someone else though, reportedly not liking the sound of his own voice.

In 1983, Tony Banks followed up with The Fugitive, a more commercial and less successful solo outing. By this time, Genesis was a huge success, and the individual members were seeking their own personal outlets. This time Banks handled the vocals by himself, and he proved his own worth as a vocalist. Mike Rutherford, like Banks, has said that he doesn't like the sound of his voice. In Rutherford's case, he is passing up judgment. His voice is weak and soulful, thus the presence of Paul Young and Paul Carrack in Mike & the Mechanics. Unfortunately, the same is not true of Banks, whose voice is strong and carries the feeling that the songs are trying to convey. But with the appearance of Bankstatement, Banks has once again handed most of the vocals over to others.

One of the best tracks on the album is called Big Man, and it's the only track on which Banks sings the lead vocal. Sharing most of the vocal duties on Bankstatement are Alastair Gordon (singing six songs) and Jayney Klineck (singing two songs). There is also one duet and one instrumental running out the eleven songs.

The first single Throwback is a disappointment that is unfortunately not repeated throughout the rest of the album. It's a decent song but the tired-old sound of a horn section belittles it.

The second track is called I'll Be Waiting and is one of the stronger songs, echoed later by the similar The More I Hide It. Queen of Darkness, sung by Klineck, is the song voted most likely to be skipped when the album is listened to. It's full of musical hooks that simply don't work. There's nothing more embarrassing than a failed hook.

Fortunately, the album bounces back from an initial count of one good track out of three. The Border and A House

Needs A Roof are two more of the good songs, and the album closes out on its strongest note, the instrumental Thursday the Twelfth.

Since the departure of Peter Gabriel, Banks has always written the best material for Genesis, and his solo material showcases his talent. He is an excellent (and somewhat underrated) keyboard player and lyricist. Hopefully his latest release will give him the attention that he deserves. Unfortunately the record company executives chose the wrong song to be the first single. Throwback should be thrown back. It will probably give the album an undeserving bad rap.

Yesterday tributes the Beatles

By Jamie Beeson
Staff Writer

The initial buzz of Beatlemania may have worn out over the years, but Yesterday brought it back to the Woodstock Opera House on Saturday night.

The event was sponsored by the McHenry County Youth Service Bureau, a not-for-profit agency serving youth and their families.

Yesterday was formed in 1986 by former members of different California-based Beatle acts, and all the members are proud of what they do. The band consists of Don Belizzen (John Lennon), Greg Piper (George Harrison), Tim Piper (Paul McCartney), and Dave Mealy (Ringo Starr).

"We all know each other through the different groups, and we just got together," said Greg Piper. "Personally, I have been a big fan of the Beatles ever since I saw them on the Ed Sullivan Show."

This authentic tribute is the Fab Four consisted of two time periods, the early years and the later years.

In the early years, they recreated the Beatles' style with matching suits, boots and mop-top haircuts. While showing clips from the act's on a video screen, they played some of the early hits, including She Loves You, Help, Taxi and Shout, and Hard Day's Night.

The later years had Yesterday in Sergeant Pepper attire, including the mustaches. They played a host of the classics, including Back in the USSR, Come Together, Hey Jude, and Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds. Mealy as Ringo did a Lantana version of With a Little Help from My Friends. Belizzen's version of Revolution was a knockout, and Tim Piper sang Yesterday as if he really was Paul McCartney.

Yesterday recreated this time period with style. Not only did they resemble the Beatles in sound, but in costume and in mannerism. Thumbs up for this authentic tribute to the Fab Four. "I feel great about what we're doing," said Belizzen. "We've met a lot of great people along the way."

Regency ruled the day

Andreia Little was coaxed into singing.

By Lisa Aust
Managing Editor

Regency was promised to reign in musical talent, and they did.

The five-man a cappella group from Baltimore wowed the audience with their unique entertainment style on September 8.

They picked various people from the audience to perform with them. Indeed, the thrust of their act was audience participation. They not only got the crowd enthused with this tactic, but they themselves seemed to feed off of the energy they had created.

Regency was all the more entertaining because the audience was not overwhelming. It was small enough to give a casual, free-form atmosphere to all of A Building.

There was a particular group of rowdy young women who enjoyed the show so much, they actively sought to participate. If any act could do this, it is fitting that Regency did.

Almodovar's antics

By Mike Schweisheimer
Staff Writer

The setting is the Harper College Theatre on Thursday, September 14. Michael Neiman, Activities Coordinator, walks onto the stage and makes an apology to the audience about the quality of the print of the film they are about to see. They are informed that it was a very difficult film to locate since it was the first one done by the director featured in the film festival.

Eventually, that didn't matter much. The film became amusing and captured the attention of the 40 audience members. The film able to overcome these rough viewing conditions was Pedro Almodovar's What Have I Done to Deserve This?

The film was a dark surrealistic comedy of the best kind, containing wonderful characters and even more wonderful ironies.

The audience did seem a little uneasy at first with the outrageous people doing unreal things. However, once the magic of Almodovar's humor and directing had gotten to them, it no longer mattered. They were just enjoying the movie. There was no reason not to, the admission was only $2 for Harper students and $3 for the public.

Harper will be showing two more of Almodovar's films in the next two weeks. Law of Desire will be shown on September 21, and Women on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown can be seen on the following Thursday, September 28 at 7:30 in room J143.

the Mick Jagger impersonator

Johnathan Brandmeier has many credits to his name inspiring an event for the Program Board has just been added Johnny B. earned of his quasi-educational role bright and early one Thursday morning when the Program Board paid him a visit.

In hopes of promoting the new long forgotten "Eat Me Night," Program Board wanted to get on the air with Johnny B.

Faking their way past the well built security guard, they managed to get to Jimmy "Bud" Wiser, who let them into the Loop offices. They sat on the bare floor (they are remodeling) for over two hours.

Johnny did find time to visit briefly with the Program Board, take a few photos and be presented with an "Eat Me" shirt. The cake was given to Wiser, who put it away somewhere.

He also later stepped in to tell them to "just stretch out and go to sleep." Later he suggested that they go to check out the Mick Jagger impersonator.

The morning ended with his staff taking down the name and number of the Program Board and the vague promise of a possible phone interview.

Who says the Rolling Stones would be rusty after an eight year break? Who says Mick Jagger doesn't enjoy touring? Well, just you ya ya's out, because he sure didn't show it.

Jagger's voice was marvelous, and the band was literally flawless. The sound quality was crisp and clear, and two video screens made it possible for everyone to see.

Performances by Jagger, Keith Richards, Ron Wood, Bill Wyman and Charlie Watts, were no less than electrifying.

The first four songs, Start Me Up, Back in the U.S.S.R., Shuffle and Shake, and Undercover of the Night, were enough to put the Alpine Valley crowd into a frenzy.

The set contained a bunch of songs from the new album, Steel Wheels, including Rock in a Hard Place, Sad Sad Sad, and Mixed Emotions.

The middle-aged rockers rolled on with all the favorites including Miss You, Ruby Tuesday, and Dead Flowers.

Honkey Tonk Women was especially well done. It was highlighted by two blow up women at least eighty feet tall, one of which was smoking a cigarette.

Richard's performance was sparkling in itself. His guitar solo was worth the price of admission. He took over the singing duties, and played Happy and Before They Made Me a Star.

The end of the set was the knockout punch. It contained a handful of the Stones' greats, including Pleased to Meet You, I Know It's This But I Won't, You Can't Always Get What You Want, Satisfaction, and Brown Sugar.

They left the stage as the rain came down hard and heavy, but returned to jam one last song, Jumpin' Jack Flash.

The rain continued to fall as the 1962 Overture was proudly blaring. An emcee of the event's went off, and the Rolling Stones left the stage for good, leaving the water-soaked crowd fully satisfied.

For those who think the Stones are touring just for the money, I feel there was too much time, effort and emotion put into Friday's show for that.

If the Stones ever tour again, I'm sure I won't be the only one eager to see them. Thumbs up for Jagger and the boys for their triumphant return into the limelight.

Women's Program Continues with Success after Twenty Years

By Andy Schneider
Staff Writer

The Women's Program at Harper College celebrates twenty years of helping displaced homemakers in the northwest suburban area to become bread winners.

What exactly is the Women's Program? It is a place for women who are divorced, widowed, or single to find help in preparing themselves for the job market. The program does this by individual counseling, workshops and a wide variety of seminars.

According to Rene Trevor, Women's Program Co-ordinator, there is no specific program outline. Every woman is looked at individually and has her own individually designed program set up for her own special needs.

Financial aid for workshops and seminars is also provided to those women who are assessed to be in need of it.

Most of the seminars last for five weeks, serve lunch, and cost twenty-seven dollars. Look in the What's Happening section of this newspaper for some dates, times, places, subject matter and cost of seminars.

Rene Trevor points out that the anyone may attend. Men, as well as women, may, and do, attend the seminars and the non-credit courses. Most of the population that use this "transitional" program end up taking credit courses and obtaining some kind of degree.

Rene also adds that the ultimate goal of the program is to place everyone in gainful employment. She stresses that gainful does not mean working at McDonald's for four dollars an hour. She defines gainful employment as "having the individual able to support their household, having upward mobility, and having some benefits." Only after one is gainfully employed by the preceding standards has the Women's Program succeeded.

Volleyball team offense, serving struggle

By Eric Bingham
Sports Editor

For Volleyball Coach Julie Ellefson-Kuchin, her team's first two weeks had its ups and downs.

In their first match of the season, the Lady Hawks were defeated by North Central Community College Conference rival Moraine Valley (MV) 15-3, 15-6, 15-5.

"The main problem was our lack of offense," said Ellefson-Kuchin. "We weren't consistent on our serves. We also were not able to produce any hits."

Led by strong defense, especially serve reception, Ellefson-Kuchin said she wasn't overly worried about the loss.

"The girls were a little nervous," she said. "They showed promise and I saw some strengths, but it looked like a first performance."

Two days after the MV loss, Harper bounced back to defeat Olive Harvey 15-11, 15-11, 15-9.

"These games were a lot of fun," said Ellefson-Kuchin. "They were filled with long rallies. We were able to do a lot of things right."

Serving and hitting came together for the Lady Hawks, especially in the second game. Up early in the match, Olive Harvey came back to take the lead. Harper was able to come back though, tying the score at 11 all, and winning the next four points for the win.

"That was an exciting match," said Ellefson-Kuchin. "It really showed the character the girls have. It was a good sign."

The Lady Hawks followed that win with a third second victory of the season a week later, defeating Kishwaukee 15-11, 15-10 Sept. 14.

The girls started slow in that match," said Ellefson-Kuchin. She held the two hour drive to Kishwaukee responsible for the team's "indecision." They were consistent in that match. They did what they needed to do to win.

The same day Harper faced Sauk Valley, absorbing its second loss of the year.

"They have a strong team," said Ellefson-Kuchin. "They came at us with a fast game, which caught us by surprise."

"We played a little in regard to the second game," she continued. "The first game was really tough so it was good to come back strong in the second game."

Harper lost its next two matches including a conference loss to Joliet. Taking both Sept. 16 matches to the final set, the Lady Hawks showed they are capable of defeating anyone.

"I expect we'll put on a good show in conference," Ellefson-Kuchin said. "We've got strong hitters, great setters and a tough defense."

Led by Sue Tinschdel's defense, Harper took a two game in nothing lead over Joliet before losing and losing the next three games and the match, 15-6, 15-10, 15-9, 15-3, 15-15.

"We couldn't score," said Ellefson-Kuchin. "We had some trouble serving. They weren't falling in."

"That same day, the Lady Hawks took a tough loss to McHenry, a team they had scrimmaged and beat early in the year."

"When they scrimmaged, they were using all their players," Ellefson-Kuchin said. "During the match they just had their starters out there."

"They just beat us," she continued.

"They were the better team Saturday. We were in the position to win both of those matches and didn't. Ellefson-Kuchin added, "It's a matter of time until we're on the other end."

The Lady Hawks will try for their first conference win when they host Rock Valley Sept. 26.

"Consistency is the key word for us," said Ellefson-Kuchin. "We want to keep a certain level of play throughout the game."

Women's tennis starts strong

By Eric Bingham
Sports Editor

Harper's women's tennis team had an ominous beginning when its first match of the season was rained out. It didn't seem to phase the Lady Hawks though, as they won their first two matches of the year.

In what turned out to be the season opener, Harper travelled to Rockford Sept. 12 to face Rock Valley (RV). Paced by first singles play of Lisa Berg and second singles' Luis Marquez, the Lady Hawks defeated RV 6-3.

"They were hard fought matches," said Tennis Coach Kathy Chamberlain. "We split sets at first, second and third singles, winning each of them at the third set."

The girls did have some first meet jitters, Chamberlain continued. "It's good to get the first one under our belt."

The Lady Hawks lost fourth singles and first and second doubles, but the Trojans were forced to forfeit at fifth and sixth singles and at third doubles, handing Harper the win.

Harper increased its record to 2-0 in the North Central Community College Conference by showing out Triton 5-0 Sept. 14.

The entire team won its respective matches in straight sets. Triton was forced to default at sixth singles and third doubles.

"The girls did real well," said Chamberlain. "They're not a very experienced team, but it's still a win." Taking the two wins into the weekend, Harper was looking for some experience in the internal Harper Invitational. The Lady Hawks finished third of four, behind College of DuPage (COD) and South Suburban (SSS) and ahead of Moraine Valley (MV).

"DuPage and South Suburban are fine teams," Chamberlain said. "I saw what I needed to do after those matches. I have decided to make some roster changes. I'm hoping that strengthens the team. Until now, it's been tough to decide who plays best with who."

The roster changes couldn't help prevent the dominance COD had over the Lady Hawks in Harper's home matchup Sept. 19.

Sweeping to an 8-0 victory, the Chaparrals won all but one match, and that was suspended due to darkness. Berg and third singles Kim Harper were the only two players to take their matches to a third set. Hauser, Marquez and Berg all suffered their first conference loss of the season during the meet.

"The girls played some competitive tennis," Chamberlain said. "I'm going to start looking for a more aggressive doubles play in the future. All I want the girls to do is the best they can."

Second singles player Luis Marquez follows through on a backhand during a warm-up before the Lady Hawks match against College of DuPage Sept. 19.

Community College Conference when it finished third of the four teams with a score of 133.

Leading the meet was RV at 118, trailed by COD 128, Harper and MV 138. With the victory, RV moves into the conference lead at 5-1. Harper holds second at 4-2, with COD at 3-3 and MV at 0-6 bringing up the rear.

"I'm very disappointed with our play today," said Karras following the match Tuesday. "I had it all worked out with our guys playing at our home course and we would have lead against Rock Valley going into Moraine Valley next week. That just didn't happen today. I'm not real happy."

Leading the Hawks was McInerney with a 79, good for a fourth-place tie overall in the meet. He was followed by Devo's 82, Franks' 86 and Scott Brokaw's 86.

"The guys played the front nine higher than the back," Karras explained for his struggle. "What we will work on is getting them going out of the block. They still seem a little nervous. Not having a golf program for six, some of those guys haven't golfed (competitively) in a couple of years."

Despite slipping to second place in conference, Karras and he believes his team can still pressure RV for the top spot.

"There's something to this team," said Karras. "We have three solid players that can give them a run for the conference title."

Hawks down Joliet 38-10

Haywood's two TDs help keep Harper undefeated in N4C

By Joey Coriale
Staff Writer

The Harper Hawks needed to come home and make up for the tough loss they suffered against Grand Rapids Community College. They took to the field Sept. 16 and tamed the visiting Wolves of Joliet Junior College with a 38-10 victory.

The Hawks defense took advantage of Joliet mistakes throughout most of the game.

On the Wolves' first possession, Hawk LB John Remshaw picked off a Ron Dylik pass and took it down to the Joliet 21 yard line. After missing an opportunity to score a touchdown on first and goal, Harper settled for a Tyler Hill field goal to make it a 3-0 Hawk lead.

Once again, Joliet couldn't get anything going. They were forced to punt but a bad snap gave Harper excellent field position on the Joliet 22-yard line. Unfortunately, Harper QB Lars Sjoelm was forced to leave the game with a sprained ankle. The drive ended with a Harper punt into the end zone.

After an exchange of punts, Joliet had the ball on their 28-yard line. This time Dylik connected for a 49-yard gain to put the Wolves deep in Hawk territory.

Then with 48 seconds left in the first quarter, Dylik connected again this time for a 27-yard touchdown pass to Chris Weedman. The extra point gave Joliet a 7-3 lead. That would be the only TD Joliet would have the rest of the day.

On Harper's next drive, a chipping call moved the Hawks back in their 10-yard line. With 30 left on the clock reserve QB

Dave McClain hit RB James Haywood on what was to be a five-yard screen. He added a few more yards to it.

Haywood cut right to elude one tackler and then back left breaking out down the far side of the field for an 82-yard touchdown run which dazzled the crowd and the Joliet defense. That gave Harper a 10-7 lead.

A few drives later, Harper turned over the ball on their own 30-yard line. Joliet then took it down to the Hawks' goal line. The defense turned Joliet away and forced it to turn the ball over on downs.

The defensive line did a great job today. They took a lot of pressure off of the defensive backs," said DB Chris Kost.

"Honestly, I think the better team lost." --Joliet head coach Joseph Redman

The half ended with a 10-7 Hawk lead. Head Coach John Elansk said he wasn't all that pleased with his team's first half performance.

"I was mad. Our linemen were offside too much. We played a sloppy first half."

"I can't tell you what I told them in the locker room," he added.

Whatever he said sure pumped up the Hawks. They started the second half on fire. Harper RB Lorenzo Butler found himself an opening on the first drive and took it in for a 38-yard touchdown run. Harper now had a 17-7 lead.

Joliet brought the ball into field goal range and made it a 17-10 game. The Hawks recovered the ball but turned it over for the second time deep in their own territory.

Joliet attempted a second field goal but it was blocked by Hawk LB Brent Harbald. The Hawks took over on their own 12 where the ball was coughed up and Joliet claimed the ball. Then the Hawks shut the door again.

Hawk DB Pete Milazien picked off a Dylik pass and ran a back 38 yards for the touchdown with the extra point. Harper took a 24-10 lead.

That play gave Harper the momentum and turned the game around," said Joliet Coach Tim Redman.

After a flurry of punts, Harper used its third QB of the day freshman Jerry Chaney. He connected with WR Juan Taylor for a 55-yard TD. Harper now had command of the game with a 31-10 lead.

They played a really good third quarter," said Elansk.

The only scoring drive in the fourth quarter was done by the Hawks. All-America candidate Haywood scored his second touchdown of the day on a one-yard run to put the icing on the cake and make it a 38-10 blowout.

"We never made the right play and they took advantage of our mistakes," said Redman. "Honestly, I think the better team lost."

The Hawks' defensive line turned in four sacks. Leading the line was Steve Rokusek, Chip Holman, Tom Fuhler and Joe Bickler.

"This was definitely a plus for the team," said Butler. "We've just got to go out next week and do it again."

The Hawks travel to Rockford Sept. 23 to take on the Trojans of Rock Valley College. Game time is at 1:00 pm.

Hawk golfers gain first win in six years

By Eric Bingham
Sports Editor

Harper's golf team won its first three matches in six years Sept. 12 when the Hawks defeated second place finisher Rock Valley (RV) by a mere stroke 335-326.

The Hawks, who haven't competed in golf since 1982, held off Rock Valley in addition to College of DuPage (COD) 335, and Moraine Valley (MV) 348. The meet was hosted by College of DuPage in its home course, the Village Links.

"I'm impressed with the way the boys golfed," said coach Jim Karas. "Village Links is a tough course, and the boys met the challenge."

Leading the way for the Hawks was Sean McInerney with an impressive low five-over 78. He was backed up by teammates Dave Wascher and Rick Dem, both posting a score of 82. Brian Franks finished the scoring for the Hawks with an 83.

"I'm happy with the way Brian played," said Karas. The Hawks followed up that performance with a third place finish at the Waubesa Invite Sept. 15. Dem was low man for Harper, taking second-place honors in the invite with a 73. Wascher was the other top 10 finisher for the Hawks with an eighth-place showing.

Four days later the Hawks took their 3-O conference mark to Poplar Creek Country Club, their home course, to face COD, RV and MV again. This time the outcome wasn't as rewarding. Harper fell from its perch on top of the North Central.

Student Senate elected

By Phyllis Benson
Staff Writer

Results of the Student Senate elections held September 18 and 19 were announced last Thursday.

Five seats were up for election, three of them uncontested.

Edward Wallace defeated Chris Cotropoulos 48-16 in the contested race of Business and Science, and in Liberal Arts, Donald Bussey defeated Michael Trippish 64-20.

Uncontested, Karen Westrich was elected to the Life Science and Human Services with 54 votes, Lou Nunez, Jr. to Physical Education, Athletics and Recreation with 53 votes and Paul Dykstra to Technology, Mathematics and Physical Sciences with 51 votes.

There were 19 write-in votes, said Director of Student Activities and Student Senate Advisor Jeanne Pankani, and no candidates were disqualified.

Ballots boxes remained sealed for 24 hours after voting ended. Votes were tabulated by Pankani, Student Trustee Darlene Iverson, and Steve Iwanski of Student Activities.

A total of 93 votes were cast during the two-day election. It's a shame that the Harbinger didn't come out prior to the election," said Pankani. "I think it

Four students were selected by the senate to chair a Clubs and Organizations members. The members are not voted by the organizations themselves but rather by the senate.

Kathleen Munson will serve on the Academic, Instruction and Language Studies Committee. Ilana Sos, Dan Pracek and John Fallahee will serve on the Clubs and Organizations Committee.

All members were seated at last Friday's meeting. The next Student Senate meeting will be Friday, October 6 at 1:30 pm in A241a and is open to the community.

"The senate is currently working on the appointment of students to college committees and goals for this year," said Pankani.

LRC to issue library cards for added efficiency

By Andrew Schneider
Staff Writer

OUPAC (On Line Public Access Catalog), the new computerized check out system, enables Harper's Learning Resource Center to accurately keep track of its books.

Harper students will receive library cards sometime next semester, when the system is running.

The new system, based on the use of barcodes on books and library cards, will record the date a book is checked out, the name of the borrower, and the date due allowing the LRC to track its materials effectively.

Currently, the manual system, which requires filling out two cards for every book lent, has a high margin of error and sometimes records are lost.

With Harper College's high turnover of students and approximately 3,000 area residents who use the LRC it is difficult to keep track of everything, causing lost, missing, or overdue materials.

OUPAC will keep track of what materials are out, when they are due back, and print overdue notices when necessary. The system will also generate statistics for the school, letting Harper know how many students use the LRC.

The OUPAC system cost Harper $412,000 to install.

In addition to tracking materials, the OUPAC system is also an electronic card catalog, which LRC patrons can use to quickly find books.

The LRC is now giving tours to demonstrate the new system. Calls are welcomed for a tour schedule.

Speech teacher plays two roles

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-Chief

Frank DeGiulio has never been one to take no for an answer. It must not have been a surprise to anyone when he decided exactly what he said he was going to do, and began acting and directing.

In a business as notoriously difficult as theatre, his perseverance, willingness, and plain stubbornness has prevailed. While perhaps not a big star, at least not yet, he has managed to break into Chicago's theatre community.

DeGiulio earned a Master of Fine Arts degree from Northern Illinois University in Directing and Theatre. Shortly after graduation, he returned to the Chicago area to break into Chicago theatre. In a tough marketplace for actors and directors, he has made it into some of the most prominent theatrical companies in the area, such as Goodwin, Second City, and Druy Lane.

However, he doesn't limit himself to the theatre; he had also worked on movies and television. John Malcovich, Mandy Patinkin, Judith Ivey, and Gary Cole are a few of the big-name actors that DeGiulio has worked with during his career.

He has also been doing musical reviews, almost constantly since 1979. He is currently performing in a review at the Royal Cade in Chicago.

In 1985, DeGiulio started the Southern Lakes Repertory Theatre Company out of the Ruffly Theatre in Williams Bay, Wisconsin. He was the Artistic

Director of the company until it closed in 1986.

While the company itself was rather short-lived, it is obvious that the company members have been very successful since then. "About 70 percent of Southern Lakes alumni are working in Chicago theatre now," said DeGiulio. "In fact, I have three who are in Greece, and two at Southlight. Many of them work in the administrative side of theatre."

DeGiulio began teaching speech at Harper in January 1987. Aside from his regular teaching duties, he directed members of Harper's Speech Team in their acting scenes. He has also helped coach a few theatre students at Harper. While he asks for no monetary reimbursement, DeGiulio expects the students he works with to be professional and open-minded in their rehearsal sessions with him.

DeGiulio will never be an easy director to work with, but his actors learn a new approach to acting, self-discipline, and professionalism. He reminds that his actors know the characters they play as well as they know themselves. He does this by using some of the tried and true acting exercises, as well as a few less traditional exercises.

DeGiulio believes that the actor must walk, talk, think and even feel like the character he plays. "He's a very demanding director, but he makes rehearsal a lot of fun. You never know what's going to happen next," said Tony Kortas, an ex-student and a cast member in DeGiulio's current musical.

"He expects professionalism and dedication, but reminds you to enjoy it. And you do," said Scott Neidt, another of DeGiulio's students.

DeGiulio was recently named Artistic Director for the Ruffly Theatre in Chicago. He got the job because "some of the actors at the Ruffly had been in Southern Lakes. They mentioned my name, and the people at the Ruffly got in touch with me about seven weeks ago."

When asked about the company, DeGiulio commented, "It exists. There is no ensemble company right now, we're in the process of putting that together. Our first show could be as early as next summer, with our first full season next fall."

DeGiulio's current work can be found at Des Plaines Theatre Guild. His musical review in Chicago, or on any of 13 half-hour programs he is directing for the Health Channel on cable.

He began working with the Des Plaines Theatre Guild last year, and has directed to show since then. He directed The Diary of Ann Frank last May and is currently directing The Mystery of Edwin Drood. Teaching kept me from directing anything downtown. I applied at Des Plaines because it was close and I could do it while teaching," commented DeGiulio.

"He's a very demanding director, but he makes rehearsal a lot of fun. You never know what's going to happen next," Tony Kortas

The Mystery of Edwin Drood is based on the novel by Charles Dickens. The novel was never finished due to Dickens' death. The play acts out all of the events in the novel up to the point where Dickens left off, then leaves it up to the audience to decide the ending.

The audience votes on which character is the detective, the lover, and the murderer. The end of the play is then performed to the audience's specifications.

The Des Plaines Theatre Guild production of Edwin Drood also features several of Harper alumni.

Edwin Drood is still running at Des Plaines on September 29 and 30, and October 6 and 7 at 8 pm. Sunday matinees are October 1 and 8 at 2 pm. Admission $7 or $5 for students on Friday and Sunday. Call 296-1211 for tickets or more information.

Unrest interrupts China trip

By Phyllis Benson
Staff Writer

Students peacefully protesting for democracy at Tiananmen Square in Beijing, China were attacked and massacred by Chinese government troops on June 4.

On that same day, Darice DaMata-Geiger, an adjunct faculty member, and 17 other Americans departed for Shanghai as part of an international educational exchange.

"I was one of the first seven Americans to be admitted to the Shanghai Drama Institute," said Geiger. No westerners, including Americans, had ever been admitted before.

In conjunction with the University of Minnesota, DaMata-Geiger was supposed to do work in costume design on the Chinese opera Peking and earn six hours of postgraduate work.

"It never happened," said DaMata-Geiger.

During a stopover in Tokyo, DaMata-Geiger's group heard rumors about trouble in Beijing. Then, while changing planes in Osaka, communications with Shanghai were cut off completely. Northwest Airlines would not take off.

Conferring amongst ourselves," said DaMata-Geiger, we decided not to go on. When the 747 finally left, it only had 12 people on it. "Most of the people on the plane were going home, she said.

It was two days before they could get passage to Hong Kong. "We stayed with refugees until we found out when we could leave," she said.

The stay in Hong Kong lasted ten amazingly long days. DaMata-Geiger said it took that long to get a flight home.

"We were fortunate that our hotel let us keep renewing our reservations. Rooms were at a real shortage. Literally thousands were escaping into Hong Kong,"

she said.

The British and German diplomatic corps were being evacuated into DaMata-Geiger's hotel and she had access to information.

"People would ask us if we were (in Beijing), and if we had any information," she said. "Communications were shut (off) entirely."

The occurrence at Tiananmen Square was very real to these people, not only because they were neighbors, but because many had families there. The (people) in the city were not panicked but very anxious. We were Americans and they assumed we had more resources than we did.

DaMata-Geiger saw newscasts from Cable News Network (CNN), the Australian news service and from the People's Republic.

"It was very, terrifying that so many people get that much information led to them and it is erroneous. It's startling and gives pause to wonder. We put implicit trust in the media. It lets you know how vulnerable we are to them," said DaMata-Geiger.

In Hong Kong, students actively marched in support of Tiananmen Square. Memorial services were held and black bands were worn. The uniform of the day was black pants or a skirt and a white shirt.

Coincidentally," said DaMata-Geiger, "that's what I had on: black pants and a white T-shirt. Because of that I was given an umbrella, we all wore them and we all wore them. It opened up communications, and they asked our assistance to give continued aid when we got back to the States."

DaMata-Geiger and her group had Chinese visas, so they took a one day trip to the Hong Kong border town of Shatin (Shigien), a trade city that is supposed to be western-oriented.

"I expected that a city trying to build itself up wouldn't have such grotesque poverty," said DaMata-Geiger. "We got off the main streets, which have beautiful hotels and such. Whole families were living in cement shacks half the size of the average garage here."

"I have seen some poverty before, but nothing as appalling as that," she said, "seeing that, and going back to Hong Kong, where even the poorest have a little better, was pretty startling."

Both cities have street people but there are just borders of them in the People's Republic," said DaMata-Geiger.

DaMata-Geiger had never thought of going to Hong Kong before.

"It was so wonderful," she said. "The people were nice and I don't think it was just because of the situation at the time. It's beautiful and comfortable, easy to get around. It's one of the most crowded cities in the world but you'd never know it."

Chinese design is very aesthetic, DaMata-Geiger said. There were skyscrapers but the space between them was generous. The sidewalks were above the street so people were not in the traffic. Houses were close together but there were gardens on the roof.

It's designed for people, she said. "It's lush and pretty and not as hot as the area around it. It is an island."

While in Hong Kong, DaMata-Geiger was in touch with her family to let them know she was fine. There was no physical threat, she said, "but there was a genuine emotional trauma.

"Only now can I watch the news when anything about China is on," she said. "It's a real emotional response."

The group of 18, including the seven who were to study at the drama institute, met for a convention in New York City in August. That's what really ended the depression for me, getting out and seeing those people."

DaMata-Geiger was informed that she was admitted to the school should the exchange ever occur again. But two days after they left, the government closed the school.

"No one can locate any of the instructors," she said. "They may be located or in prison. There has been no contact since that time."

Two guest speakers from the Shanghai Drama Institute who went to the University of Minnesota as part of the exchange, said DaMata-Geiger got asylum in the United States.

Some good things came out of the trip, DaMata-Geiger said. "A genuine awareness of what's going on out there. Some solid friendships came out of it. I think I'm a little more global-oriented now."

Senate appointments a farce

Elections were held recently for the student senators representing the five divisions of: Technology, Mathematics and Physical Science; Business and Social Science; Life Science and Human Services; Liberal Arts; Physical Education, Athletics and Recreation. Last Friday four additional positions were filled: one Counselor Aides senator and three Clubs and Organizations representatives.

The Counselor Aides Senator is decided upon by the Counselor Aides themselves. The senator represents this group, therefore the decision decided upon by the elected senate members, not the actual clubs and organizations.

It is a farce to classify these three senators as "representatives" of anything except the other senators. They certainly do not represent the clubs and organizations as a whole.

According to Jeanne Pankaitin, advisor to the Student Senate, the clubs and organizations senators must be sponsored by a club in order to run for the position, thereby representing the clubs on campus. However, this rule is apparently taken very lightly. Last year a rule was passed that practically negates this qualification: If a student wishes to be a Clubs and Organizations senator, they can run under the stipulation that they join or start a club on campus. This change is ridiculous, it deletes the original rule that qualifies the positions in the first place.

The Student Senate needs to think of a better title for these positions. Perhaps they would be more suitably named "the cabinet", "buddies of around and do stuff but don't really represent anyone".

The only other alternative would be to make them truly representative of the clubs and organizations. The clubs on campus should vote for their representatives, just like the student trustee and other senators have to be elected among the clubs or by organizing a panel of club representatives to decide on their senate.

The Harper Student Senate is supposed to be a democratic organization representing the student body, not an oligarchy, where the masses are governed by an "elite" few.

True racial equality

The only way all Americans will achieve true racial equality is to eliminate the differences. By this I mean we must all interbreed to establish a true interracial culture.

Do I have your attention?

In a casual conversation with some classmates, the subject of interracial relationships came up. One girl said that dating outside of one's race was a sign of instability and desperation. Another said that it was OK for interracial couples to date, and sometimes to get married, but that they should never ever have children. It would be too hard on them socially.

I disagree with these positions.

In today's climate of self-censorship and the constant drive to be socially acceptable, I view interracial couples to be just the opposite of unstable. How can a couple willing to loose the respect of family and friends to be with each other be unstable? It takes a great deal of fortitude, strength, courage and over all stability to face opposition and overcome it. There are many lonely people of all races. It is not convincing that two people of different races would seek each other out of desperation. Not all people have to have the socially-stereo-typical-ideal-mate in order to feel self worth.

If we are to follow the logic of this argument, no one but the most elite should have children. All others would face a tough social environment.

Who would tell two less than socially graceful people not to have children because they will turn out to be geeks? Who will tell two Asian Americans not to have children because they will get labeled as book smart before children they can even read? Who will tell two American Indians not to have children because they will have their Indian heritage mocked by their peers? If this should be so, then let's continue on logically.

I hereby decree that all people with an ACT score lower than 10 should not have children because they will probably grow up to be pariahs. All couples whose yearly income is less than $30 thousand a year should not have children because they won't be able to send them to a real school.

Harper is not a real school, just ask my friends who attend Yale, Berkeley, Northern, and any other REAT school you care to name. I guess, logically none of our parents should have had us.

No, I'm sorry. This kind of logic isn't logical at all. Instead of criticizing people for having the nerve to be different and striving for the best world they can give themselves, we should be encouraging them.

More interracial relations will lead to tolerance and acceptance. Eventually, it will lead to true equality.

"Mr. Music Head" comes to Harper Adrian Belew has an album too

By Michael Schweisheimer
Entertainment Editor

There are not many musicians who are known specifically for their guitar work, and have played with musicals like David Bowie, the Talking Heads, and King Crimson. Adrian Belew can be credited with those and many other achievements, including having just released his fourth solo album, entitled Mr. Music Head. There is no doubt that it is a good album, but I would have expected a little more from a man with Belew's experience.

The album was composed mainly on the piano. The guitar work is not a constant presence throughout the album as would be expected from Belew. The guitar he does use is very solid and original.

The album is quite poppy, a little poppy, and a lot of fun. The problem arises after the album has been played all the way through. It seems that something is missing. Some sort of power, or command that sets the great and immortal albums apart from the ones that are just really good. Greatness and immortality are too much to ask of anyone. The album is diverse in the types of styles and sounds it captures, and that makes it successful.

The first track, Oh Daddy, has already received large amounts of air time on the radio. The song has Belew's daughter asking him "When are you going to make it to the big time, Daddy?" In his reply, he takes a sarcastic blast at the music industry on how it takes "A whole lotta luck, to make it."

House of Cards is a very successful track. It begins with sound effects, a flashing light to an explosion, and leads into an aggressive, primal rhythm that just makes one sit up and pay attention. Belew's guitar and voice join in to tell us how the lives we lead are so unstable.

One song that must be mentioned is Private Public Kingdom. It is a wonderful piece that mixes African sounds with peaceful words and a lyrical melody that brings the piece together. This ends the first side with lasting effect.

On the second side he incorporates some more bluesy rock and roll types of sounds. Bumpty Bump and Myer Bandolow are definitely more traditional songs of the rock and roll genre, but not unattached by Belew's unique composing ear. 1967 is a remarkable piece which uses six separate melodies juxtaposed together to convey a range of emotions from love to loneliness. The inclusion of the separate melodies is a little surprising at first, each one could stand on its own, but once the surprise has faded the song flows smoothly. He closes 1967, and the album, by singing, "Now you've had another piece of my mind. A cup of coffee and a slice of time. If you'll excuse me I should say good bye. I gotta go now." This abrupt ending sums up the whole album.

Belew has obviously been influenced by the Beatles. He has taken some of their ideas and modernized them for today's audiences. He isn't compromising his own self for fame though. In an article by Greg Kot from the Chicago Tribune's July 21, 1989 issue, he was quoted as saying, "My mission, if you could call it that, is to find a blend of pop and avant garde that works for me and also reaches a large number of people."

Despite the album's few weaknesses, it is completely a joy to listen to, and does have some very powerful moments. I would expect with Belew's vast touring experience, that his concert at Harper will be quite an experience. I would not be surprised if the unifying power that he missed on vinyl might be captured on the stage.

The concert will be on Saturday, October 7, 1989 at Building J, room J143, and will be opened by Howard Levy at 8:00. The tickets are only $10, $15, $20, and $25 for the public. This is surely a concert that Harper College won't be forgetting soon!

Blue Blue Blue

What is "Reclusallucination"?

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

So you've never heard of a band called Blue Blue Blue? Well, neither had I until I saw the CD in a record store. I was so intrigued by the title and cover art that I decided to give it a try. My findings proved that you can judge a book by its cover.

The label that Blue Blue Blue records on, Crest la Mort, is much like an American equivalent of A&D. For those who don't know, A&D artists create a particularly distinctive type of music that is best classified simply as "A&D music." Crest la Mort bands are more similar in style to A&D artists than any others I've heard before.

The group Blue Blue Blue apparently hail from New York City. The credits list John Figley (drums, piano), Shaun T. (vocals, guitar, keyboards), Word (bass, keyboards), Ed Luke (guitar), Ed Butler (keyboards), and Herman Wright (saxophone). All the songs were written by someone named German in conjunction with other band members, primarily Word and Figley.

One of the best...and worst...ways to answer the question "What are they like?" is to compare them to another band. My initial thoughts were that Blue Blue Blue was a cross between The Cure and The Bitch. I quickly realized that there wasn't much on the album that I could say sounded like The Cure, other than some rhythm guitar, so I went searching for a better comparison. When listening to a very faint Blue I finally came up with a good comparison...a cross between The Bitch and Joy Division.

The ten tracks on this disc show remarkable creativity and utter disregard for standard musical conventions. The music is competently played by all band members, with particular excellence coming from the guitar and percussion. There is no lyric sheet (in fact, very little in the way of linear notes at all), but the vocals are very clear, understandable, and worthy of interpretation.

Amazing Parade. On the Moon. Shadows of Shadows. and Mr. Melan. holy are the highlights on an above-average album. If you are interested by its description, chances are good that you would enjoy this album. It's worth seeking out the problem is that seeking out is what you may have to do. Blue Blue Blue's Reclusallucination should be available on a number of record stores (it is a domestic release) but I've only seen it locally at Wax Trax. Rating out of 5...

Virtuoso plays Harper

By Michael Schweisheimer
Entertainment Editor

Piano virtuoso and harmonica master Howard Levy will be opening for Adrian Belew on October 7.

Levy is incredibly well talented and diverse musician. He has worked on over 40 albums with various musicians ranging from Chuck Mangione to Dennis DeYoung. The styles of music he performs vary from jazz to poprock to folk.

Levy is not just in demand for studio work on albums. He has also released a solo album entitled Harmonica Jazz on Tall Thin Records, and has often received the call to do music for commercials. He has worked on spots for people like McDonalds, United Airlines, Coors and many other major companies.

There is no telling what a man with Levy's talents has planned for his performance at Harper, but whatever he chooses to do, one can be assured that he will do it well.

"She's really nice," boasts Christine Hubach, friend of Jean Tuit. "She does more than her share at everything."

As administrative assistant for the Program Board, co-president for the Astronomy Club, and peer counselor for P.A.I.S., Jean Tuit really does do more than her share.

"I think it's important that I be involved. I've grown up a lot from all the things I've done," says Tuit.

Last year she was very involved with the approval of the new observatory. She helped coordinate activities and acted as co-host for the observatory fund-raiser dinner.

On Program Board Tuit helps put together school activities and keeps the Program Board running smoothly in a forward direction. "If it wasn't for her, the Program Board would be a mess," says Program Board president Dean Morgan.

Though Jean Tuit is so involved with everything, she does not seem to know what direction her life will take;

however, she does have some ideas. As a Liberal Arts major, she would like to go into the media field (something behind the scenes), write children's stories, or possibly do something in the jewelry business. Maybe all three,
she says sarcastically.

"I'm excited about this year. It could be fun and I'm experiencing a lot already.
College is so exciting and I'm really glad I have the chance to get involved, otherwise, I'd probably be home watching TV."

Argonne National holds Graduate School Fair

Are you uncertain about what you will do after receiving your undergraduate degree?

Have you thoroughly considered the advantages of attending graduate school science or engineering?

(CPS) Come to the 2nd annual Graduate School Fair for Science and Engineering, on October 21 at Argonne National Laboratory and get valuable information that will help you plan your future.

Admission is free and the fair is open to all chemistry, physics, biology, mathematics, computer science and engineering students. Faculty representatives from 80 graduate departments nationwide will be on hand. University of Illinois, Yale, Princeton, Stanford, Carnegie-Mellon, Florida State, Michigan State, and Northwestern are just a few of the schools sending faculty to the fair. Activities will begin with a number of brief presentations on various aspects of graduate school. For most of the day, students will be able to meet, one-to-one, with faculty representatives from the various universities to discuss graduate programs. Students may sign up day of the fair for brief tours covering selected research facilities at Argonne National Laboratory. The cafeteria grill will be open at noon for those wishing to purchase lunch.

John Marjca, the Graduate School Fair coordinator, points out that enrollment in science and engineering graduate programs in the United States has declined

degree holders in these fields who attain the Ph.D. degree has fallen from 12 percent to six percent over that time. He says that this increasing demand for scientists and engineering, may lead to a serious manpower shortage. This means that there will be excellent opportunities in the 1990's for students who elect to obtain an advanced degree. Not only seniors, but juniors and sophomores as well, should attend the Graduate School Fair and begin planning a future that includes advanced study.

The Graduate School Fair will be held in Building 362 (9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.) and in Building 213 (10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.) at the Argonne National Laboratory.

For more information and a list of university graduate schools the fair, write or call John Marjca, Division of Educational Programs, Argonne National Laboratory, Argonne, Illinois, 60439 (Tel. 312/972-3366).

Hawks crush Rock Valley

Haywood, Butler run for 463 yards, 6 touchdowns

By Eric Bingham
Sports Editor

Led by Lorenzo Butler and James Haywood, Harper College literally ran away from North Central Community College Conference rival Rock Valley Community College Sept. 23, defeating the Trojans 42-6.

Butler paced the Hawk ground game, piling up a school record 268 yards on 22 carries, including two touchdowns. Haywood followed closely with 195 yards on 31 attempts and four TDs.

The previous school record for yards rushing in a game was held by Dan Martin with 229 yards in a game in 1987.

"The hawks had a tremendous day," said Harper coach John Eliask. "Our quarterback (Lerry Chancy) also had a good day for his first start."

Total offensive yards accumulated to 563, including 457 yards rushing and 106 yards in the air. Chancy's key receiver was Juan Taylor with three catches for 42 yards.

Most of this offense didn't produce itself until the second half. Haywood began the scoring with his first touchdown, a seven yard late in the first quarter. Butler topped the effort with a 56 yard TD run in the second quarter to give the Hawks a 14-0 lead going into the locker room.

"I saw a lot of improvement in the offense," said Eliask. "We played a good second half."

Indeed they did, doubling Harper's lead in the third period. Haywood added two more touchdowns in the quarter, one from four yards out and the other from seven, giving the Hawks an unimpeachable 28-0 lead.

"We've done well in the third quarter this season," Eliask said. "That isn't going to hurt us all."

Harper relinquished just one touchdown in the fourth quarter, while adding two more of its own. Haywood finished his scoring after punching it in from two yards out. Butler was the final scorer for the Hawks when he took off from the 34 yard line and didn't look back, capping the scoring for the game.

Defensively, the Hawks gave up 299 yards, including 110 yards in the air.

"I'm a little concerned," said Eliask of his team's defensive performance. "We need to get better in our pass defense. Every week we have to improve. We specifically have to improve our coverage," he continued. "We're not where we'd like to be at this point in the season."

The Hawks improve their record to 3-1 overall and 2-0 in conference. Next Harper faces College of DuPage, home, Sept. 30 at 10 p.m.

Old rivals to meet again

Harper faces COD Sept. 30

By Eric Bingham
Sports Editor

"We're both in the driver's seat," said Harper Coach John Eliask.

"This will be a big step towards the conference title," said College of DuPage (COD) Coach Bob MacDougall.

It's the game that could decide it all. Despite being held in the middle of the season, the winner of the Harper COD football game Sept. 30 at Harper could be the deciding factor in both teams' quest for the North Central Community College Conference (NCC) title.

"This game will decide who's no. 1 in the region as well as probable national recognition and a number one seed going into conference play-offs," said Eliask.

"This is a very important football game," said MacDougall. "Harper has tremendous personnel. It should be a good challenge for us."

Both teams enter the match up undefeated in conference. Harper is coming off of a 42-6 conference win over Rock Valley Community College.

COD has had the past week off following a forfeit victory over Trimble College's junior varsity squad. Trimble's coach Eric Leslie Frazer expected not to play the game due to injuries to his team.

It's doubtful either coach agrees on who's going to win, they both agreed on one thing: the key to winning the game.

"Who ever screws up the least," said Eliask. MacDougall echoed that comment adding that both teams are pretty much evenly matched. He pointed to special teams as possibly making a difference, while Eliask mentioned penalties and turnovers as potential game-breakers.

Tennis team splits week

By Eric Bingham

The Lady Hawks had some good news and some bad news during their past week of competition.

The good news: Harper's women's tennis team defeated North Central Community College Conference (NCC) opponent Moraine Valley 5-2 in a suspended match Sept. 26.

The bad news: Harper absorbed an NCC loss when it was defeated by perennial power Illinois Valley 9-0 Sept. 21.

"I was happy with the girls' performance," said Coach Kathy Chamberlain. "We played more games with them than we have in the past two years. They have also won the conference the past two years."

Harper's Lisa Berg played IV's Trish Newman close in the first set, losing 6-4, but faltered in the second set, getting shut out 6-0 to end their match.

"Lisa is improving all the time," said Chamberlain.

Second singles Liz Marquez was upended by the Lady Apaches' Claudine Cromper 6-0, 6-1.

"Liz is starting to get singles under her belt," Chamberlain said. "She was used to playing just doubles, but now she's getting better at singles."

IV's Tori Straynickan was the closest to losing to a Harper opponent when Kim Hauser lost 6-1, 6-4 in their third singles match up.

"Kim has come somewhat into her own," Chamberlain continued. "Sometimes she has trouble closing the door. She needs to keep up her concentration throughout the whole match. It's been a problem, but we're working on it."

Against MV, a couple of these girls bounced back to record victories for themselves as well as the team.

"Let's put it this way," said Chamberlain, "I'm glad it's behind us. I felt real shaky about this meet. We didn't play as well as I thought we were capable of."

Chamberlain was on edge right at the start when the first singles match up featuring Berg and Marauder Val Fauser went MV's direction with Fauser winning the first set 6-4. "Lisa was playing the other girls game and not her own," Chamberlain said. She had a lack of concentration and didn't take charge.

"You have to play your strengths as well as your opponents weaknesses," she Traffic becomes a concern Senate debates solutions

By Anthony Garcia
Staff Writer

Student Senate is expected to set preliminary goals at their October 6 meeting.

Traffic reform, an important theme in the campaigns of Don Bussey and Ed Wallace, is likely to be the top item on the agenda of the Senate for the first semester.

Students who leave at normal hours have to wait as much as 30 minutes to get to Algonquin Road. It gets worse in the winter," said Wallace.

He proposes two new roads be built on the east side of campus, one going to Algonquin and one to Euclid. Wallace argues this would allow easier access for parking lots 7 through 12.

Donald Bussey, Liberal Arts Senator, proposes using Public Safety Officers to direct traffic as well as changing the tuning on traffic lights during peak hours.

Student involvement will be another goal of Student Senate. Prior student involvement sub-committees have worked to increase voter turnout, get students involved in clubs and organizations, and recruit members for special projects, such as Drug and Alcohol Wellness Network.

Organizing these efforts is the responsibility of Clubs and Organizations Senators John Fallabee, Ilana Fox, and Dan Pivczek.

"My goal is to get students to realize all of the great clubs we have here at Harper," said Fallabee.

Students who have suggestions for Student Senate should either attend the October 6 meeting in A241a at 1:30 pm or drop a note into one of the Student's Comments, Ideas, Questions boxes located outside the Senate office, on the first floor of building F, or in front of the Box Office in Building J.

Algonquin project

By Dan Pivczek

Students and faculty of Harper College are suffering traffic delays when traveling Route 53 and Algonquin Road. The Algonquin Road project which began August 21, is being lead by Howard Fernal of the construction division of the Illinois State Department.

The project consists of three phases: widening the right hand turn lane from Algonquin Road into Harper, doubling the left hand turn lane going off campus from Harper and the one going on campus from Algonquin. Median work and new traffic signals will also be installed at the intersection.

"It will certainly expedite land movement at the intersection, exclusively the right and left hand turn lanes," said Howard.

With work extending to Micham Road, the Algonquin Road project will cost the state $1.5 million.

Fernal suggests students and faculty leave early to avoid congestion while the work is in progress. He also recommends the use of Roselle Road and Euclid during the week.

With the volume of students who drive to Harper, delays in getting on and off campus are unavoidable.

Lee Iacocca and a small group of private investors are considering a buy out of the Chrysler Corporation, according to the October Motor Trend.

Chrysler currently has 24% of Mitsubishi and expects to acquire Maserati by 1995.

Chrysler Financial Corporation also owns, Gulfstream Aerospace Corporation, E.F. Hutton, Finance America, and BA Financial Services.

We can continue to be a long-term company as long as we respect our size and don't try to have any delusions of grandeur," said Iacocca.

Good luck, Lee!

Crocs Brewing Company bought Stroh Brewing Company for $425 million.

"If we are going to be in the beer business long-term, we've got to be a major competitor," said Peter Crocs.

Crocs, president and C.E.O. of the company, said the acquisition of Stroh's brewing facilities would strengthen his company's distributor organization, product quality, and brand names.

The Crocs family owns all of Crocs' Class A voting stock and approximately one-third of its non-voting Class B stock.

Class B stock was up $130 a share last week Monday. Crocs and Stroh control 18.7% of the beer market, following Miller at 21% and Anheuser-Busch at 41%.

Congratulations Crocs.

G. Heileman Brewing Company is the nation's fifth largest brewer, owned by Austrian Industrialist Alan Bond. Watch for Heileman to be sold, either as a whole or divested, because of Alan Bond's financial troubles.

Happy trails Heileman. Britain's BAT Industries PLC announced last Wednesday it will put Marshall Field's and Saks Fifth Avenue up for sale.

Look for more next week.

Cast chosen for Cabaret

By Erik Wurser
News Editor

Lead roles for this semester's theatrical production, Cabaret, were cast late September.

The leads are: Master of Ceremonies, played by Robb Williams; Sally Bowles, by Debbie Royale; Cliff, by Bob Vortrekler; Fraulein Schneider, by Barb Zwetick; and Herr Schultz by Edl Heller.

Final decisions were made by Mary Jo Willis, director; Al Mueller, choreographer; and Diane Johnson, musical director.

Auditions drew 60 people, 19 were chosen for the cast. Only twelve members of the cast are Harper students.

The auditions were open to the public because we are a community college," said Willis. "An open audition brings the community closer to the school."

Cabaret will be performed on November 10-12 and again on November 17-19, with tickets on sale October 10th.

Slightly off campus

Freshmen without rights Professor shortage

(CPS) - In what may be the strictest version of a nationwide trend toward limiting how students may use their dorm rooms, Kentucky State University freshman have been told they can no longer have friends of the opposite sex visit their dorm rooms. Other schools have restricted dorm room visits, but do allow them during most hours of the day.

KSU decided to stop all opposite-sex visits this fall as a way to help freshmen acclimate themselves to college life, explained spokesman Joseph Burgess.

KSU officials also hope the rule will cut the number of freshmen who end up on academic probation, and that it will make the dorms more secure.

Colleges as businesses?

(CPS) - Tuition would not go up as fast if colleges were run more like businesses, a panel of 19 "education specialists" contended in mid-September.

"What needs to happen in American higher education is no different than what needs to happen in American industry, and is in fact happening: becoming meaner, a little leaner," said Robert Zemsky, director of the Higher Education Research Program and head of the panel.

The report recommended closing campuses that have low enrollment, which was likened to "outmoded military installations, both a drag on the general economy and a misuse of scarce public funds."

It also recommended reversing the 30-year trend toward campuses offering a wide variety of courses. Zemsky wants schools to scrap their smaller programs, and move to their most successful ones. For example, a smaller liberal arts college may decide to cut its graduate programs, a university might invest more heavily in its science courses while abolishing less popular curricula.

(CPS) - Campuses will suffer a shortage of at least 6,000 professors by the end of the century unless they start turning more students into grad schools now, a new Princeton University Press report predicts.

Half the nation's campuses already don't have enough teachers to lead courses this fall, the American Council on Education estimated in August.

Princeton says the new report, by William G. Bowen and Julie Ann Sosa, is the first statistical confirmation of the trend.

Bowen and Sosa see the worst shortages in humanities and social sciences courses, rather than in the science classes previous studies have highlighted.

"We need to increase overall production of new Ph.D.s by two-thirds," Bowen said. "In humanities and social sciences, we need to double the current numbers."

College professors, of course, must have degrees, which they earn in grad school. During the past decade, however, the number of students opting to go on to grad school instead of into the job market has dwindled. The current crop of professors, meanwhile, is aging and will be retiring during the next decade.

Bowen suggested shortening the time required to earn a Ph.D., increasing the number of fellowships offered, and improving the amount of money they pay to grad students to something closer to a living wage.

The shortages will be worse in some places than in others. The 14-campus California State University system, for example, will be unable to fill 10,000 to 11,000 teaching positions during the next 10 to 15 years.

THE PEOPLE IN YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD

"People in your Neighborhood" is brought to you by the Features section of the Harper College student newspaper, the Harbinger. "Who are the people in your neighborhood?" Were the people that you meet when you're walking down the street each day? This edition introduces the 89-90 Science Fiction Club President and a member.

Bob Hopfner
Supreme Commander of the Earth and Science Fiction and Fantasy Club

Age: 25

Major: Aerospace Engineering

Dream car: Porsche 911

In my spare time I enjoy fishing, jogging, hunting, radio-controlled cars. I love to read science fiction.

If I could change the world, I would like to do more with war, boundaries, borders and prejudice. I would preserve the ecology and destroy the business created by human suffering.

Craziest thing I've ever done: It's not my fault. I was told to be President of the club.

Dream date: I had one all, but I might give Squiggy Weaver a shot. Is Anne out there?

When I am one hundred years old, I hope to see a prosperous Earth with flourishing colonies on Earth and Mars. I would like to see the entire world, and people move spread out in large suburbs. I would like to see the entire world as pristine as it should be and everyone free to enjoy it.

The Science Fiction club discusses everything. Usually we focus on a book, author, movie or a magazine article.

Typically science fiction fans have strong opinions about everything and the conversations get heated. We are always ready to listen to any rebuttal. We meet every Wednesday at 2:30 pm in F-140. Maybe you've seen the big yellow sign?

Sometimes we watch a Japanese film on the Blake Seven TV show. If you bring in a full-length feature we can watch it. Unlike some clubs, we meet for four hours per week. There's plenty of time to watch even two movies.

Dr. Berry Hull is the club's advisor. Hull brings all kinds of science fiction material for us to read or look at. Look for Aborigine 99 and publications from the Science Fiction Writers of America are typical features.

Cones are discussed often in our club, but as far as actual playing, I'm not sure. We will probably start playing some Battleship in the near future. Many of the members have gained before. We are waiting for some more visitors.

The other, and probably most important thing this club does is attend conventions. Windycorn is the major convention of the semester. Captain takes off in February.

At Windycorn, there will be three or four thousand SF & F fans dressed as everything from aliens to unicorn knights. There are all kinds of activities to attend. Films and animation run for three days straight breaking only to look the home out.

Authors read and sign books, and are always available for a quick chat. Panels discuss everything from the difference between science fiction and fantasy to whether there is any good SF left.

You could join the Windy's Workshop, if your hand is good and your dedication is positive. Or you can lounge in the Concourse till 1:00 am snuffing cherries on your mouth over a chess game.

Now you know what Windycorn is. You're dying to go, but you don't know how. I can help. Come to the club meeting on October 12 and pick up a registration form. Send in the $20 fee by October 11. Save the card they send you. You'll need it later. Or you pay $5 more at the door. The convention will be held on the Woodfield Hyatt. Call me, Bob Hopfner at 249-9014, and I will meet you to give you the registration form. I hope you can attend Windycorn and our next meeting.

In my spare time I enjoy: reading, gardening, and going to science fiction conventions.

If I could change the world, I would eliminate pollution, racial prejudice, and the notion that either sex is inherently superior to the other in any way.

Craziest thing I've ever done: drove to Miami for a weekend convention, on one foot of sleep, and tried to pick up Colin Baker (Dr. Who) while he was wearing only a towel.

Dream date: a night with my husband, dinner, dancing and swimming at the beach, without our son going.

When I am one hundred years old, I will be chasing my husband around the bed.

The mission of Greenpeace

By Jeffrey Willson
Staff Writer

The atmosphere is being heated by the greenhouse effect, depleted of life-protecting ozone. Inland and oceanic waters are being contaminated with nuclear and toxic wastes. Tropical species which replenish Earth's oxygen and have inestimable medical benefits are being decimated.

On Sept. 27th Christopher Childs of the environmental activist group Greenpeace presented a slide lecture on the group's efforts to raise public awareness of the dangers we are creating, not only to thousands of plant and animal species, but to ourselves.

The mission of Greenpeace is to publicize suspected environmental hazards. The Niagara incident last year is typical of their tactics, which often consist of literally "getting in the way," interposing themselves between the threat and the environment.

Thus they drive dinghies between explosive harpoons and whales, stand between hunters and seals, sail into nuclear test zones. Modern communications makes these confrontations visible to millions, often within hours.

Many disagree with these tactics. The worst incident occurred in 1985 when the Greenpeace ship Rainbow Warrior, en route to protest a nuclear test in French Polynesia, was mined by agents of the French government while docked in New Zealand. After the first mine exploded, a Greenpeace photographer ran to get film and was killed when the second mine blew up.

There is a message here," says Childs. "It's sometimes more dangerous to relax at home than to seek out and combat danger. You don't know when the real threat is approaching, unless you look for it." He believes that Greenpeace is somewhere near the middle ground of environmental groups, more visible than many, not as radical as others.

For those who can't take time off to parachute off a thousand-foot smelstack or monitor pollution in Antarctica, the basic tactic is the opposite one - "getting out of the problem."

"If it makes you angry that tuna fishers carelessly net and kill thousands of dolphins a year, stop eating tuna. Send a letter to the tuna companies telling them. Don't buy ozone-damaging aerosols and tell the manufacturers you don't. Recycle your trash, and support recycling in your community. We have found that these simple actions - available to everyone - are very effective at changing corporate behavior."

In the Chicago area one of the immediate concerns is the health of the Great Lakes. Holding 20% of all the world's fresh water, the Lakes are involved in a cycle of pollution as industrial wastes, dumped into their waters (Waukegan Harbor, for example, is one of the most contaminated sites in the country,) evaporate out and precipitate down on communities miles inland.

The important thing," said Childs, "is to take some action. Even if you don't agree with our cause, find one that's meaningful to you, imagine what you can do to help, and then do the thing that seems a little risky, the thing that makes you a little anxious. You might not see any immediate change in the world, but you will always see an improvement in yourself."

Positive mental attitude

The quality of your life depends on your attitude toward your self and others. Only you can change or control your attitude. Your attitude affects how you look, and what you say or do. It also alters how you feel physically and mentally, and the degree of success you have in achieving your purposes in life.

Life is more meaningful with a positive mental attitude. Problems become easier to handle, goals are more attainable, mistakes are less disastrous, and the future is more exciting.

Test yourself on this "Positive Attitude" checklist:

1. Do you believe in yourself and your talents and purpose?
2. Do you respect the rights of others and give credit to them for what they do?
3. Do you take pride in your work?
4. Are you willing to accept change in yourself and others?
5. Do you have goals and a plan to achieve them?
6. Do you work hard to achieve your goals?
7. Do you maintain good relationships through good communications?
8. Do you demonstrate enthusiasm?
9. Are you willing to learn and recognize that no one has all the answers?
10. Are you usually on time and dependable?
11. Are you considerate of others and their point of view?
12. Are you a good listener and sincerely interested in others?
13. Do you consider mistakes an opportunity to learn?
14. Do you enjoy life and not take yourself too seriously?

If you answered "yes" to more than half of these questions, you are practicing positive thinking. Keep up the good work! Positive attitudes will make everyday living better.

Letters to the editor

An Open Letter to the Harper Community

A funny thing happened to me on the way to work today... only I didn't think it was so funny.

On Tuesday, October 2, 1989 at approximately 2:30 pm, I was near the intersection of Algonquin and Harper Drive when a male Harper employee started whistling at me.

At first I was disgusted, then angered. I couldn't help but feel insulted that the institution of higher education that I chose to invest my hard earned dollars in has employed rude, ignorant, male chauvinists, to be representatives of the maintenance division. I do not appreciate it in the least and I've got the feeling I'm not alone.

Is that any indication of Harper's opinion of women? Isn't there any orientation on how to deal with the public for the employees of this school?

To Harper's administration, I ask, "Will you put up with this?"

Supposedly, we are a civilized society, but by the actions of some of Harper's male employees, one wouldn't be able to draw that conclusion.

The Harbinger welcomes letters to the editor and replies to our editorialists. Letters must be 250 words or less, and must be signed with a social security number. Signatures will be withheld upon request. All letters are subject to editing. Send letters to Harper College, room A367, or bring them by Monday through Friday during regular office hours.

Overheard...

"I hate driving home on an empty bladder."

"We're not exactly curing cancer here."

"I wasn't controlling my arm, and I hit myself over the head with the phone."

"The floor is like, one of those amazing surfaces."

"You blew off the interview, you weren't even there."

"Shoot all the Devil's advocates."

"Don't give advice to a wise man."

What have you accomplished?

There has been much discussion lately about apathy here at Harper involving the Student Senate, the Harbinger, WHCM and the sports teams, not to mention the clubs and organizations.

It's true.

I'm sure there are many apathetic students, faculty and staff here at Harper. But there are many who care.

Being involved in the college's extra-curricular activities takes time. And time is something few students, especially the older students, have much of.

Almost every student works in addition to going to school. I, myself, have two jobs, a house and a family, as well as writing for the Harbinger.

And rightly so, my course work is a priority.

Many activities also seem geared toward the younger, full-time student. However, there are more older, part-time students attending Harper.

Someone said college is for learning, not being heavy into activities.

That is true.

However, any professor would probably tell you that education is not limited to the classroom. Experience, responsibility and working with others comes from participation.

I write for the Harbinger not only because I enjoy it but also for clippings. Those are copies of my stories that I will have to show prospective employers.

Yes, employers want a person with a college degree. But when they ask, "What have you accomplished?" they are not asking to see my homework.

Harper has been called a stepping stone to higher education. That is true and I am glad of it. I have attended a four-year university. Not only is a junior college more personal and more affordable than a four-year institution, it can also provide many of the same opportunities. A person can transfer from a junior college to a university and have junior status on acceptance as if they had attended the whole four years.

Experience, leadership and responsibility learned now can open so many more doors later. You cannot get those things out of a classroom. But Harper's activities can provide them.

You may even have some fun in the process!

Who has traffic solution?

The Student Senate deserves praise for recognizing the need to fix Harper's traffic congestion. However, they should give credit to the Board of Trustees for identifying the problem and beginning preliminary investigations of solutions before it ever became an issue in the Senate elections.

Now it is time for both sides to realize the futility of looking for an answer. The traffic problem cannot be solved in an economically prudent manner. Indeed, by creating easier access on and off of the campus, Harper would make traffic worse for itself in the future and worse in the surrounding community now.

Tuition was raised last year over the objections of many loud voices. The faculty did not receive the raise they threatened to strike for. Where does everyone think the funds for new roads or a parking structure will come from?

Easier access for cars would encourage greater use of cars, leading to the same congestion problem in the future. Harper does not need more parking spaces. A casual look at the back lots reveals more than enough spaces for overflow from the front. Los Angeles proved long ago that increasing asphalt for transportation doesn't solve anything.

If more vehicles converge on the campus, the surrounding roads will have to absorb the impact. Can Harper afford the fees levied by Palatine and others as a result?

These and many other factors deserve closer attention before action is taken.

Tears For Fears

Sowing the Seeds of Love

This song is great, but it does take time for it to grow on you. Structurally it is the most unusual piece of music I've heard recently in the charts. Lyrically and musically it reminds one of the dreaded Beatles, but don't hold that against it, it really is a good song. The B-side is more reminiscent of earlier TFF and is better than most of the new album (review forthcoming).

The Cure

Love Song

One of the least exciting and most straightforward Cure songs ever made. A song that Robert Smith wrote for his wife Mary (Simon Gallup wrote the music). Worth picking up for the outstanding B-side Fear of God.

Die Krupps with Nitzer Ebb

The Machineries of Joy

Fairly boring for industrial dance music. If you think Nitzer Ebb is repetitive, you'll hate this one. Adequate for the dance floor.

New Order

The remix of Run is fairly lame, and the 12" mix is not much more interesting. The real interest here is that there's only 20,000 copies of this record, so buy it now or you'll never see it again. Import 12" only.

Depeche Mode

Personal Jesus

When the acoustic version of this song was played on WKRI a few weeks ago, a few Depeche Mode fans that I know were rather surprised. A Depeche Mode song without keyboards? Well, that was only the acoustic version. The regular 12" mix is one heck of a dance song. As usual, there are about two thousand different mixes available.

The Jesus and Marychain

Blues From a Gun

The new single from The Jesus and the Marychain is pretty much a cross between the noise of feedback from their first album and the much calmer sounds of Barklands. It's a good song, but not as memorable as Happy When It Rains. The import CD single has three more tracks, including the near-industrial Penetration and a cover of the Temptations' My Girl.

Kate Bush

The Sensual World

Kate Bush returns for the first time since 1985 with a new single that lives up to its title. Here's hoping that the forthcoming album is not a disappointment. A great song.

Local band gives rock experience

By Brandon Rich

"En Gedi- A Rock Experience"

This is what a local band named En Gedi have written on all of their flyers. But are they really a Rock Experience? I went to McGregor, a night club in Elmhurst, to find out.

What I found was surprising. The band was good-VERY good. They combined just the right mixture of other groups' songs and En Gedi's originals. They played such Beatles classics as Rain, Revolution and She Said, She Said along with some popular R&B tunes such as Living in the Limelight and Working Man.

En Gedi's original songs ranged from the serious to the silly. Songs such as I Hate It When Girls Say NO, Stone Hands, and Hippy Shake (not to be confused with the Beale's Hippy Shake), provided just the right blend of music to interest every rock 'n' roll fan.

The band consists of

three members. Matt Fuller on lead guitar and vocals, Jason James on bass, and 60's leftover Eric Fuller on drums. Eric actually came out into the crowd and showed everyone how a real hippy dances the Hippy Shake.

If anyone is interested in seeing En Gedi, they will be playing at the Stay Out West Nightclub on Lake Street, in Hanover Park, on Oct. 22 at 7 pm. I suggest you show up, and look forward to "A Rock Experience."

Well, Tears For Fears fans, after four years they've finally come back! Roland Orzabel (lead vocals, keyboards, guitar) and Niky Holland (keyboards, backing vocals) have teamed

With the release of The Seeds of Love, Tears For Fears had a lot to live up to. They had to create an album just as unique as the first one, and that's just what they did.

The Seeds of Love will surprise even the biggest Tears For Fears fan. It's not really rock and roll. It's more jazz/soul/gospel/rock and roll. The album is done eloquently. So eloquently, in fact, that you may develop a liking to the album depending

You get the feel for the album when you play the first song, Woman In Chains. Its brash, blues sound so perfectly pleases your ears Badman's Song, following Woman In Chains, will probably be the next single released. This song has a little more of that original blues pizzazz that the others don't. Holland even sounds just like Ray Charles in this.

Side two of The Seeds of Love, lyrically speaking, is probably the most depressing side of an album ever written. Side two's first song

Standing on the Corner of the Third World, speaks of hardship and broken dreams for the down and out. The following song, Sword and Knives, talks about how life and the world can stab someone from behind. Then, after you're already depressed enough, the album closes with a song with uplifting lyrics, but disgustingly depressing music, called Famous Last Words. Don't listen to this side when you're real depressed!

When listening to The Seed of Love, one must keep an open mind. It is a well organized album that dares to be different in its approach and style. It's easily one of the best albums of the year. Tears For Fears won't make you cry with this one.

Supplementing this ten year chronology were Steve's various musical accomplishments from Crucifixion Steaks to Air Pie. Included in the "Steve and Garry Museum" were re-creations of the hits that made them famous, such as, Disco Demolition, Calls to Iran, and Dahl's on-air vasectomy, to name a few.

Other guests included Harry Carray, also featured on the Jonathan Brandmeier Show, Stanley Lawrence and a "How to Talk Black" segment, producer Rick Kaempfer, Hamburger Jim, and many others.

The show ended with a touching rendition of Dahl's latest song, Air Fire, commemorating their ten years together. Meiser joined Dahl in singing the final verse: "Thanks to all our friends for the last ten years. We wish that we could dart our tongues in all of your ears. Thanks for all your patience through our changing of gears, (Singer) Without you being there we'd just die."

Did you know a small tropical plant, Madagascar periwinkle, possesses a drug effective enough to help treat leukemia and Hodgkin's disease, three tropical plants have been found which contain chemicals able to defeat the AIDS virus, everyday destruction drives an average of 100 species of plants and animals to extinction, fifty acres of tropical forest land is destroyed every minute- 60% of the world's animal and plant life live in tropical rain forests? Hawks downed by DuPage

By Mark Devlin
Staff Writer

For the first time in two and a half years, Harper College lost to a North Central Community College Conference opponent. In a hard-fought, defensive battle, the Hawks succumbed to College of DuPage (COD) 14-7 Sept. 30.

Harper Coach, John Elask, proved to be correct in his comment this previous week that "who ever screws up the least will win." Citing turnovers as a major factor, Elask said, "We made enough mistakes against a good football team to not win."

COD Coach, Bob MacDougall, agreed saying, "When ever both teams play well, turnovers will kill you."

Harper's defense took the field after the opening kick-off and immediately came up with a fumble recovery. This led to James Haywood's 15 yard TD run opening the scoring. Haywood had 107 yards for the day to lead all rushers.

Then the Hawk defense recovered another COD fumble after the Chaparrals had been forced back to their 5-yard line on penalties. However, a missed field goal was the only result.

With the Chaparrals' offense still failing to move, Harper got the ball back. Skiffal running by Lorenzo Butler and excellent receiving by Juan Taylor led to another field goal attempt. Kicker Tyler Hill's 35 yard try bounced off the uprights and fell wide.

Chris Skadman got the ball back for Harper early in the second quarter on an interception. But a fumble on fourth down gave possession back to COD. Their offense drove in with the rushing of Rodriguez Carter and passing of sophomore quarterback Curt Miller. Miller quick it in to tie the score at seven at the half.

A big 40 yard kick return by Haywood at the start of the second half saw Harper move into position for another field goal. The attempt from 45 yards was also missed.

In the next series, Harper defensive back Kevin Ferry made a fine defensive play to save a possible TD. With good coverage on his mover deep down field he was able to break up the play, but took the worst of the play as he had to leave the field hurt.

The Harper defense went on to get the ball back when linebacker John Rosshaw forced a fumble. But on offense, Haywood fumbled a hand-off, giving possession back to COD. This resulted in the Chaparrals missing a field goal from 15 yards out.

Once COD had the ball back Jon Belcher and Tom Hubler combined for Harper's only sack. The Hawks regained possession only to cough it up again.

The Chaparrals moved back up field and on a trick reverse-pass, caught the Harper secondary off guard, putting the ball on the 2-yard line. Two tries later, Miller went in for the game winning score.

In the waning seconds the COD defense clased down on Harper QB, Jerry Chance, snaking him to the ground and getting the ball back on downs with only 24 seconds remaining to play.

This loss ends Harper's 15 game winning streak against conference opposition. When asked about Harper's prospects for play-off action now, Elask concluded that it all, "depends on the character of this team, how they bounce back. It's not over till the fat lady sings."

With an overall record of 3-2 and 2-1 in conference, the Hawks next game will be at home against Illinois Valley, Oct. 7 at 1 p.m.

naturally ranked Kankakee.

"The girls played well," said coach Julie Ellefson-Kuehn of the Waukena match Sept. 28 at Elgin. "They're (Waukena) not real strong offensively. There was no doubt that we were in control the whole time." Leading the way for the Lady Hawks was Linda Hand with a flawless serving game.

Staff Writer

Harper's volleyball team added another win to its record last week with a victory over Waukena 15-11, 15-11.

Unfortunately, the Lady Hawks absorbed two more losses, losing 2-15, 10-15 to Elgin and 3-15, 9-15, 8-15 to

"It was an overall strong team effort," added Ellefson-Kuehn. "Our service errors were at a minimum."

Later the same day, Harper faced a quicker Elgin squad and struggled with its adjustment during the first game.

"It was a whole different tempo (as compared to Waukena)," said Ellefson-Kuehn. "They were quicker and it showed in the first game. We did come back strong in the second game though."

"We play them two more times this year, so now that we've seen them, we'll play them closer and might come away with a victory."

The Lady Hawks travelled home Sept. 29 to take on Kankakee, ninth-ranked according to the National Junior College Athletic Association.

"We did more than a respectable job against them," Ellefson-Kuehn. "We made them go out and earn their win."

Nick's Bedmark, out of the line up for the past couple of matches due to illness, returned to key the front line play of the Lady Hawks. Teammate Sam Ghate contributed with "outstanding defense" according to Ellefson-Kuehn.

Midway through the season, Harper is 4-10, one win short of last year's total.

"The girls have an excellent attitude," Ellefson-Kuehn said. "I think we will do well the second half of the season."

Lady Hawks to defend title at conference meet

By Eric Bingham
Staff Writer

"Realistically I think we're the third best team in conference," said Harper's women's tennis coach Kathy Chamberlain. "With our loss to Joliet dropping us to fourth, I want us to move up a spot at the meet."

The Lady Hawks (3-3 conference, 4-3 overall) finish their North Central Community College Conference (NCC) competition this weekend at the conference meet at Illinois Valley (IV). IV will defend its title against top threats College of DuPage, Joliet and Harper.

"I think we'll do well if we don't hit IV right off the bat," Chamberlain said. "I don't think we can finish first though."

Harper fell to fourth in the conference with a 2-7 loss to Joliet Sept. 28. Despite the loss, Liz Mangner stood out for the Lady Hawks, winning second singles and combining with Lisa Berg to come away with a first doubles victory.

"Liz had a good day," Chamberlain commented. "She seems to get better every day. She's really starting to believe in herself."

Berg won her opening set at first singles, but line problems, according to Chamberlain, affected her game and she lost the next two sets and the match.

"We went into the match taking it too lightly," Chamberlain said of the loss. "Eventually we just weren't prepared."

The defeat could hurt the Lady Hawks when seedings and pairings are drawn for the conference meet.

"We're not where we wanted to be right now," said Chamberlain. "If we can get the right seeds and the right pairings, we can beat these people. The kids are hungry. We just have to do what we're capable of."

Leading the way for Harper will be Berg, Mangner and third singles Kim Hauser.

"We have some good players on top, but we're not real strong at our lower levels," Chamberlain added. "We have to be more consistent."

"We do have one thing going for us and that's our positive attitude. That can keep us in it."

In other action, Harper defeated Sauk Valley 6-3 for the Lady Hawks' only non-conference win.

"We played one of our best matches of the year," said Chamberlain. "Kim played one of her finest matches. We also did some changing around in our positions in second doubles that seemed to work."

The six match victories were all straight sets. The three losses may have been avoided but fifth singles player Julie Neszyk wasn't able to compete, forcing sixth singles Marilyn Hurtado into her position.

Third doubles forced Hurtado to play without Neszyk with whom she's participated with all year.

Harper plans expansion of day-care center

By Erik Wurzer
News Editor

Harper College, responding to the need of students, is building a day-care center for childhood education students to work at.

Harper President Paul Thompson said that it will not be used to build the center, which will cost an estimated $3 million. To pay for the center, the college will try to get corporate sponsors.

Currently, the college has an on-campus center, capable of handling 50 children. The new building will be a 25,000-square foot day care center which will have a 500 child capacity.

Vice President of Academic Affairs, Dave Williams, said the new center is needed so early childhood education students will have the opportunity to work with children of all ages, rather than preschoolers only.

In the past, Harper sent students to private day-care centers to learn, but was not satisfied with the quality of instruction.

Williams also commented that the day-care center will probably have no more than 100 children at a time.

Measles outbreak

By Erik Wurzer
News Editor

To avoid measles outbreaks, college students should have not one, but two doses of measles vaccination. Maryland-based American College Health Association (ACHA) announced last month.

"Most college students have had one (vaccination) by the time they get there (to college)," said Anne Higley of the ACHA. This school year, there have been at least three measles cases reported, one of which was at Harper College. Neither case has led to outbreaks.

"So far, we're encouraged, but then it's still early," said Dr. William Adamson of the Center for Disease Control (CDC) based in Atlanta. "We're not out of the woods yet."

Students who were vaccinated prior to 1970 should receive shots to lower their risk of contracting measles.

Health Services at Harper offers free vaccination to students.

Across the country, 8,941 measles cases were reported to the CDC, which is a 27% increase over last year.

Last winter and spring many college campuses were hit by the virus including: Kent State, North Carolina State, Kansas University, and Siena College in New York.

Centric guidelines have not been made, but the CDC recommends "all freshmen get a second dose."

The stage was set last Saturday night for Adrian Belew and his opening act Howard Levy. Levy set the mood for a night of international music which was highlighted by Belew performing rock songs to a capacity crowd. Belew featured songs from his most recent album, Mr. Music Head. The encore showcased Belew's talent using digital effects on his guitar.

Senate chooses representatives

Student committees helps Harper make policies for campus

By Anthony Ivaris
Staff Writer

Student Senate chose representatives last Friday for the committee on campus.

These committees are the main policy making segment of Harper College.

Among the more important committees are: Institutional Planning, Honors, Student Conduct, Environmental Health and Safety, and Faculty Evaluation.

Typically a committee will have seven faculty and administration members and one or two student members.

Committees are the main governing body of Harper College on a day to day basis.

Student participation has been a large problem on some of these senate committees.

Institutional Planning is responsible for setting medium and long-range goals for Harper. The committee takes their plans and forwards them to the Board of Trustees, the policy making branch of Harper.

Honors creates, markets, and executes Honors classes. It is expected to start a Honors Student Club this semester. Another focus is to enlist more students in Honors classes.

Student conduct is made up of four administrators and three students, all of whom deal with discipline problems.

Environmental Health and Safety ensures that Harper makes an effort to benefit the environment on campus. In the past, they have tried to prohibit drinking and eating in classrooms.

Faculty Evaluation maintains a reviewing system for the administration. It accomplishes its goal by developing forms to survey students on their opinions of a teachers performance. These forms are handed out at the end of each semester.

Committees are formed before students are appointed. Prior to a Student Senate's first meeting, a large part of the policy of the committee is already formulated.

There are over 200 full time faculty members to serve on committees, while there are only 11 Student Senators.

The lack of Student Senators makes it difficult to properly staff the committees with student members.

Mr. Musichead plays Harper

By Mike Schweitzer
Staff Writer

Adrian Belew satisfied a capacity crowd in Harper's auditorium last Saturday night.

Howard Levy, Belew's opening act, began the concert with his unique style. He came on stage performing on instruments many people never get a chance to hear. He played the African Marimba, the Chinese Chong, and proved himself a remarkable harmonica player. It was already known that Howard and Levy was a great piano virtuoso and his incredible talents let no one down.

In an interview with Levy, he said that he tries to give a little bit of himself to each performance. Levy definitely left a little bit of himself at Harper for everyone to enjoy.

There was a short intermission between Levy and Belew's performance. Once Adrian Belew took the stage it was another kind of concert. Belew was much louder and definitely more rock and roll. The audience was captivated by his music.

Belew performed his songs from his current album, "Mr. Music Head," it sounded like he was playing them verbatim. The only variations were in his solos, which were remarkable. Nevertheless, the audience responded with satisfaction.

Belew proved to be an incredible guitarist and a fun performer. The old King Crimson tunes he played were great and his encore was a memorable display of Belew's talent, showing the wonders of digital effects on guitar.

The concert offered a unique chance to see two very different musicians play back to back both demonstrating their fine talents. Harper was really honored to have such guests as Howard Levy and Adrian Belew. With luck we'll see them again soon!

1989 Fall Movie Preview

ways to resolve conflicts.
A live theatre production featuring five teenagers from different backgrounds who have

"Hallway There," a sixty-

Letters to the editor

Racism can be done away with

Racism, what is it? According to Webster's, racism means "the practice of racial discrimination, persecution, etc."

On Tuesday October 3, the United States Senate held a debate with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee regarding their view of the U.S. Senate South African Policy. Senator Harry Cohen, who is the Assistant Secretary of State of African Affairs, called for a lifting of sanctions against South Africa. Senator Cohen also wanted a new constitutional order calling for equality among all South Africans.

Senator Paul Simon agreed with Senator Cohen on all points. In closing, Senator Cohen asked the U.S. Senate for $4.9 million in aid effective Fiscal Year '90, and that an additional increase be made in Fiscal Year '91. So, as you can see, the topic of racism has caught the eyes and ears of everyone, including the federal government.

Back in the 1920's there was racism amongst the Irish and Italians in America and the Germans and the Jews in Europe. During the 1960's racism has been shown to the Spanish and Hindus. Some people are saying that the whites will be a minority, does this mean that they too will be the target of racism? So this raises a question, how do we go about ending racial discrimination?

People today can do away with the racism problem if they allow everyone the general courtesy and mutual respect to have a difference of opinion and beliefs. "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." This quote taken from the Bible says it all. Before doing or saying something derogatory or harmful to another person, take time out and ask yourself, "How would I react if I was the other person?"

Harper employees respond to accusations

Response to the disgruntled whistler and Harbinger editors, regarding October 5, 1989, Letter to the Editor: Attention Ladies and Gentlemen of the Press.

1. October 2nd, 1989, is on a Monday, not a Tuesday.

2. No employee from the "maintenance division" of the college was near that area of the campus on either Monday or Tuesday, October 2nd or 3rd; there may have been outside contractors working in that area.

3. The letter implies that the job requirements for all maintenance personnel include rudeness, male chauvinism, and ignorance; this is absurd.

In the future, please check on facts before publication in order to achieve the standard of excellence expected in this "institution of higher education." Sincerely,

Maintenance Department Staff

Dear Editors,

This is a reply to a letter to the Harper community in the October 5th edition. A female student claims to have been the victim of a male chauvinist, in that his whistle allegedly directed toward her, was a serious insult. She further claims that this was a member of the Harper maintenance staff.

The behavior of this individual is certainly not mature, but a fool, standing on a corner, shouting at passing cars, does not constitute a case of "sexual harassment," nor should it send a rational adult off, enraged. Most of us have the sense to put such foolishness in its proper perspective, and not let it ruin our day.

We at the Physical Plant do not appreciate being called a bunch of "male, ignorant male chauvinists," as the so kindly put it, and would like to see some shred of evidence that this was indeed a Harper employee and not one of the many outside contractors that work at Harper every day—many of whom wear blue uniforms similar to ours. We feel as strongly about the issue of sexual harassment as anyone, but to be accused outright and as a group is unfair and preposterous.

In conclusion, we hope that in the future the Harbinger will leave unfounded accusations to the tabloids and stick to responsible journalism. To encourage these petty complaints will detract from the real issues that we all support.

Very truly yours,
Members of the Illinois
Education Association, and NEA

Hey McFly, McFly are you in there?? As I knock on the head of the Student Senate.
Just voted in and need something to jump on? Hey, I know, how about solving our traffic problem here at Harper? Yeah, that's it, we'll build a super-high-way from Euclid to Algonquin. That will keep traffic flowing. We can even charge a toll to get back the $1.2 million for the project.

Well, McFly, your thinking too hard.
Everyone knows there's a traffic problem, so not going to get better. Building more exits won't solve the entire problem, and is expensive. Back-up for minute. McFly, Take a deep breath...OK. What's the problem? Too much traffic or too many students starting at the same time?

Come on McFly, we're all waiting!

Hawks scalp Apaches

Harper dominates Illinois Valley 41-12

By Mark Devlin
Staff Writer

Harper's Hawks dominated Illinois Valley's Apaches 41-12 on October 7.

Breaking away from a hard defeat last week, Head Coach John Elask was pleased at the resilience his team showed. "The way they came back from last week was critical for our end-of-season run-in," Vincent McMahon, the Apaches' head coach, said. "We were able to move a bit, but Harper was just all over us."

After the opening kick-off, Illinois Valley moved the ball well, repeatedly passing into Harper territory. However, on their second running play, the RB coughed up the ball on a sweep, giving Harper possession.

James Haywood, 123 yards all day, and Lorenzo Butler, 90, worked the ball downfield, rushing to the goal line. With 3:29 left in the first quarter, Butler dove over for the TD to open the scoring, and Tyler Hill made the extra point for Harper to take the lead 7-0.

Illinois Valley's next offensive series was short lived. Thomas Fuhrer sacked the QB, forcing the Apaches to punt. The Hawks immediately capitalized on it. Juan Taylor received 14 yards for setting up Harper's second TD, early in the second quarter. Again, the extra point was good and the Apaches were down by 14.

On defense, Fuhrer teamed up with Antonio Sutton for another sack. However, Illinois Valley managed to convert a fourth down and go for the end zone. First Steve Bruck's sack, then the Illinois Valley receivers prevented QB Kenton Carr from putting the Apaches on the scoreboard.

Harper QB, Jerry Chaney, failed to convert this to points as Illinois Valley's next offense series lead to nothing but a punt. When Harper got the ball back things started to happen. Butler converted another 4th down on a good second effort and Haywood rambled 65 yards for yet another TD. With a perfect extra point, Harper went ahead 34-0.

Failing to move the ball, Phil Ford punted it away, but only as far as Jennie Ford. He returned it 35 yards for Illinois Valley's first score.

Harper got the ball back and replied with a 44 yard pass from Chaney to Haywood. With one second left on the clock Haywood dove over from the one yard line. The extra point was missed and the Hawks went in at half-time leading 20-0.

The Apaches opened the second half with a squib kick, allowing the Hawks to start at their 47. A 35 yard run by Haywood was called back for holding. Undeterred, Chaney hit Brad Jones from 42 yards for another Harper TD to lead Illinois Valley 27-0.

Steadman's second interception of the year, on Illinois Valley's next offense series lead to nothing but a punt. When Harper got the ball back things started to happen. Butler converted another 4th down on a good second effort and Haywood rambled 65 yards for yet another TD. With a perfect extra point, Harper went ahead 34-0.

Illinois Valley came back on offense and rolled downfield. Carr was able to pass a little and open up the running game. On the last play of the third quarter, he was flushed out of the pocket, but managed to complete a pass into the end zone for the Apache's second score. Unfortunately, their two point conversion failed.

Harper was intercepted. Jim Bear came on as the Apache QB and hit Aaron Dunlop for 30 yards. Henson Hurd saved the TD. Another failure on fourth down lead Harper to punt from their end zone and another fourth down failure for Illinois Valley. This left Harper to run the clock out, with the score at 41-12.

Coch Elask praised the freshman QB. Chaney's performance (5.8 167 yards, 3 TD). "He bounced back well. He was also happy with his defense, limiting Illinois Valley to only 12 points."

However, injuries are causing concern. "We seem to pick up a few more each week," OL Kevin Gonzalez had to be carted off.

Next week, Harper faces Morraine Valley away at their own unique field in Palos Hills. Elask said, "It's a big game for them. They have to beat us to have a shot at the playoffs, so it won't be a walkover." The Hawks go into the game with an overall record of 4-2 and 3-1 in conference. Kick-off will be at 1 pm.

Spidan came in as the QB for Butler's rushing. Then, Chaney hit Jones from 44 yards for their second team up, leaving Harper 41-12 ahead.

Illinois Valley tried to work the pitch-out with some success, but a Dave Schilling and Jason Holmes sack ended that drive on a fourth down.

Campus roads under repair Construction scheduled to finish this week

By Erik Warner
News Editor

Perimeter drive, the circular drive surrounding Harper, is under repair and should be finished later this week.

Also included in the resurfacing project is A Boulevard, the road coming off Algonquin road going toward A Building.

The cost of the project as estimated by Harper College's purchasing department is $147,000.

Arrows Road Construction Company, a contractor based in Mount Prospect, is responsible for the work.

The project began roughly three weeks ago, according to Kevin Ready of the Arrows Road Construction company, and should resume today if there is no rain.

Arrows still has to tie down perimeter, a "road fabric," on Perimeter Drive before it puts down the final layer of asphalt.

"Petro-mat helps to retard cracks in the pavement," said Ready, "it has to be dry to put it in."

Resurfacing of the road is scheduled to be completed by this Saturday, ending the trouble it has caused many motorists at Harper.

"It's nice to see they're doing something, but it's [the resurfacing] an inconvenience because it can be hazardous to your car," said Jody Willson, "especially if you have inadequate suspension."

Perimeter drive was torn up last month by construction crews to prepare for the resurfacing work being done.

John Yattone, a Public Safety officer, said, "They have the money now, but it might not be in next year's budget, or five years from now. Only 75% [of the road] needs it, but it should be done while the funds are available."

"Slutty" Shillen, who has done some construction work, commented, "The roads had to be done this year - it was a wise choice. The longer you let something go the worse it gets."

Presidential race ends in tie Tie breaking election to be held as third candidate enters race

By Anthony Garcia
Staff Writer

Votes cast on the Student Senate floor October 6, with Dan Bussey (liberal Arts Senator) and Ed Wallace (Business and Social Sciences Senator) tied 5-5 in the Student Senate Presidential race.

Kathleen Munson, Academic Environment & Language Studies Senator, announced her candidacy for president last Tuesday, after the first election.

Munson believes she "is the most qualified for the position. I have experience relating to the position. I have time to devote to the students of Harper to fulfill their needs to the best of my ability."

Munson was in student government throughout high school. She served as Parliamentarian, District Office Newsletter Editor, and on several constitutional committees.

Her main goal is to help the clubs on campus extend their membership. Among her ideas are surveys, and granting clubs toward older students.

The median age of students at Harper is 35.

The deadlock is expected to be resolved at the October 20 meeting.

Bussey cited his academic record at Harper and his dedication to the activities he has participated in.

Bussey has attended Harper since 1983. In that time he has been a member of the Astronomy Club and a part of Project TEAM.

He also has experience in middle management in the automotive industry.

Bussey worked on several political campaigns, including John Anderson in 1980, Ronald Reagan in 1984, and George Bush in 1988.

His focus is the question of proper leadership, student involvement and the traffic problem. "The participation here is pathetic," he stated.

Bussey, who does not constitutionally qualify for the presidency (a candidate needs nine credit hours and Bussey has only 7 1/2), has permission to serve in the capacity of President from Student Activities Director Jeanne Paikman.

Wallace stressed the importance of his past involvement at Harper. He is one of only two returning Senators.

Wallace's leadership in the Young Corporate Achievers has increased membership from two to 30 in the course of one year.

He has also been active in Program Board, Political Science Club, and College Republican.

Wallace is also a captain of two precincts for the Republican party, and does political volunteer work.

Wallace stressed the importance of organized leadership and the extension of both the number and size of clubs on campus, communication with the handicapped, and an alliance between the Student and Faculty Senates to act together.

Dan Pivceck, a Clubs and Organization Senator, is running for treasurer.

The budget often yields over $1000 in excess, but Pivceck believes he can solve the problems.

Speech Team fares well

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-Chief

The Harper Speech Team competed in its first tournament of the year on October 13 and 14 at Illinois State University.

Most of the Illinois four-year teams compete at this tournament. Some of the state's best teams, such as Bradley University, Illinois State University and Northern Illinois University are present. This makes the Illinois State Tournament the team's toughest competition of the year.

A total of 14 Harper students attended the Illinois State University Tournament.

Despite the stiff competition, Harper's team fared very well. Although they didn't bring home a trophy, a number of Harper's competitors were very successful in their individual rounds.

Earning a first place standing in her round was Michele Pruzan in Dramatic Interpretation.

Pruzan, Kathi Brandolino, Roger Bieri, Ann Rietz and Elaine Witom all earned second place rankings.

Third place rankings went to Michael Terson, Diane Squires, Joanne Palomby, Shari Gilmore, Jaime Giallo, Rosemary Langer and Keith Miller.

Gwen Royston and Marsha Delis also competed for Harper's team in this tournament.

"The team is off to a good start this year," commented Speech Coach Marcus Litrenta. "We have a lot of really promising new members."

The speech team's next tournament will be at Richland Community College in November. For more information on the Speech Team, contact Litrenta at 397-3400 extension 2644.

DSS lends a hand

By Jeffrey Wilson
Staff Writer

What's the largest minority group in the United States? What college campus serves more members of this group than any other in Illinois? If you answered "persons with disabilities" and Harper, you're right.

By some estimates as much as 105 of the population has a disability in learning, sight, hearing, speech or motor function present from birth or developing later due to accident or medical condition. This is the only minority that anyone can join at any time.

Harper's Disabled Student Services (DSS) has provided tutoring, information, counseling, and special equipment since 1973—in earlier years more extensive program than many other schools.

Another serious problem is the lack of local transportation. Many people who do not drive are unable to get useful bus service. PACE provides buses with wheelchair lifts, but no special assistance for persons with other disabilities.

For those with sight or hearing impairment, new technological developments are simplifying communications.

Harper's DSS office, computer labs and library provide such equipment as computer keyboards adapted for motor impairment, braille printers, and TTY/DD phones which receive and transmit text visually. A recent $25,000 donation from Allstate allowed DSS to purchase print magnifiers and synthesizers, which speak computer input and output aloud.

"A disability is a continuum

In an average year DSS provides services for about 400 students; out an average of 1000 who state on registration that they have some disability. The most prevalent are learning disabilities, with hearing impairments are also common.

"Our campus is fairly accessible for wheelchair users," says DSS Coordinator Tom Thompson. "Most buildings have ramps or elevators; the biggest remaining problem is the need for automatic doors. Some doors which have been installed, are opened by a large push button, which is difficult for many people to operate. Doors which open automatically as someone approaches would be challenge," says Thompson. "If you encounter a frustrating situation—say you have a car that won't start, you'd probably get rid of the car. With a disability you just live with it and work around it as best you can."

Friends and classmates may see the challenge as more serious than it really is, and hesitate to suggest social activities. But of course a disability does not determine a person's personality or interests. The better you get to know someone, the less important it may seem.

Students interested in assisting DSS as tutors, labors, or note takers can stop by D119 or call ext. 2266.

Letters to the editor

Third exit on campus

An open letter to the Student Senate regarding the current traffic debate.

I have attended Harper since fall of '86, and yes, the traffic problem has increased. However, all who have contributed solutions this semester seem to have failed to notice a simpler solution than the building of new exits and entrances.

I was in class when Don Bussey (since elected) came in to talk. His major point being the traffic problem. He said that to fix it should not cost us anymore in the raising of tuition. That sounded like a good idea, but the fact that he said Harper only has two exits and that we should build more for Euclid and Algonquin bothered me.

I guess he and other members of the Student Senate do not realize that Harper already has a third exit. An exit onto Roselle Road. It seems at least half of the people who wait at Euclid and Algonquin suggest wind up on Roselle, North or South bound.

So I offer this solution, instead of major construction and major costs.

how about simply advertising the use of the third exit.

I probably just ruined my (and a few others) quick and easy method of skipping traffic at Harper, but I don't see it causing my tuition to skyrocket either.

Sincerely,
Mickey Scitapani,
Liberal Arts

Celebrate the world

By Lisa Auld
Managing Editor

As the rest of Illinois celebrates Homecoming, Harper celebrates the World.

International Week has been declared on Harper's campus October 21 through 27 on Harper's campus.

This is the first year Harper will celebrate International Week. It replaces Fall Fest from past years.

Jim Cabaj, Special Events Coordinator of Program Board, explains, "Fall Fest was just a week of disorganized events with a bad theme."

"We're doing away with the whole King and Queen idea. It was supposed to unite the campus, but instead turned into a big joke."

To fill the empty space, people with Student Activities developed International Week.

"We hope to increase world awareness by providing such events as the World Game."

Jim Cabaj

As a concept, it was developed through Round Table discussions.

Round Table was developed last year as a means for the clubs and organizations on campus to know each other and aid in coordinating events between the groups.

Through the course of Round

Table, it became obvious that the club with the largest amount of members is International Club.

It has over 100 regular members, with representatives from about 75 countries.

The club provides a forum for the international students on Harper's campus to gather and share their experiences while meeting American students in a casual setting. The club has also proven to be beneficial for American students in learning about other cultures. They also do many off campus activities, such as a camping trip a few weeks ago, and their Halloween party coming up.

Cabaj said, "Most students are geographically illiterate. Hopefully this will increase their understanding of our place in the world. For example, when most people think of Africa they think of bare-skinned natives or starving Ethiopians. Shanta the story teller presents a very civilized and realistic picture of Africa geared toward the college student."

"We hope to increase world awareness," said Cabaj, "by providing such events as the World Game, which teaches people about the population and the resources of the world."

Areas of the A Building lounge will be decorated with flags and posters from around the world.

Each day has its own theme and will represent a different continent.

Monday is European day. Tuesday is Asian day. (Tuesday is also nationally recognized as United Nations Day.) Wednesday is African day. Thursday is South American day. Friday doesn't have a theme.

The cafeteria will feature food from different continents throughout the week to coincide with the theme of the day.

Cabaj emphasized, "International Week is tightly bound together with the theme. We live in an international community. We should be learning more about our neighbors."

It is hoped International Week, besides replacing Fall Fest, will promote international awareness and knowledge of our world. So celebrate International Week, and celebrate the world.

Chinese Golden Dragon Acrobats

The Chinese Golden Dragon Acrobats and Magicians will kick off International Week on Saturday.

The group is composed entirely of members of the Chang family, who will perform feats they have been practicing since childhood.

Magic, comedy, and drama are the essence of this colorful Chinese troupe, which presents acrobats somersaulting through rings of flames and eleven acrobats riding a single bicycle.

One of the most spectacular acts is one performed by Chang Yu-Ching, who places four champagne bottles on a table and continues to balance a series of chairs on the bottles. When the chairs form a ceiling-high tower, Chang does a one-handed vertical handstand on the topmost chair.

Acts also include a comic magician whose many wondrous feats are based on illusion, tumblers who toss cups and saucers onto his head to form an ever-growing stack.

The grace and precision of the acrobats are the result of years of dedicated training and discipline, but their art was formed by centuries of tradition. Chinese acrobats were created and performed in China as far back as 200 BC, and have always been an integral part of the Chinese culture and arts. Many of these acts demonstrate the achievement of perfection through finding harmony between mind and body - an ancient concept of the Orient.

The show also features Chinese dance and Kung Fu demonstrations - extraordinary feats that seem physical laws.

Cruiscin Tae Kwon Do Shanta the Storyteller

Top 'o the mornin' to you! Monday the Chicago based group

Cruiscin (Kroosh-keen) will perform traditional Irish folk music as the highlight of European Day.

The five piece band has been featured on the Jonathan Brandmeier St. Patrick's Day show. Their band includes a stringed instrument, a flute, a tin whistle, a fiddle, and an accordion.

Both the music and mood promise to be festive, so check out the pot of gold that lies at the end of this rainbow!

As the selection for Asian Day, a Tae Kwon Do demonstration will take place on Tuesday.

This free martial arts display will feature Earl Weiss, the Illinois State Director for the United States Tae Kwon Do Federation. He is internationally certified as a fourth degree black belt and has been involved in Tae Kwon Do since 1973. Weiss also owns and operates a school in Des Plaines, the National Tae Kwon Do Academy.

The demonstration will also feature Tae Kwon Do tradition and dress.

The art of storytelling is not reserved for young audiences alone.

Stories and songs of the African people are the focus of African Day on Wednesday. Shanta, a storyteller, blends African, Caribbean, and African-American cultures with songs, poetry, chants and the delightful sounds of numerous instruments of African origin.

All ages respond to the warmth, humor, drama and excitement which the tales convey through her dynamic telling.

Shanta's performances are a visual feast as well, with her gestures, body language and colorful outfits.

Her stories provide insights into the culture and heritage of African people and the contributions that Africans have made to the world throughout history.

Demonstrations of various musical instruments from the African tradition teach how the African people used available plants, gourds and other found objects to create wonderful new sounds.

The program is geared toward a college audience and is widely recognized. Some of Shanta's most notable performances have been at the Field Museum of Natural History, the Art Institute of Chicago, and in 1987, the Exchange Place of the National Storytelling Festival in Jonesborough, Tennessee.

Sotavento-Latin American Music

A six piece Latin American ensemble, Sotavento, will appear at Harper on Thursday during South American Day.

Sotavento is a Latin American musical ensemble that performs a variety of Latin American styles. Audiences hear the music of countries such as Peru, Chile, Brazil and Puerto Rico coming from a single group. Sotavento also synthesizes these styles, along with elements of western classical and jazz, into its own original compositions in the tradition of the "New Song" movement of Latin America.

The group blends traditional and contemporary Latin American music with the help of more than 25 different instruments. Many of these are extremely unique, such as the Mexican vihuela, a stringed instrument, and the Andean Guenacho, a type of flute. Sotavento attempts to "create an understanding of Latin American people and culture" through their music.

Sotavento was formed in 1981. Since then, it has fostered, by means of its music, an awareness and understanding of Latin American peoples and cultures. These varied cultures are reflected through the use of a large variety of indigenous instruments, traditional rhythms and lyrics which reflect current events. The members of Sotavento are Orlando Calvera, Puerto Rico; Anne Trassil, United States; Jaime Guisafre, El Salvador; Francisco Lopez, Mexico; Josue Pizarro, Puerto Rico; Sylvia Ramirez, United States.

Sotavento performs a blend of traditional and contemporary Latin American music using over 25 different instruments. As part of International Week, they will perform Thursday in the J Building Theatre.

World Game

Imagine you are 2000 miles tall. You are standing on the Earth with the space shuttle in orbit at ankle height. The moon is 70 stories above and the sun is about 25 miles away. Your foot is over 300 miles long. As you walk over the surface of the planet you are moving at 2.5 million miles an hour. You see the world like you've never seen it before. From your hometown, USA, you can see Europe, Africa, Asia, Australia, and Antarctica. What is it? It's The World Game.

The World Game, an educational economic adventure, is to be held on Thursday.

Participants will become part of a "living scorecard" as they interact on a world map the size of a basketball court. With 100 participants, The World Game Institute is a non-profit research and education organization based in Philadelphia.

will participate as the biosphere and as Multinational Corporations.

As The World Game progresses it quickly becomes apparent that those in developed countries have an abundance of supplies.

After the consequences of a nuclear holocaust are shown, the focus changes to to create a positive vision for the future.

The World Game was originally conceived by Buckminster Fuller as a creative alternative to war games. One of its principal ideas is to make accessible to everyone the same information that the leaders of the world use in their decision-making process. Fuller contended that the more people "in the know", the better we would all be.

World's Worst Film Fest

Do you like throwing wads of paper at movie screens, booing movies off the screen or just getting rowdy at movie theaters?

Then you'll love the World's Worst Film Fest! Come to the J Building theatre on Friday to see four of the worst foreign films ever made.

This year's wild and wacky festival is a tribute to Japanese film making and rounds out the International Week festivities.

Pick from these bad flicks: X From Outer Space, starring Godzilla the Space Monster; Mothra, a creature on a quest for the finest set of twins; First Spaceship on Venus, which highlights the exploratory mission of an international group of scientists; and Return of the Streetfighters, a Kung Fu flick. All the films are Japanese movies with English subtitles.

THE PEOPLE IN YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD

"People in your Neighborhood" is brought to you by the Features section of the Harper College student newspaper, the Harbinger. "Who are the people in your neighborhood? Write the people that you meet when you're walking down the street each day?" This edition introduces some of Harper's International students.

The Burgundian Consort plays at Harper

By Michael Waskiewicz
Entertainment Editor

The renaissance era is all but gone, but there are still some who are trying to keep it alive. Some try to recreate the literature, some try to recreate the theater, others try to recreate the music.

Richard Simons, artistic director holding three music degrees from the University of Ohio, spends most of his free time in his workshop listening and recreating the musical instruments of the 12th through 16th century.

There are very few musical instruments still in existence which were made before the year 1500, says Simons. "Hardly any are in playable condition, so they have to be reconstructed. Gathering the information needed to build a historically accurate replica of a lost instrument is much more difficult and time consuming than building it. I probably spent 100 hours building a Gothic harp, but the research took much longer."

Simons' primary source of information for building his instruments comes from iconography. Iconography is the study of paintings, sculptures, paintings, and other historical objects. Simons used sculptors, woodcarvers, drawing, paintings, and stained glass windows for the replication of his instruments.

"No matter how much reading I've done or how many pictures I've studied, I seldom feel I have enough data to actually start cutting and shaping the wood. At some point I literally have to force myself to stop asking questions and start building," Simons says.

Instruments built by Simons include the Vielle (medieval flute), the Rebec (three stringed bow-instrument), the Hardy-Gurdy (hybrid bow/keyboards instrument), the Viola Da Gamba (stringed instrument), the Harp (15th-century medieval harp), the Krumphorn (sharp sounding medieval horn), and a variety of medieval percussion instruments.

After years of building the instruments, Simons learned to play them and formed a four man ensemble in 1978: the Burgundian Consort. Albert Rawlings, John Palagin, and Ronald Rendek complete the Consort. Under the direction of Simons the ensemble tries to copy the harmony of 16th century music.

On October 19 at 12:15 pm Richard Simons will lead The Burgundian Consort at Harper College in P205. The Consort will take students, faculty, and the public on an exploration of medieval and Renaissance music, performing on instruments made and mastered by the members. Medieval men and Renaissance lovers get ready!

Marillion brings back 'Art Rock'

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

Two big names in the so-called "art-rock" area, Pink Floyd and Genesis, went through drastic changes at particular points in their respective careers. They both lost their creative member.

Pink Floyd lost Roger Waters (vocalist, bassist, and primary songwriter) in the mid-eighties. Waters moved on to a brilliant but non-successful solo career, leaving room for guitarist David Gilmour to take over the vocal chores.

Genesis lost frontman Peter Gabriel in 1974 when he decided he preferred the life of a solo artist. After searching high and low for a suitable vocalist to take over for Gabriel, the bandmembers settled on their own drummer, Phil Collins.

It is almost the nineties now, and "art-rock" is seemingly dead, but in 1983 a fast-rising young band put out a debut album called Sirius For a Jester's Tour. The band called themselves Marillion (after J.R.R. Tolkien's book The Silmarillion) performing music the industry considered to be a dead form of rock.

Their first three LPs were not only concept albums in themselves, but they formed a conceptual trilogy. With a lead singer that sounded eerily like Gabriel in his early days, and even wore theatrical makeup on stage like Gabriel, Marillion surprised all the critics by becoming very popular. Then in October 1988, lead singer and lyricist Fish decided that he had enough of the band. So he packed his bags and, still following in Peter Gabriel and Roger Waters' footsteps, left for a solo career.

The latest offering from Marillion is due to be released on October 24. It features a new lead singer, Steve Hogarth, along with the rest of the band: Mark Kelly (keyboards), Pete Trevaan (bass), Steve Rothery (guitar), and Ian Mosley (drums). The new album is Seasons End.

Steve Hogarth's voice is nothing quite as harsh as Fish's. It is more melodic and Hogarth can reach the highs and lows much more comfortably than Fish ever could. Hogarth also shares the lyric-writing chores with John Helmer, something that Fish had done by himself. As a lyric writer, Fish is miles ahead of anyone else, and Hogarth tries his best. Surprisingly, he does an admirable job. His lyrical style is much more subtle than Fish's, with songs about Northern Ireland, Zauser, drug addiction, The Unwanted Guest, and ecological concerns. Seasons End.

The first track, The King of Sunset Town, is a typical Marillion suite, eight minutes in length and sounding exactly like they always have, if not better. The Space is the evocative final track, and in between are Hogarth's thoughtful musical essays as well as a few less meaningful hard rock songs, including the current single Hooks In You.

Casting a backward glance to Pink Floyd and Genesis, it is easy to see that losing primary bandmembers did not hurt them. Both bands are probably more successful today than ever before. It remains to be seen whether or not Marillion will join this group. Judging from the new Seasons End, they probably will. Rating out of 5: ★★★★★

Conservation volunteers needed

By Phyllis Benson
Happening Editor

The Nature Conservancy, an international, non-profit conservation organization, is seeking volunteers for activities that fall that will help in the restoration of several local nature areas.

People are needed to cut brush, collect seeds, monitor plants and conduct prescribed prairie burns to help rehabilitate Fern Meadows Marsh in West Chicago, Maple Grove in Downers Grove and Blackwell Kane in Warrenville. A workday for these wildlands is scheduled for Saturday, October 21 from 9 am to noon at Fern Meadows Marsh, 10 am to 4 pm at Maple Grove and 9 am to 1 pm at Blackwell Kane.

Individuals are also welcome to participate in a "pre-burn" clean-up day of the Great Western Railroad Prairie in Elmhurst on Friday and Saturday, October 27 and 28, and a seed collecting expedition at West Chicago Prairie in West Chicago on Saturday, October 28. An additional workday for Blackwell Kane is scheduled for Saturday, November 4 from 9 am to 1 pm.

"We urge people to take part in these activities," said local Conservancy volunteer Mary Ann Skvara, "because less than one-tenth of a percent of Illinois is still in its native condition. Through the work of volunteers, we can reverse the natural areas and reverse the tide of development and abuse. It's an exciting transformation to watch."

Newman plans zoo trip

By Phyllis Benson
Happening Editor

Newman Association is sponsoring a trip to Brookfield Zoo on November 10.

A carpool will meet in front of Building A at 9:30 am. If tickets are picked up in A 146, admission is free. This is the first time a social event has been planned on a holiday, said campus minister Dennis Darby, and if there is enough interest, it will become a regular program.

Anyone who would like a ticket and cannot stop in to get one should call the student activities office and leave their name. Admission would then be free.

All students interested in going to the zoo must pick up a ticket or call the SA office by October 30.

Traveling Hawks pillage Marauders

By Joe Stachler
Staff Writer

The Harper Hawks travelled to Palos Hills to defeat the Moraine Valley Marauders 43-29 on Saturday, October 14.

In beating the Marauders, Harper has further hampered Moraine Valley's prospects for this year's play-offs.

The game started with the Marauders kicking the ball off to Harper's Brian Canoy who gave it to Lorenzo Butler who ran it about 25 yards. Both Moraine Valley and Harper were given penalties early on, the Marauders for encroachment and the Hawks for illegal motion. A completion from quarterback Jerry Chaney to receiver Juan Taylor gave the Hawks a first down.

Running back James Haywood ran in after the first down for a touchdown. A successful kick by Tyler Hill gave the Hawks a 7-0 lead.

The Hawk's defense was strong, and the Marauders quarterback did not pass well. However, a few breakaway runs were threatening the Hawks until the defense forced them to punt it to Juan Taylor.

The Hawks marched down field and were in scoring position. Chaney got great support from his blockers and did a good job shaking off the few defenders who broke through the line.

It looked as though Haywood made a touchdown but it was called back for illegal blocking against Harper. Too far away for a field goal, Harper punted the ball to Moraine Valley. It was shanked and the Marauders had it on their own 20 yard line.

Again, the Marauders' offense gained where they could, with a 25 yard run. Moraine Valley's quarterback was scrambling, but ended up sacked on his 40 yard line. The Marauders still grabbed a first down, and continued their attempts to march to the end zone. Finally, the Marauders ran it in for a touchdown and the score was 7-6, Hawks.

The Hawk's defense was breaking up and not communicating efficiently.

A hobbled snap for an extra point turned into a two-point conversion for the Marauders who took the lead 8-7.

With two minutes and 45 seconds left in the quarter, the Marauders kicked the ball to Steve Rokusek. Steve Chaney almost threw an interception and another pass attempt was batted down. The Hawks had no punt it away.

Moraine Valley got a lucky break when an attempted pass was batted down by Harper, with the defensive man's hand on the intended receiver. A pass-interference penalty moved the Marauders up to about the 50 yard line. Moraine Valley moved further down the field with a series of first downs. A completed pass to Moraine Valley's Demetrius Coleman resulted in another touchdown. A good extra-point kick increased Moraine Valley's lead 15-7.

Both Harper and Moraine Valley had opportunities to move the ball but with no success. As time ran out in the half, Moraine Valley could not keep possession of the ball and turned it over on downs to Harper with 30 seconds left.

Haywood ran the ball further downfield and Chaney threw a confident pass to open Juan Taylor for a touchdown. With 10 seconds left in the half, Harper failed to tie up the score with an attempted two-point conversion. Harper kicked the ball to Moraine Valley and the half ended.

The second half started w/ Harper kicking the ball off to Moraine Valley and giving the fired up Hawk defense an opportunity to dismantle the Marauders' offense, who ended up punting a wobbly ball to the Hawk's 40 yard line. For a while the Hawk's defense was built on Haywood running up the field, so they were in a scoring position again. Another pass to Taylor pulled the Hawks ahead 19-13. Then 20-13 after a successful kick by Hill.

Moraine Valley was falling apart and their offense was having trouble pulling out successful plays, even after Harper's kicker booted the ball into the end zone. The Marauders had to give up the ball again and Haywood ran through the holes to gain yards. Haywood ran in another touchdown for the Hawks and the score was 26-15. Harper made a successful two-point conversion and the score was 28-15.

With four minutes left in the quarter, the Hawks regained possession after intercepting a Marauder pass. Through the end of the third and beginning of the fourth quarter Harper and Moraine Valley continued to take turns trying to score points. When Harper had the ball, a pass to Brad Jones resulted in the score increasing to 34-15. Harper made a two point conversion and the score was 36-15.

As the Harper bench grew more excited, it was apparent that the game had more interesting plays to offer. The Marauders twice tried on-side kicks that failed. The Hawks countered using Haywood and Butler to run the ball.

Butler scored another touchdown for the Hawks plus an extra point from Hill made the score 43-22.

Alternating scoring drives, the Marauders scored two touchdowns by completing passes to the end zone while Hawk Butler's touchdown was scored between these. The clock ran out while Harper had possession. The score was 43-29.

Next week, Harper travels to Rock Island to play Augustana at 3 pm on Monday.

Harper works toward success

Volleyball Coach Julie Ellefson-Kuehn's team has had its share of successes, showing the Lady Hawk's potential.

In the October 12 match, the Lady Hawks played Oskoin, a team they defeated easily winning the first three games of a 5 game match, but lost to Triton College.

Last Saturday, the Lady Hawks played at the Olive-Harvey Invitational. The team were first place in round robin competition with a record of 4-2.

Waubesa, Morton, Daley, and Olive-Harvey were present at the invite.

The Lady Hawks beat Waubesa for the championship, winning the first game 15-3, the second game 15-13 and the third 15-4.

During the second game, the Lady Hawks were losing 8-13 but rallied to win the game.

"The team did an outstanding job," said Ellefson-Kuehn "they showed a lot of hustle and covered each other well - it was an outstanding game."

The team has improved since the start of the season "We play together as a team and are more sure of each other, allowing us to make our play team-oriented."

said Ellefson-Kuehn.

Tuesday, the Lady Hawks played Saak Valley, a nationally rated team, in a home game. The best of 5 series was lost in three games 15-3, 15-4, and 15-11.

"We had a slow start," said Ellefson-Kuehn "but it was a contest. They didn't just walk all over us. Saak Valley had to earn their points, we played very well."

Two players, Sharon Ahrens and Sam Ghate, did well in the Saturday tournament.

"They were the stability of the team. Their enthusiasm kept us together," said Ellefson-Kuehn.

This Sunday Harper is holding a conference tournament at 10 am. "I hope we do well," said Ellefson-Kuehn "but anybody could win. The teams are close - it should be good volleyball."

The Harbinger is looking for Sports Writers, Sports Photographers, a Sports Editor, and anyone else to help us fill this page.

Pool Room 'cued' to go

Tables to be removed in favor of video games and television

By Julie Caffarelli
Staff Writer

The Harper College Pool Room is receiving a face lift. The Pool Room, on the third floor of Building A for the past 15 years, will be done away with to make room for a new lounge area.

Since 1982, the Pool Room has done poorly, ranging from a $2000 loss to a $1000 profit.

A yearly refurbishing of the tables costs of $1500 negated any profit. It has been the direct cause of vandalism in the upper portion of Building A. Students have thrown pool balls in the area, breaking four windows this year.

Those two aspects prompted reformation of the area. The lounge was conceived by Student Activities Director Jeanne Pankam, administrator, and private meetings with minority students on campus.

"This is a judgement call," said Pankam, "there is no right or wrong. In my judgement, it is time to make a change - not maintain the status quo. I think it is in the best interests of the students."

The current television room will be turned into an arcade, producing revenue the new lounge area needs to function, according to Pankam.

Kathleen Munson, Student Senate President, said, "I feel the opinions of students were not taken into consideration."

President selected

Bussey withdraws in support of Munson

By Erik Warner
News Editor

Student Senate broke the stalemate in the election for president, electing Kathleen Munson by a vote of 6-5 last Friday.

Contending for the position were Donald Bussey, Liberal Arts Senator, Kathleen Munson, Entrepreneur and Language Studies Representative, and Edward Wallace, Business and Social Science Senator.

Bussey announced he was withdrawing from the race in his presentation.

"After a long thought, to maintain the integrity of the Senate, I am withdrawing from the race for president," said Bussey. "Ed and I have made this Senate look like a charade (with the campaign)."

Munson, the new president, asked senators to look at the three A's of leadership: ability, action, and attitude.

"While my experience shows what I have done in the past, my ambition shows what I will do in the future," said Munson.

"I have time to devote to students here," she continued, "I am an example of the three A's of leadership. I am ready to be Student Senate President now."

Students use the Pool Room frequently, keeping up to five tables in use, even during "off hours." Three tables will remain after the renovation.

Many students come up here everyday to use the pool tables.

WHCM, Harper's radio station, won't be heard in the lounge to avoid interference with the television.

"Because we won't be heard in the lounge, we'll have to focus on other parts of Building A and the rest of campus," said WHCM Music Director Tony Amato. "We'll have to wait and see if it affects our listeners."

Pankam is looking for a name for the new area which will include a large screen television, a VCR and tapes, three pool tables, and an assortment of table games.

Pool tables and equipment not being used in the renovated area will be put up for bid by the school according to mandatory rules.

Students help quake victims

Student Activities is raising funds for the American Red Cross to aid California earthquake victims.

Their goal is to collect at least $800, half of which has already been accomplished.

Donations are being taken at International Week events, including The World Game and Sevens today and The World's Worst Filmfest tomorrow.

The earthquake struck with greater force than any in San Francisco since 1906, registering 6.9 on the Richter scale.

Harper assess day-care need

Operators of in-district child care centers protest 'perfect environment' in proposed facility

By Erik Warner
News Editor

President Paul Thompson voiced the need of a day-care center for the childhood professional students at Harper.

The present center, in Building J, can accommodate 250 children, with up to 40 in the facility at a time.

Children serviced are pre-school age, the center unable to take care of children of varying ages.

"We feel exposure (for students) is needed to toddlers and infants—we need to double our space," said Thompson.

Some of the day-care professionals in Palatine and surrounding communities have protested the proposed day-care center, saying they will lose business.

Ten people from seven different local child care centers came to protest the building of the center at the board meeting on September 28.

In the past, field work was done at surrounding day-care centers.

Many feel "students would learn better at a 'real day-care center,' rather than Harper's 'perfect environment'."

"We feel exposure is needed to toddlers and infants—we need to double our space."

President Thompson

"Nurses do their internships at hospitals, teachers at other schools, and journalists at newspapers," said Yvonne Crawford of Today's Child Day-Care, "why should day-care professionals be different?"

Thompson feels, "If a student doesn't know what the ideal should be, the student doesn't know what to aim for."

The proposed facility will be 25,000 square feet and have the capacity for 500 children, ranging from infants to toddlers.

It will be able to accommodate 100 children at one time.

By having a facility on campus, Harper doesn't "lose the standard (students) are performing in," said Thompson, "Instead of taking chances, we would rather set the standard."

Harper is currently seeking corporate sponsors for the center, which is expected to cost $3 million, and is not relying on tax money. No corporate sponsors have been secured yet.

"Child care services are needed to fill a void," said Thompson, "we'd like to have people in the community with these skills."

Child Development

Child care service is available for children of Harper students, faculty and staff. Children may be in the center for a maximum of five hours each day. Children who are toilet trained, ages 2 1/2 to 5 (or in kindergarten) will be accepted. The service is open from 7:15 am to 4:45 pm, Monday through Friday. Pre-registration is required as enrollment is limited. Please call the center for more information.

Thompson feels the local day-care centers wouldn't be hurt because the field is wide open.

Harper has not closed the options on this issue with private operators.

Thompson said, "There may be a compromise position worked out with day-care operators."

Financial aid face to face on "War on drugs"

(CPS). An Illinois state representative wants to give students who take drug tests better consideration in getting state college financial aid.

Under Republican Jerry Weller's plan, which he plans to introduce this spring, students who submit to a drug test and come up clean would get preference over an equally qualified applicant who refuses to take the test.

"If you have two candidates equal in every other way, the drug-free youth would be given preference," Weller said in announcing the idea in early October.

"If one is far above another (in need), the program would not deny the person assistance. We already have veteran preferences and Affirmative Action programs, so there's a precedent."

Civil libertarians blasted the idea as an invasion of privacy.

"We believe it's probably unconstitutional," said Jay Miller, executive director of the Illinois branch of the American Civil Liberties Union. "I suspect it's not going to go anywhere. You can't make benefits dependent on giving up constitutional rights."

John Henry Han, Roosevelt University's Student Senate President and a voting member of the school's board of trustees, said giving up on privacy is worth it.

"You should be willing to give up privacy if you want the benefits."

Already, students who get federal loans and grants have to sign a statement promising they don't and won't use illegal drugs. College officials, moreover, are required to have some kind of anti-drug program in place.

Talking with President Bush's "War on Drugs," William Bennett, the president's "drug czar," threatened to cut off financial aid to students in attend colleges that don't have "tough" anti-drug policies.

Trick or treat, give me something good to eat!

By Eisa Aust
Managing Editor
and Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-Chief

YEEEEEAAHHHH!!!!!! Halloween is here! Soon kids of all sizes will be out begging for food. Unfortunately, some people don't realize beggars can be choosers. To help out the uninformed, here is a list of preferred treats and yucky tricks for those little monsters.

Top ten candies for Halloween:

- 1) M&M's (because they don't melt in your hands)
- 2) Peanut Butter Cups (even though there aren't enough per package)
- 3) Kit Kat
- 4) Kisses (sucker wrapping would give them a higher rating)
- 5) Snickers (they also would be higher, but the peanuts have some nutritional value; a definite no-no for kids)
- 6) Tootsie Rolls (good, but they're hard to chew because they get stuck in your teeth)
- 7) 1 M&M's (just eat)
- 8) Sourzies (a childhood standard even if they don't have any chocolate)
- 9) Whoppers (great by the hand full, but the individual packaging hinders paying out on the run)
- 10) Butterfingers (great taste, but they get stuck in your teeth)

They're Wrong:

- A's: raisins, apples, peanuts, dried fruit snacks
B's: pennies, bad state cookies,
C's: caramel creams with white stuff, gross generic candy, peanut butter kisses (you know, the kind in black or orange wrappers), saltwater taffy, gumballs
D's: candy corn, jelly ranchers, dots, gummy things, hard cinnamon candy, rumi, mints, bit o' honey, and the worst of all: POPCORN BALLS.

SOMEONE WORTH KNOWING

When it comes to planning your future, there are lots of people you should talk to: teachers, guidance counselors, college representatives and, of course, your parents.

Why? Because they can offer you sound advice based on their collective knowledge and years of experience. They've also been where you are now—at the crossroads, faced with career decisions you've got to make on your own.

There's another community resource you should consider, though: your Army Recruiter. When it comes to Army benefits and opportunities, he knows them all. And he can advise you on which programs, skills and educational benefits apply to you.

If you're interested in earning money for college, learning a technical skill or just talking about your future, call your local Army Recruiter today. He's someone worth knowing.

How do you respond to anger?

By Alicia Cheslund
Features Editor

How do you spell anger? Whether you're purple with rage, breathing fire, red in the face, or hot under the collar, the feeling is likely to be the same.

Last week, as part of the Wellness series sponsored by the Health Service, Kathy Orms, Director of Marketing, Training and Education of the Kenneth W. Young Centers, spoke about "The Power of Anger."

The way we react to anger is based on our caveman ancestors' responses. "The signs of anger (arose) to protect the caveman," said Orms. "When the caveman came up against a perceived threat, such as the mammoth woolly, he could either fight or run like the dailights."

"For the caveman, the mammoth woolly was the perceived threat," said Orms. "Our mammoth woolly may be wearing tennis shoes, loafers or be in a different situation but the physiological response hasn't changed."

Grinding teeth, tightness in the chest, and queasiness are all part of the physiological response to anger, said Orms.

"When people are angry they try to give their anxiety away," said Orms. "But you don't have to accept it."

When you've had a hard day at work, or received a "D" on an exam, it's easy to flip into anger. However, it's a lot healthier to take a deep breath, count to ten and go

"When you're angry, breathe deeply," said Orms. "Think of a spot where you are calm and relaxed. Imagine yourself in that place. Picture the person who annoys you coming into view. Let the person fade out of your consciousness. Open your eyes."

Each of us is responsible for our own anger. We can choose whether or not to accept the anger. We can alter our reactions. Rage or patience, the choice is up to you.

Big Brothers and Sisters listen and lend a hand

By Jamie Benson
Staff Writer

The Big Brothers and Sisters, based in Elgin, is an organization where volunteers spend time every month with a child over a one year period. Currently, there are 106 brother-sister matches from the Streamwood, Hanover Park and Bartlett regions.

Many of the children, aged six to sixteen, come from single-parent families, and are from our area.

"The majority of the matches are wonderful," said Office Manager Pat Hennings. "They are so happy together."

The couples do various things from bowling to mathematics. One child was fortunate enough to see a Cubs game this season.

In addition to the one-on-one happenings, Big Brothers and Sisters has monthly happenings that involve everyone.

"The children learn things they've never known before," added Hennings.

Big brothers and sisters are preferred if they are at least 21-years old. If under 21, experience with children is favorable.

Big Brothers and Sisters hold monthly orientations here at Harper College. Students can contribute their time and experience. Call 888-3111 for more information.

Interpreter Services ignored

Dear Editor,

I am writing regarding the October 19, 1989 Harbinger article about Disabled Student Services. While DDS does provide "tutoring, information, counseling, and special equipment," I am dismayed that the article fails to mention the interpreting services provided by DDS.

Harper's twelve interpreters, together with Supervisors of Support Services Karen L. Hale, provide more than 200 hours of interpreting weekly to Harper students, employees and community members.

For classroom interpreting we must understand a wide range of course-specific concepts, from Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs to chemical formulas to engineering tolerances. We must learn the specific technical vocabulary for each academic discipline.

An interpreter's day may take her from a field trip through the mud to a meeting in the Board Room, or from a videotaped Molere face to a graphic discussion of a right triangle.

We move from one situation to the next, giving voice to the statements and emotions of other persons, suppressing ourselves.

Interpreting is a young profession, with a dearth of available formal training, particularly beyond the level of Interpreter Training Programs. Aware of this, we work hard trying to get the additional skill development we need.

In the meantime, when we experience difficulties doing our job, we sometimes face impatience, suspicion, criticism and even hostility. Yet, when an instructor criticizes an interpreter in front of thirty people, guess who is dutifully interpreting to the hearing impaired student(s) that instructor's derogatory remarks?

A number of recent incidents have assailed the morale of Harper's interpreters. How unfortunate it is that the Harbinger article entitled "DSS lends a hand" ignored the existence of those of us who so diligently work at lending our hands, our voices and most of all, our minds.

Indians abandon homeland

Dear Editor,

This letter is being written to inform all those at Harper who have been wondering where all the people from India come from and why they are here.

From 1976 through 1979 President Jimmy Carter instituted a Graduate Level College Student Program with India. In each of his four years as President, 20 thousand skilled Indian professionals came to the US to obtain an education or a skill at an American university.

These students were the cream of the crop of Indian society. They were mainly doctors, engineers, mathematicians and other professionals who came to the US to increase their knowledge with training unavailable to them in their homeland.

President Carter's purpose for the program was for these professionals to improve their skill level then return to India and benefit that impoverished nation with their newly enhanced skills. For what developing nations need most, more than military or other aid, is a large skilled middle class.

Unfortunately, these Indian professionals, once having been in the US and exposed to the big houses, the fancy cars, the stores loaded with food and goods, almost all have applied for permanent residency in the US.

Immigration laws require foreign graduate students to return to their homeland for three years before applying for US permanent residency. Not surprisingly, the big influx of Indian immigrants began during the early to mid 1980's.

So today we have a sorry situation where skilled professional people from a poor country, who's population desperately needs them, are leaving their people to live in America.

Why are they coming to America? For political freedom? No, India has been a self governing democracy since the end of WWII.

Do they come for religious freedom? No. Most Indians are Hindus (free to practice their faith in India while in America there are few Hindu temples. Did they come to America to live the life of luxury?

The answer is probably, shamefully yes.

Harbinger's movie alternatives for Halloween

By Michael Waskiewicz
Entertainment Editor

So you think you're too old to go trick or treating? You probably think you're too old to dress up too, huh? Well if you do, you'll probably be stuck home alone, with your TV set, while everyone you know is out dressing up and acting like idiots.

If you are one of those lonely, or maybe you would just like to stay home with your girlfriend or boyfriend, just make a trip to your corner video store and rent a scary movie.

You could get the old cliché movies like Halloween, Friday the 13th, Nightmare on Elm Street or any of their sequels. But why? They're all the same, just another blood and guts movie. So what you need to do is get a scary movie—a REAL scary movie. Possibly, you might consider a movie with plot.

Worry not, fellow Harpers! The Harbinger went on a search to find the scariest with some sort of half plot. We couldn't come up with just one, though, we came up with ten. So if your not planning to participate in the Halloween festivities this year, just check out one of the following Harbinger favorites (not necessarily in any order):

01 The Unholy

A priest takes over a new parish and gets haunted by the devil in the form of a beautifully tempting young woman.

09 Halloween

One of the more popular Halloween movies, Larry's brother comes back from another dimension of pain and pleasure to steal Larry's wife. Uh-oh brother, the papa monsters from the 16th dimension are on their way!

08 Serpent and the Rainbow

A biologist goes to South America to find a drug for medical purposes only, and finds out it turns people into walking zombies.

07 The Omen

The Devil is born through baby Damien. A classic that will never die (no pun intended).

06 Fright Night

Not too scary, but just right for Halloween. A teenager finds out his next door neighbor is a vampire. OOOOOO!

05 The Shining

Here's the Shining! Stephen King's classic tale of a man gone psycho. You may have seen it before, but it still scares you two and three times over.

04 Alien

For a more sci-fi Halloween, join Sigourney Weaver on the spaceship Nostromo with a bad, bad alien.

03 When a Stranger Calls

Psychic killer haunts baby-sitter by making strange phone calls to her. From where? You can find out for yourself!

02 Child's Play

One of the scariest movies to be released in years. Chucky, a little doll, becomes possessed by an evil killer and threatens the lives of many people including the child owner.

01 Big Top Pee Wee

For the humorous approach to Halloween, watch Pee Wee Herman play in his Halloween costume.

Have a great Halloween!

Areosmith PUMPin' again

By Jamie Reeson
Staff Writer

Who would think that after nineteen years, nine platinum albums, and five years of drug rehabilitation that Aerosmith would be in their heyday?

In 1980, when Joe Perry (lead guitar) left the band due to bad tempers and drug abuse, the band had all but ended. However, four years later, Steven Tyler (lead vocals) and Perry reconciled their differences and came out with Drawn With Mirrors in 1985. Aerosmith came back better and more sober than ever.

PUMP, Aerosmith's latest, is their third back-from-oblivion LP. PUMP brings back a sizzling blend of blues, banger, and heavy metal that made them "probably the most influential hard rock band of the 70's," as Rolling Stone Magazine puts it.

Young Luv, F.F.E., and My Girl are each highlighted by the anger and rampage of Perry's guitar licks and frenzied with the famous Tyler scream. These are true "class" songs.

Love in the Elevator, already an MTV favorite, is one of those irresistible top 20 hits. Apparently, the song is based on an actual experience (which we won't go into detail about) where the elevator door was opened in the main lobby for about ten seconds.

What a Taker, a romantic ballad (similar to Angel), deals with the aftermath of a broken relationship. Probably the most interesting song, though, on PUMP is an instrumental called F@cked Up, Insecure, Nervous/Emotional. This is Aerosmith at their best.

In the past, Aerosmith was being nice to people by writing songs that appeal to people. Maybe they were holding something back. Now, they are all recovering alcoholics, and they are showing their true colors. PUMP is a treat to themselves for a change. Thumbs up to Aerosmith for another winner.

"Look Who's Talking" has what it takes

By Joe Stachler
Staff Writer

The way movies seem to go these days, it is only the sure fire smashes that make it to the big screen. The idea of film making as an art is not an idea that money making film executives subscribe to; but then again, neither does the money paying public.

Director Amy Heckerling steps forth with a film which, in a non-sophisticated way, presents her movie as art by showing the audience what a fetus-turned-newborn might think about life while enduring the many aspects of nature and our culture. Look Who's Talking should be a sure fire hit.

The film starts with a young, single accountant named Mollie (played with controlled craziness by Kewie Alley) who is having an affair with a married man. After she gets pregnant with his baby, we are treated to a simulation of the biological process within her womb.

As Mollie learns that she is pregnant and she listens to the empty promises of the father, we see the child (via voice-over by Bruce Willis) develop and check itself out. Soon, the child becomes a boy (but he thinks he is just growing another arm).

In Mollie's nine month peak, she goes shopping with her friend and finds the baby's father in a dressing room with another woman. His explanation is that he is going through a selfish stage. She, of course, goes berserk and inadvertently goes into labor.

Mollie then grabs a cab to take her to the hospital. The cabdriver, James (played by John Travolta), speaks of to the hospital where he accidentally witnesses the baby's birth.

While in the maternity ward, Mollie promises to find her baby (named Mike) a good father.

At home, moon and sun go through the usual routines of feeding, changing, waking, and napping. Suddenly, James appears to change the rest of their lives.

James offers to baby-sit Mike if he can use her house as a mailing address to qualify his grandfather for nursing home care. Mollie decided that this would give her an excellent opportunity to find Mike a good father. Meanwhile, on her search, Mike and James hit it off great.

The hospital notifies Mollie that James' grandfather is having problems. Feeling sorry for James' grandfather, Mollie goes to the hospital to help him where she meets James. At this moment they discover that they are right for each other.

Copyright 1989 TriStar Pictures

Mike (Jason Schaller) applies a comforting ice pack to James' (John Travolta) head in TriStar Pictures' "Look Who's Talking."

The actors and actresses in Look Who's Talking play their parts perfectly. John Travolta plays his best role to years.

Compared with other baby movies like Three Men and a Cradle, Ghostbusters II, and Baby Boom, this one's a bit funnier for all ages.

A three and a half star job out of four. Good job. Amy Heckerling for making a movie-art film with style.

Hawks crush Rock Island

Saturday's Triton game to determine standings for regional playoffs

By Roy Douglas
Staff Writer

Can the Hawks be the best community college team of the decade? If they continue to perform like they did Monday, yes.

The Hawks took another win 20-9 against Rock Island after a close halftime score of 9-6. They now stand with a record of 6-2 for the season.

James Haywood had 156 yards rushing and broke his community college record of 17 touch downs for the season. His two touch downs Monday, one a 60 yard run, gives him 18 so far this season.

Quarterback Jerry Chaney passed 30 yards to Bradford Jones twice for two touch downs. Jones totaled 63 yards and Kicker Tyler Hill made a 47 yard field goal.

The turnovers in the first quarter almost cost them the game. However, the Hawks turned the game around in the third quarter.

"We seem to be doing a lot of that," commented Head Coach John Eliash. "We'll be down at half time, then pull out of it. The third quarter seems to be a good quarter for us."

But Eliash looks toward the regional games. "If we keep our offense going we'll do well in the playoffs," he said.

This season will be the third regional championship for Harper, if they can capture the title on November 11. The honors will qualify Harper as the best community college football team of the decade.

Eliash believes Harper's biggest asset in the playoffs will be the offense. "Our average points per game have been 30. The two games we lost we only scored seven points," Eliash explained. "We need to control the ball, keep it a long time and score."

However, Harper has suffered many injuries this season, which will be one of the Hawks' biggest weaknesses going into the playoffs.

Eliash reasons, "If we don't have injuries, we'll have a chance."

The Hawks have also given up a lot of passing yardage this season, and have a freshman quarterback.

Eliash commented, "He (Chaney) has his good days and his bad days, like any other quarterback. Fortunately, there have been more good ones than bad."

College of Dupage will be

Harper's strongest competition for the regional title. Earlier this season Harper lost to DuPage 7-14.

If both the Hawks and DuPage win this weekend's games, they will face each other again November 11. If not, the Hawks will most likely play either Joliet or Illinois Valley.

Their competitor at regional and the home field advantage will be determined by the home match on Saturday against Triton.

Eliash believes it will be a pretty competitive game. Triton is a formidable opponent."

Lady Hawks get solid win

By Erik Wurster

The Harper Volleyball Team has had both good and bad news in competition during the last week.

Last weekend Harper's Lady Hawks were defeated at the conference tournament they hosted.

Lady Hawk Vicki Bednarek patiently waits to make her move.

Coach Ellefson-Kuehn commented the teams present in the tournament were close in ability, making the tournament a contest.

In the first match, the Lady Hawks defeated Rock Valley and went on to play a match against College of DuPage, in which they were defeated.

The overall winner of the conference was Illinois Valley.

Sharon Ahern was named All-Conference Player and Karen Szuel, a freshman, was given honorable mention.

Sharon "is the key team leader," according to Ellefson-Kuehn. All-Conference players were voted upon by the coaches of the teams present at the tournament.

The game last Tuesday proved to be more fruitful for the Lady Hawks, who won both of their matches in the first two games in best out of three competition.

The Lady Hawks won the first two games against Wright Community College, then went on to face Kishwaukee.

The Lady Hawks won their first game quickly, with a score of 15-5, following with a second strong game of 15-11.

"We played as a team tonight," said Ellefson-Kuehn. "When we play as a team, the team effort pays off."

The Lady Hawks still have two games remaining in the season, one against Richard J. Daley in Chicago today, and the second against Elgin and Highland in Freeport on October 31.

Harper's fitness alternative

By Tony Wall
Staff Writer

Are you one of those people who spent hundreds of dollars on a Chicago health club membership? The faculty and administrators in Building M aren't feeling sorry for you. In fact, they'll tell you Harper offers the equivalent at a fraction of the cost.

PEI 195 is for students and community residents desiring serious physical conditioning. Best of all, it's organized outside of a structured class environment. Once you register, the course is flexible around your schedule.

The program begins with an individual Physical Fitness Assessment Test. Resting heart rate, blood pressure, body muscle/fat composition, and a stress test are included. This information is analyzed by computer to arrive at an ideal or "personalized exercise prescription."

A complete introduction to all equipment is given by a professional instructor. The fitness center uses state-of-the-art exercise equipment including Nautilus and CamStar resistance equipment and Saunamaster, Concept Rowing and Airdyne cardiovascular conditioning equipment.

During the semester, students pursue a choice of workout programs. Included are: resistance training (strength development), cardiovascular conditioning, or a combination of both.

Personalized fitness goals can be met with one of these prescription workouts.

At the conclusion of the semester, a reassessment analysis is performed to gauge cardiovascular and muscular improvements to the individuals body.

Many would say the improvement is in weight loss, not a decrease, but an increase. One semester is only $50. Considering the cost of one year, the Physical Fitness Center is an excellent value for students and community residents.

International success

By Erik Wurzer
News Editor

International Week, Harper's replacement for Fall Fest, was carried off smoothly by the Program Board beginning with the crowds at The Chinese Golden Dragon Acrobats to the educational experience of the World Game, according to Michael Neuman, Student Activities Coordinator.

"Fall Fest was like high school; it didn't have a positive effect on the community at large," said Neuman.

The concept was created by Neuman and supported by Program Board and The Round Table, a group made up of representatives from campus clubs and organizations.

The events of the week were all successful, said Neuman, "even Shantia the Storyteller. Her performance was so dynamic; all 45 people walked away satisfied."

During International Week, Program Board attempted to raise funds for earthquake victims in San Francisco.

By the end of the week, $556 was raised to be sent to the Red Cross. "I think it was a good response but I also think we forgot all the people who were devastated by the hurricane on the other coast," said Dean Morgan, President of Program Board.

Harper plans to repeat International Week next year and with even a greater success.

The Chinese Golden Dragon Acrobats kicked off International Week with their special blend of acrobatics, dance, and magic.

"We've set a really good groundwork," said Neuman. Neuman plans to expand on some of the events done this year, making International Week a bigger success next year.

16.5 million dollar contract approved Construction and expansion will begin next year

By Erik Wurzer
News Editor

Harper's Board of Trustees voted in favor of a $16.5 million construction project scheduled to begin next year.

One new building and two additions will make up the project. Included are expanded book store space, a liberal arts building and an executive conference center where the bookstore currently is.

Harper is relying on a $11 million grant from the state legislature and the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE), causing some board members to be concerned over the project's financing.

The project's low ranking on IBHE's priority list makes it unlikely to receive funding this year, according to President Paul Thompson.

Thompson believes there is a small chance of funding this year and almost positive of funding by the '90-'91 school year.

Harper can begin the project without funding, having $3 million in bonds available. The bonds come from a referendum which was passed by the community early in 1975.

The bonds were originally purchased to fund a second campus. With lower enrollment, a second campus was not needed, so the funds are to be used for expansion on Harper's grounds.

According to Chapman and Cutler, Harper's bond attorneys, they must be sold by December 31. After this date, Chapman and Cutler can not legally recommend the sale of the bonds in accordance with the referendum.

$2.5 million in funding may come from either the sale of alternate bonds or from bookstore revenue.

Increasing the space of the bookstore will allow additional products to be sold, giving greater sales and profits.

Student test scores dropping

By Erik Wurzer
News Editor

Over 40% of tested Harper students require remedial classes in English, math, or reading in their first year, according to a recent demographic profile produced by Student Development.

Many students are lacking in the basics which should have been learned in high school and are unprepared for many college courses.

Students scoring below 57.5% on the reading section of the mandatory English test are limited in their class load, so they will not overburden themselves.

The low scores on placement tests are reflected by ACT/SAT scores of Harper students. Last year the average ACT score was 16.84, compared to this year's average of 16.29. Scores have fallen nationally on both tests.

Student Development uses these facts to develop enrollment planning guidelines, including a greater number of remedial classes.

"New [full time] students cannot register for classes until they have taken the assessment tests," said Chris Staab who presided the profile.

"We try to help students before the fall semester, and not after," she continued.

Students recover after quake

Mental stress outweighs structural damage

(CPS) - Like everyone else involved in the devastating earthquake that shook the San Francisco area Oct. 17, students are trying to put their lives back together. In doing so, they're facing closed campus buildings, nights camped outside, canceled classes and even guilt feelings.

One psychologist predicts it will take a long time for college life to return to normal and that, in the trauma's wake, students' grades may suffer.

"There's a lot of uncertainty, a lot of stress, at this point," said Bill Georges, assistant housing director of Stanford University, where 304 students may be forced to move permanently.

The quake immediately displaced 420 Stanford students.

At the University of California-Santa Cruz (UCSC), just eight miles from the epicenter of the quake, some dorm residents were "till sleeping outside to rest their nerves" four days after the initial shock, reported Armin Quiring, a campus hotline volunteer at UCSC.

Most of the colleges in the area canceled classes for at least one day, and some, like Golden Gate University, San Francisco Community College, UCSC and Stanford were shut down for three days.

Some schools were relatively undamaged. At the University of California at Berkeley, for example, one student reported watched in fear as the quake threatened to burst the huge windows of the library and shower everyone inside with glass. However, the windows held, and the campus in general suffered seemingly few structural consequences.

About 200,000 students are enrolled at the 23 major two-year and four-year campuses in the area hit by the earthquake, which registered 7.1 on the Richter Scale and was felt as far as 350 miles from its place of origin.

Officials were still trying to figure out the number of dead. A week afterward, the death toll had reached 47 people, with another 160 people still missing. Almost 3,100 were treated in area hospitals for injuries. At least 6,300 people were displaced from their homes, 4,500 in Santa Cruz.

Near Santa Clara University alone, the quake caused five deaths and 900 injuries, damaging as many as 800 houses and 150 businesses. Emergency officials' first estimates were that it would take at least $200 million to put Santa Clara back together.

No fatalities have been reported at any of the college campuses in the area.

Stanford may have suffered the worst physical damage of the schools in the region. Twenty-four of its 240 major buildings have been closed "indefinitely" because of structural damage, reported spokeswoman Eileen Walsh.

Students were shuffled into temporary housing, and classes relocated to temporary building space, she added.

Even those who survived without significant damage to their residences would have stones of their own to tell.

Live from New York ! It's Saturday Night!

From the Blues Brothers to the Church Lady, SNL still leaves 'em laughing

By Joe Stachler
Staff Writer

If you were unfortunate enough to miss the fifteenth anniversary of NBC's Saturday Night Live, aired on September 24 of this year, there's not much you can do to make up for it—except make a friend who taped it.

It's hard to believe that fifteen years ago, guys like John Belushi and Dan Aykroyd were basically unheard of, and the rest of their fellow SNL cast were only at a point of writing their reputations as hilarious performers.

The show was started by a young producer named Lorne Michaels. The first episode was aired live from Rockefeller Center, in studio 5H, on October 11, 1975 for ninety minutes. The main framework of the show consisted of a guest host, a musical performer, assorted comedians, different voices even from announcer Don Pardo, and a string of comedy sketches performed by a group of talented people dubbed "The Not-Ready-for-Prime-Time Players."

The original SNL cast consisted of Dan Aykroyd, John Belushi, Chevy Chase, Jane Curtain, Garrett Morris, Laraine Newman, and Gilda Radner. All of these performers went on to success, although, some did succeed more than others.

Chevy Chase left to begin his enormous film career co-starring with Goldie Hawn in Fawlty Towers. Chase proved to be the most popular on the show when his Weekend Update and his parody of Gerald Ford impression caught on to the viewers. After he left, Bill Murray was brought in and was not readily accepted (if you can believe that).

As the show became more and more popular, the cast wanted to go on to bigger things (like the big screen). Soon, the show became more full on actors and comedians, like Don Novello as Father Guido Sarducci, Dan Aykroyd's slide brother Peter, Bill Murray's little brother Brian (already a writer), and Harry Shearer. There were also guest hosts who contributed to the show's success. Among these were Jack Henry, Elliot Gould, and Steve Martin (it might have been easy to mistake Steve Martin as a cast member, but in fact, he only appeared as a guest host).

The year 1980 brought in a new decade and a new Saturday Night Live altogether. The entire original cast left and so did producer Lorne Michaels. A young woman, Jean Doumanian, part of the back stage crew of the original show, became the new producer. NBC hired a new cast including Joe Piscopo, Gilbert Gottfried ("Oh Henry! This stuff is insane!"), Charles Rocket, and 19 year old Eddie Murphy.

Unfortunately, the show bombed and how NBC did to keep it to a miracle. The humor sank to juvenile standards that fell heavily across TV screens. Because the show was live, the embarrassingly silent crowd further conveyed the sad reality the show was in serious trouble.

"We're two wild and crazy guys!"
—Steve Martin and Dan Aykroyd

Jean Doumanian and most of the cast were let go. Only Piscopo and Murphy (who had to fight his way to the stage) were kept on. The new producer, Dick Eberhart, hired Tim Kucharik, Mary Gross, and later James Belushi. The show improved and was generally built up around Joe and Eddie, who usually did skits with each other—they had a multitude of hilarious characters.

Murphy and Piscopo decided to leave after their four year tenure on the show. They both found great success on the screen. After the rest of that cast left, Martin Short, Christopher Guest, and Billy Crystal were hired as new cast members. The show, again, became widely accepted with Crystal and Short contributing their side-splitting characters and impersonations.

After the season the entire cast and producer left the show. Lorne Michaels returned after a five year hiatus. New cast members included Nora Dunn, Jon Lovitz, Anthony Michael Hall (Geek from Sixteen Candles), Randy Quaid (brother of Dennis), and Dennis Miller. The show got off to a shaky start with few memorable characters or sketches. After a season most of the cast members left except for Lovitz, Miller, and Dunn. New performers like Dana Carvey, Jan Hooks, Phil Hartman, and Victoria Jackson came and the show improved once again leaving us with the cast we have today.

Looking back on the past fifteen years of SNL makes one think of the things that were a part of its legendary formula: the catch-phrases like "...two wild and crazy guys!", "But NOOOOOOOO!", "You know Mafeking!", "Is that special?", "...we're here to pump (clap) you up!", "Yeah, yeah THAT'S all!", we remember the great characters like the Coneheads, Fernando, Velvet Jones, the Samsons, the Norks, the Whiners, Ed Grimley, Nashon Thern, Church Lady, Rosanne Rosannadanna, Gunby, etc.; the little extras like Mr. Bill, the Muppets, and Tippi Turle; and the musical skits like the "Immediate Family" worth spending the money for Copyright 1989 Columbia Pictures Industries Inc.

Linda and Michael Spector (Glenn Close and James Woods) yearn for their own child in Columbia Pictures' "Immediate Family"

By Alisa Chisland
Features Editor

Director Jonathan Kaplan's previous films (Over the Edge, Project X, The Accused) display a rough exterior and definite social consciousness.

Like the best of Hollywood's directors, Kaplan has the ability to work in all categories of film including action, comedy, and drama. His films usually involve the audience and deliver a message.

Immediate Family is a mild melodrama compared to other Kaplan films; however, the story is nothing new. Yuppie couple Linda and Michael Spector (Glenn Close and James Woods) appear to have all financial security, successful jobs, a beautiful house, and a Volvo convertible. Yet, something is missing. Michael and Linda want a child.

Unable to conceive a child the Spector's resort to "open adoption," whereby they draw a contract with an unwed mother to bring the child home after birth.

The young mother, Lucy (Mary Stuart Masterson), realizes that she cannot emotionally or financially care for a child and does agree with the Spector's as the baby's prospective parents. Soon, a bond is formed between Lucy and the Spector's that is strengthened by the arrival of Sam (Kevin Dillon), the baby's father and father-child musician. As the film progresses, the Spector's develop a loving parent-child relationship with Sam and Lucy.

The film has a good premise, a sensitive script, fine acting, and accurate directing. All of which make Immediate Family worth spending the money to see.

Thinking Rain with Aquatic Noggin

By Lisa Aast
Managing Editor

What happens when a quasi-hard rock, kind of post punk garage band moves away from their traditional Naked Raygun roots to a slick-in-the-mud place like DeKalb? I'll give you a hint, Think Rain.

Aquatic Noggin's latest release, Think Rain, is uniquely different from all of their previous material. Gone are the whining guitar licks with overwhelming rawness. Noggin has mellowed out. The songs have taken on an almost country feel with twangy guitar and muted drums.

Aquatic Noggin has three members: Dan Chambers on guitar, Paul Finn on bass and Mike Waterman on the drums. They originally formed right here in the northwest suburbs. They've played the club scene, and after appearing in last year's Battle of the Bands here at Harper, seemed to disappear.

With the release of Think Rain, Aquatic Noggin marks a return to the music scene. Actually, they never left. They have moved away to pursue a higher education.

Noggin's trade mark has always been Dan Chambers' fired vocals coupled with Mike Waterman's power intense drumming trying to overcome that overwhelming guitar. Now the guitar has been toned down, the rest of the band has taken on a softer feel as well, almost as if they no longer know what to do.

The band now seems to be exploring musical possibilities rather than just thrashing out some deep seated emotion. They are learning control.

The first song of the album, Think Rain, is done in the classic Noggin style. Chambers' guitar as well as his characteristic hard vocals provide a predictable and likable Noggin tune. This song really shouldn't have been the lead track as it doesn't go with the songs that follow. It sets the listener up for a raucous, hard hitting tune, then delivers something much more toned down.

Paul Finn has taken over a larger percentage of the singing. His voice has matured into an almost Dylanesque quality. With Chambers and Finn switching off the singing, it gives the tape an easy rhythm.

Finn's song writing style is clearly evident in I Don't Understand. It sounds vaguely reminiscent of Cruisin' out of their 1986 release Cool Beans. It has the same kind of national awareness thing going as in previous singles.

Noggin is an excellent under ground band. This is the closest they have come to appealing to the general masses, ever. With each musical output, they show themselves to be growing and improving. This is a band to watch for. The tape is worth buying and definitely worth listening to until they perform their next gig in our area.

Computer Lab under-equipped

I am a student aide in the D111 Computer Lab and I know that we are seriously under-equipped. There are times when people are not able to use the computers at all because of the number of people in our lab.

We have six IBM PC's, the computers from the early 1980's, and one IBM PC's.

The IBM PC's are seriously out of date. We have had programs lock up on people, causing all of their information

I just don't see how we, the most open lab of them all, have the worst computers. We even have five of these Apple II's, which practically no one uses.

One student actually took the time to go to every computer lab and see what is available to the general populace of Harper students. He found that D111 is the only lab that was open to all students. The other labs are only open to certain courses and purposes.

It seems that for the volume of students here, we need more modern equipment to better handle them all

Clarifications

The sports story Hawks crush Rock Island from the October 26 issue of the Harbinger was incorrect. The Hawks, in fact, played the Augustana Junior Varsity team.

America falls backward Dominoes fall in reverse order

We'll call this "The Year of Opposites."

The communist countries are experiencing more openness and freedom. Their people are becoming more globally aware and protesting in an effort to expand their personal rights. Other countries are moving more towards democracy as well.

Unfortunately, in the United States we are experiencing more repression and an increasingly apathetic population. When President Eisenhower put forth his domino theory, he never imagined it could work in reverse. The iron curtain is lifting. Not because of anything the Western World has done, but because change has occurred from within.

When Russia admitted that communism wasn't working and announced reforms, the world stared back unbelievably. After Gorbachev showed tolerance with its own people and with Poland, the other communist countries began to push the dominoes back ward.

In just the last year, the world has seen great strides toward democracy.

*Poland now has a two party system.
*East German President Egon Krenz and the communist party have promised its people reform. They have allowed large protests to take place. East Germany was also liberal in allowing the freedom trains to continue for a while, though they no longer do.

*In Czechoslovakia the population has taken to the streets in pro-democracy demonstrations. The government has cracked down on them, but the people are persisting.

*Bulgaria is also facing unprecedented public dissent. In reaction, top officials have announced that reforms are to be implemented.

*Hungary's parliament has decided to release over 6,000 prisoners in a special amnesty program. Hungary also has been praised for participating with the freedom trains and for tearing down its own wall.

*There is a growing feeling of nationalism in certain regions of Russia. Lithuanian and Albanian protests both exemplify the growing phenomena of organization at the grass roots level to promote change.

*South Africa recently allowed the biggest demonstration in history. The African National Congress was given official permission to hold a rally, even though they have been outlawed since the 70's.

*Columbia has decided to take on the drug lords at the possible expense of its own culture.

The world is constantly undergoing change. While the rest of the world is changing for the better, the United States is regressing.

After making great strides in the past few decades, the High Court has reversed itself and taken away many rights, or has severely threatened them. The Supreme Court has taken away from minority rights in a series of rulings dealing with issues from minority hiring quotas to moving the burden of proof on the employee from the company in cases of discrimination. The Court has also attacked abortion rights. They are due to hear more controversial cases relating to abortion, and they are expected to make more restrictive rulings.

In a surprise ruling the Court did stack up for free speech with its flag-burning decision. However, Congress betrayed us. They passed an anti-flag burning law (Kudo's to Dread Scott Tyler for testing the law on the Capitol steps).

Congress has also come out against freedom of speech by threatening funding for the arts. Congress wants to play "Big Brother" and censor the people it was elected to represent.

It is a very sad disgrace to be an American these days. Our economy is slipping. Our culture is deteriorating under the weight of drugs and capitalistic immorality. We are depleting our own natural resources, and destroying nature in the meantime.

America is no longer the power it once was. We have set ourselves back years while others progress. Yes, let's play opposites. Let the second and third world countries surpass us. Forget about spending money on defense, we'll destroy ourselves first.

So I started incorporating the forgetfulness into my telling of the story to insure that the children would participate and tell the story with me."

Well, probably hundreds of students didn't go to class that day. Class cutting is

After talking with numerous chronic class cutters, I've found out why they ditch. I'm not suggesting that you cut class. If you decide to ditch, I have some wonderful ideas on how to spend your day. So here's some Another idea is to spend the day eating. Go to your favorite pancake house. Order a four-foot stack and commence to pig out. Then you can go home and sleep it off.

The worst thing you could do is waste your ditch day. At least do something constructive such as the paperwork that is about to overtake your living quarters.

I think this entire situation can best be summed up by student Joe DiIullo, "I think it's bad vibes. If I wake up and the attitude isn't there, I just won't go to class."

Human Performance Lab, making a difference

Meeting the needs of Harper College and its surrounding community

By Alisa Chisholm
Features Editor

Are you functioning up to your fullest human potential? Are you tired of watching others achieve and advance? The Human Performance Lab in M228 can help you learn to increase your overall efficiency with a holistic approach. Be all you can be in mind and body — without joining the Army!

"The Human Performance Lab was set up eight years ago to give students an opportunity to get involved in the sports medicine field," said Will Hoffman, Director of the Human Performance Lab.

"Sports medicine, the way we define it, refers to training students to work with different types of people in need of rehabilitation or who want to get more physically fit," said Hoffman. "That could include people who are overweight, have diabetes, heart or lung problems."

Students take courses in areas such as anatomy, physiology and exercise physiology.

They also take sports medicine classes where they learn how to do health assessments on a person, evaluate their physical fitness and health status, write exercise prescriptions for different types of people, and run exercise classes.

In addition, they find out about the basics of nutrition and the psychology of athletes, and sports training. "It's a very comprehensive educational program," said Hoffman.

"The culminating experience for the students is an internship at a local hospital or a corporate center such as AT&T," said Hoffman.

"The students spend over 300 hours working as a team member participating day in and day out in all the activities of that particular unit," said Hoffman.

"To enhance the training, clinical programs were started where students could participate as workers getting experience so that all of their training wouldn't simply be in the classroom," said Hoffman. "It would be in the laboratory working with physicians and nurses in a realistic setting. Also these programs would be of benefit to the community."

The first program developed was Cardiac Rehabilitation now affiliated with Northwestern Community Hospital in Arlington Heights. The program is broken up into three phases. Phase I is education at the hospital including information on heart attack, medication, nutrition, other jobs and exercise therapy.

They come to Harper College for Phase II which includes classes on nutrition, stress management, smoking cessation and physician supervised exercise therapy.

"These people are coming to us four or five weeks after having an aortic aneurysm," said Hoffman.

"We've had a couple of heart transplant patients. The patients wear heart monitors on their chest so physicians can monitor every heartbeat. There are four to five people in a class on well-controlled exercise equipment like treadmills and rowers."

After about three months, patients move on to Phase III at the fieldhouse where they participate in swimming, running, and exercise in a more realistic sports setting. They are still monitored and attend classes.

Hoffman feels this is a rewarding program where patients go from the hospital bed to heart monitors to activities like running.

"You feel that you've really helped people by giving them education relative to heart disease and management of their situation," said Hoffman. "You've helped them adjust their lives to where they can actively participate in sports and get back to their jobs."

"Many of the patients are in better shape when they finish the program than before they had the heart attack," said Hoffman. "They've dropped a lot of weight, controlled their blood pressure, and lowered their cholesterol. They make adjustments in diet, working lives. They realize their priority now has to be their health rather than their job or whatever was their #1 priority in the past."

The Human Performance Lab offers a program to police, fire fighters and employees who work in areas within our area. This is a prevention program for high risk people who are sent to the lab for evaluation, as well as exercise and nutrition programs. A complete medical assessment is taken for each participant. Individual programs are developed based on test results.

The Nutrition Resource Center is housed in the Human Performance Lab. "We offer an eight-week weight management class in conjunction with Rush Presbyterian Hospital in Chicago," said Hoffman. "It's an education-based program."

"The purpose of the class is to teach people how to eat, not to give them a diet," said Hoffman.

Sharilyn Soran, R.N., gives a Phase III participant a quick heart rhythm check.

Other services offered include individualized nutrition consultations, and classes on "eat smart" shopping and personal nutrition and exercise for pregnant mothers. A new program, in cooperation with Humana Hospital in Hoffman Estates, is diabetic rehabilitation. Free seminars are offered to "These people are coming to us four or five weeks after having a heart attack."

- Will Hoffman

anybody in the community by Humana Hospital. The program also includes exercise therapy for patients referred to the center by their physicians.

The lab offers a physical reconditioning program to anyone at the college or in the community who wants to get into shape. People are assessed and put into beneficial exercise programs such as running or walking. Participants workout three days a week.

Call the Human Performance Lab at 397-5881, extension 2386 for information on any of the programs.

Meet Mary Hook

By Phyllis Benson
Happening Editor

"I think it's important for students to be involved," said Mary Hook. "I was the first semester I was here. I wanted to see how I could handle college curriculum first. When I saw my grades were okay, then I branched out into other activities."

Hook's grades are more than okay. She maintains a 3.91 GPA while carrying 13 credit hours. She's a member of the honors fraternity, Phi Theta Kappa, the Program Board, PALS and the student senate.

PALS (Peer Advisors Listening to Students) is an important part of Hook's college activities.

"PALS is for students who want to talk about anything," she said. "It deals with student wellness. If they had a bad day or did poorly on a test, they want to talk about why."

Hook went through a one-day training session at Parkside for PALS which involved learning to deal with drug and alcohol addiction. "We're prepared to handle some of those problems," she said, "but if a student came to us and had an actual drug and alcohol problem, we would probably refer them to someone. We're not counselors, we're listeners, active listeners."

Hook's work on PALS also carries over to the student senate. She is the representative of the counseling areas of the college in the Counseling Adviser Division. "I was appointed by the faculty leaders of PALS," she said.

Hook also works at the Learning Resource Center. "I really like working at the library," she said. "It's really flexible in giving time off for activities, especially during mid-terms and finals. A lot of my friends who work outside of campus don't have that flexibility."

Mary Hook

"I think it's important for employers to understand that school comes first. It's been really beneficial to work on campus and that takes a lot of the pressure off of me."

Hook, whose major is English, a secondary education, and minor in communications, plans to transfer to NIU as a junior next fall. She plans to be a high school English teacher.

"Unlike a lot of people," she said, "I really enjoy English. I understand it, even Shakespeare. I had a teacher in high school who had a really big impact on me, who is my role model."

Hook feels the pressure of her heavy schedule, however. "I basically live at school," she said. "I've been tempted to pitch a tent outside of Building J. I go home around five and I'm dead, really dead. And then I study."

Many of Hook's friends attend Harper and she meets them here. She meets friends who attend other state schools during breaks in terms. "Then that's all I do, spend time with them," she said.

"It's kind of gratifying to be in activities," said Hook, and maintain a 3.91 GPA. "If I think about all the time I spend here, I suppose myself. I've learned to organize my time and not neglect studying time."

Playoff 'party' begins

Harper to face Triton in first regional playoff on Saturday

By Lou Nunes
Guest Writer

Let the party begin. The Region IV football playoff party, that is.

The Harper Hawks (7-2) will play host to Triton (4-5) on Saturday. Meanwhile, Illinois Valley will travel to meet College of DuPage (7-2) in Semi-Final action. Both games are scheduled for a 1 pm kick off with the winners meeting for the region crown on November 11.

This year's playoffs are especially interesting because the teams in both games will be meeting for the second consecutive Saturday.

Last weekend, Illinois Valley upset DuPage 28-24 in LaSalle, while the Hawks pounded Triton 41-7 to end regular season play.

"I don't like it," Harper said. "It gives a team like Triton a better clue of what they can or can't do."

For Eliask and the Hawks, NAC conference crown (outright) or shared with their win over the Trojans, it will be time to determine whether or not this squad can be the "team of the 80's" by picking up their third straight Region IV crown and the fourth crown in the last five years.

"That's our goal," Eliask said. "Which we'll find out real soon."

The Region IV championship will advance to the Royal Crown Cola Bowl at the UNI-Dome in Cedar Falls, Iowa on Sunday, November 18. There they will face the representative from the Iowa Community College Football Conference (ICCCF), which will be the Ellsworth Panthers (currently ranked second in the country) or Waldorf.

The ICCF representative will be determined by Ellsworth's final regular season game on Saturday against Grand Rapids Junior College. If the Panthers win, they'll play in the Mid-America Bowl in Tulsa, Oklahoma on December 2. Ellsworth would then have a shot at the national championship and Waldorf would represent the ICCF on the 18th. However, a Panther loss would send them right back to UNI-Dome for the third straight possible collision with the Hawks, which the coach isn't looking forward to.

"I hope they win," Eliask said with a degree of concern.

The Hawks were dominated by Ellsworth in each of their last two meetings (41-9 in 1987 and 29-0 last year).

The Region IV runner-up will meet the Minnesota representative, either Mesak or Normandale, in the Midwest Bowl at Triton College in River Grove on November 18.

However, this could change with a second consecutive loss by DuPage to Illinois Valley, who would take the Midwest Bowl slot. This would be a result of their number one seeding in the playoffs, and would leave the potential runner-up out of a bowl game, as Eliask points out.

He continues, "It would leave a bad taste in our mouth if we lose Saturday because they (Triton) would be going to a post-season bowl and we wouldn't."

Lou Nunes is the Sports Information Assistant for Harper's Physical Education, Athletics and Recreation Division.

Lady Hawks advance with successive wins

Ellefson, team to give their best effort at regional level

By Erik Wurzer
News Editor

Harper's Lady Hawks handed out defeats and took their lumps at the meet in Chicago last Thursday.

The Lady Hawk's first challenge was Richard J. Daley College in best of three competition.

The first game was a strong 15-5 victory followed by a close loss of 10-15.

The last game of the match was won by the Lady Hawks 15-7 giving them a solid victory.

Lake County was tougher competition for Harper, handing the Lady Hawks a defeat in two games in best of three competition.

The first game was 11-15 but in the second game the loss was more pronounced at 8-15.

On Saturday a more telling game was played against Waukegan in the first round of regionals.

In a best of five match the Lady Hawks came on strong the first two games scoring 15-7 and 15-2.

The third game broke apart with a 6-15 loss but had a sure follow-up in the fourth game scoring 15 points to Waukegan's 10.

The Lady Hawks' next game, played against Elgin, will determine if they continue into state competition.

Elgin has defeated the Lady Hawks on four occasions this season.

Before the regionals, Sharon Ahern was selected to be a member of region four's (the region Harper is in) All-Star Team.

The All-Star game will take place in Rockford at Rock Valley Community College.

Blood drive meets limited success Only 1.2% of Harper's eligible donors attempted to give

By Julie Caffarelli
Staff Writer
and Erik Wurser
News Editor

The blood drive at Harper turned out 100 students and 18 faculty members to give blood, however 17 students were unable to donate because they did not meet the requirements.

"I think Harper's blood drives are poor compared with the number of students here," said Linda Dillman, Director of Marketing for LifeSource. Over 24,000 students attend Harper and medically 40% of the population is eligible to give blood, or about 10,000 students.

A donor must be over 110 lbs., free of colds, chronic allergies or diseases, and not have donated for eight weeks. "People got here and found out their blood pressure was too high or they were too light," said Becky Samier, College Nurse, "some try to keep their sweaters on to reach the minimum weight requirement."

The amount of blood donated this year was 101 pints compared to last year's 113 pints.

The donated blood is taken and processed by LifeSource, a combination of Red Cross and The Blood Center of Northern Illinois.

First it is tested for diseases and after it is determined "safe," the blood type is assessed.

The blood is then separated into its components: plasma, which can help burn victims; platelets used by leukemia victims; and cryoprecipitate, given to hemophiliacs.

One-third of the blood used in the Chicago metropolitan area comes from other parts of the country. "We should be self-sufficient," said Dillman. The Chicago area has one of the lowest rates for blood donors. The blood is distributed to 60 area hospitals by LifeSource.

The drive was staffed by Student Ambassadors and members of WHM.

The next drive is on Valentine's Day. "Everyone who couldn't donate this time can donate next time!" said Samier.

Harper Student Matt Wilson gave blood last Wednesday. Wilson was one of the 100 students who attended the blood drive.

Senate begins business Board appointment, smoke-free campus discussed

By Erik Wurser
News Editor

Work toward a smoke-free campus and the appointment of a student representative to the Publications Board highlighted Friday's Student Senate meeting.

The Environmental Preservation Committee surveyed faculty and students concerning the smoking policy, said Student Senator Karen Weisbach.

The survey showed Harper's population is in favor of a smoke-free environment.

The committee's job is to make a recommendation, either for or against a smoke-free campus, to President Thompson. Thompson will take the recommendation to the Board of Trustees. Several faculty members attended to present, according to the survey of being based.

Weisbach is optimistic about the committee's work stating "I think within the next year we will have a smoke-free campus."

We have to ask ourselves if we want to be the trend-setters, continued Weisbach, "other [local] schools don't have smoke-free campuses."

Currently, Building M is the only smoke-free building on campus.

Another piece of Senate business was the appointment of a student representative to the Publications Board.

Eric Bingham was appointed by a vote of eight to none, with one Senator, Lou Nutter, abstaining from the vote for "personal reasons."

Prior to the vote, Senator Westrich asked Bingham why he wished to have to position.

"I've worked in other aspects of the newspaper business," said Bingham, "and I feel it would give me a chance to broaden my horizons and knowledge of the newspaper business."

Bingham meets the requirements for the position which state he can not work for the Harbinger, Point of View, or be a member of Student Senate.

The committee is responsible for policy for Point of View, Harper's Literary Magazine, and choosing the Editor-in-Chief for the Harbinger next year.

At the next Senate meeting on November 17 the Senate will hear more about the smoking policy in the committee reports.

Additionally, a constitutional amendment which was tabled two weeks ago regarding the number of credit-hours for Senate Officers will be discussed and voted on.

Assault occurs in Harper lot

By Marc Balke
Staff Writer

An assault and robbery occurred on Harper's campus last Sunday night.

Public Safety called Palatine Police last Sunday night when a man was assaulted and robbed of $207.

The alleged robbery took place at 1 am in one of the dark parking lots surrounding the campus.

Parking lot lights are usually not on during the weekend, and are turned off at midnight during weekdays.

The victim was walking to his car when he was approached by four men. They threatened to harm him if he didn't give them all his money.

He refused and was beaten.

The assailants struck him with 4 miniature baseball bats. He sustained only minor injuries.

Public Safety refused to comment on the incident.

The House of Representatives voted to boost the minimum wage to $4.25 with a $0.50 increase by 1991. Advocates of the increase feel $0.50 is not substantial enough.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce still opposes the bill, stating the plan to lift the minimum wage 27% by April 1991 "will be impossible for many employers to accommodate." Elimination of jobs for American workers and higher prices for consumers may result.

The Los Angeles Herald-Examiner published its final issue November 2. The Examiner reached a circulation of 238,000 and was once the nation's largest afternoon newspaper. The Los Angeles Times dominated over the region the Herald once captivated. Attempts to sell the Herald were fruitless, so steps were taken to shut down the operations after financial losses.

Liquor ads banned

By Erik Warner
News Editor
and College Press Service

College newspapers around the country will be barred from running alcohol-related ads in their pages if a new bill introduced in Congress becomes law.

The bill, cosponsored by senators Jesse Bingaman (R-NM) and Herbert Kohl (D-WI), cuts off all federal funding, including student aid, to colleges that fail to restrict alcohol promotions on their campuses.

Separately, outgoing U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop in September sent a letter to all college presidents urging them to distance their schools from liquor-related promotions, warning he'd recommend "economic and legal sanctions" against schools that ignored him.

The sanctions, however, seem to fall most heavily on student ventures like sports and newspapers, many on which depend on revenues from local bars and national brewers to survive.

Student papers "are right to be concerned," said Kernen Peck, and aide to Kohl. "The penalties are so severe, universities are likely to err on the side of overcaution."

A variety of schools already have started to crack down. The University of North Dakota, for example, in September prohibited students from displaying posters from beer companies in their dorm room windows.

Under the measure now in Congress, virtually all American college newspapers would face similar budgetary blows.

"An anti-alcohol ad law would hurt us pretty badly," said Chris Roth, advertising manager of The Chink at Casper College in Wyoming.

Local bars and liquor stores buy about $5,000 worth of ads a year in the Chink, representing a third of the paper's $15,000 in annual ad revenues. The rest of the paper's expenses are met by a $10,000 appropriation from the college.

Local liquor ads accounted for $7,000, or 14% of the ad revenues earned by the Kansas State University Collegian in September, faculty adviser Gloria Fredlund reported.

The big national brewing companies like Anheuser-Busch and Miller place ads worth approximately $1 million in college papers nationwide during any one school year, estimated Mark Rose of CASS Communication, a student newspaper ad broker based in Evanston, Ill.

Elgin Community College's Observer accepts alcohol-related ads, but Editor-in-Chief Scott Humbarth feels the law would not hurt them noticeably. The Observer makes less than 5% of its revenue from alcohol-related ads.

The Harbinger doesn't accept ads relating to either alcohol or tobacco products. This policy is decided upon by the news paper.

"It presents a better image," said Business Manager Marc Balke, "we make up the revenue from other advertisers."

Even if the law doesn't pass, local campus bans promise to hurt some papers. At California State, worries that the Ocean would suffer (anecdotally, some Wilson's September altitudes have led to a compromise, Quinn said. Wilson agreed to let the paper carry ads that mention beer, while the paper agreed to ban tavern ads that promote low-price drink specials.

"It cuts the 'let's get drunk' attitude," Quinn said.

'Shocker' same horror we've seen

By Joe Stachler
Staff Writer

We have seen this film before, many times, actually. Wes Craven recreates one of his own films with Universal's Shocker.

A middle-aged town is victimized by a ruthless and sadistic killer named Horace Pinker. He enjoys murdering unsuspecting families with his Rambo-fashioned hunting knife. As he kills, a college football player dreams of Pinker killing his own family. With the aid of his policeman father, he captures Pinker and secures his fate by death of electrocution. However, Pinker prepares himself by an act of voodoo to survive the electrocution. Horace is really mad now!

Although the film seems directly inspired by A Nightmare on Elm Street and The Hidden, it is not usually predictable. True, it seems that Horace and Freddie Krueger could be great pals and go out taking turns twisting knives and exchanging one-liners for thrills, but it is not too easy for the victims of the movie to deal with Horace.

Wherever the film tries to deliver sentimental feelings between the college friends battling Horace, it becomes laughable enough for us to root for the villain.

There are also lapses of common sense that benefit the aims of both the town and Horace, and hinder the aim of Wes Craven to deliver a respectable horror film.

Mich Peleggi as Horace Pinker is effective as one of the meanest and most mindless no-nonsense killer to hit the screen. A bald head with burn marks and a dragging left leg help Horace to stay mad and slash his prey to such heavy metal groups as Megadeth, Alice Cooper, and The Dudes of Wrath.

Hopefully, this will not be the start of another string of horror sequels. Sequels are never as good as the originals, so if a sequel to a worthless film is made, what would be left? Another worthless film.

'Sensual World' dissappointing

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

Kate Bush's sixth album, The Sensual World, manages to reaffirm her superiority over most female artists in the music world.

It's a disappointment after the brilliant 1985 LP, Hounds of Love, but is probably good enough to make some top ten lists of some music critics at the end of the year.

Bush is one of the most accomplished musicians around today. She is a perfectionist when it comes to her music: vocals, instrumentation, production, and lyrical content. Unfortunately, if her latest offering is any indication, her powers seem to be waning slightly.

Bush enticed the talents of the Trio Bulgarka, a Bulgarian vocal group, to sing on the album, as well as her usual complement of studio musicians: Del Palmer, Stuart, and even Dave Gilmour (Pink Floyd).

The side track is somewhat reminiscent of As of Love from the Hounds of Love LP with its bouzouki, fiddle, and Uilleann pipes.

The disappointment of Sensual World lies in the fact that there are few "standout" tracks on the album, unlike her other releases. There are just too many songs that blend into one another without really establishing a strong personality of their own, which is unusual for Kate Bush. There aren't any tracks that jump out and grab the listener.

It all adds up to a good, but disappointing release from Kate Bush, following a few other 1989 disappointments. Bush is still on EMI in the UK, but the switch from EMI to Columbia in this country caused her to leave behind a label that was a little better suited to her style. She needs to go back, in more ways than one.

50 years ago the Nazis marched into Poland. This marks the timely entrance to the Harper stage of Cabaret, a play set in that era.

"It's good to do a play that remembers this, that captures the feelings and actions of those people," says Mary Jo Willis, director of Cabaret.

"We've worked long and hard and I think the show is going to be successful."

Auditions for Cabaret began in September, after which a cast of 13 was quickly selected. Since then the cast has been working diligently to get the production ready.

"We feel that we're ready. We've worked long and hard and I think the show is going to be real successful," said Sean McClanahan, who portrays Max and the Customs officials officer.

"It's just as important backstage as it is in front. As much work goes on back there, especially with the amount of room we have to work with."

-Amber Kindberg

"Because we're not in a real theater, things that would seem normally routine are a thousand times harder," says Willis. The Harper stage was originally built as a lecture hall and not a theater stage. This makes the job of the backstage crew considerably harder. Everything made had to be condensed and easily accessible on a small stage such as Harper's. The stage is so small in fact, that the actors who have to change backstage have to do it in about three feet of open space.

The stage area for Cabaret has been built by Mike Brown and his crew of independent study Stagecraft students and volunteers. For the stage crew a lot of hard work was involved. Everything was built from scratch,

"Even the fruit," says independent Stagecraft student, Amber Kindberg. "It's just as important backstage as it is in front. As much work goes on back there, especially with the amount of room we have to work with."

Cabaret opens this weekend on the 10, 11, 12 and continues the following weekend on the 17, 18, 19. On Friday and Saturday the show starts at 8 pm and on Sunday it starts at 2:30 pm. Tickets will be available at the Harper box office.

The cast of Cabaret seems confident, the backstage crew seems confident, the director even seems confident. Cabaret will be sure to delight all crowds that show up. Fine acting coupled with perfectly timed singing will ensure a good time. Harper welcomes Cabaret!

Letters to the editor

Computer problem is distribution

I support Rich Maltre's "D131 lab aide, who believes that D131 is under-equipped for the volume of students they serve."

D131 is the only computer lab open to all students at Harper. Other labs on campus are restricted to certain types of students, such as business students, office re-entry program students, etc.

Being under-equipped is not the main problem. The main problem is the distribution of the equipment.

Harper has up-to-date equipment in some labs, but it is not available to everyone.

I believe that Harper does not need to purchase more equipment. However, they need to re-distribute the equipment so more students have access to it. This may mean moving newer computers from less populated labs, in order to replace old computers in densely populated labs, or allowing all students access to all labs.

All immigrants here for better life

The real reasons for which the letter titled "Indians abandon homeland" was written are not known.

If it is, as stated, only to "inform all those at Harper who have been wondering where all the people from India come from and why they are here," as a sort of a news item, it is good. Or, if its implied motive is to make the "cream of the crop of the Indian Society" who are here feel guilty, conspicuous and therefore leave this country to go back home and work for their homeland, it is a laudable one.

But what is so special or peculiar in the Indian immigration?

In the bygone days, the Spaniards and others came here for gold.

The propensity of the people who lived here attracted more people from less prosperous countries.

Barring a few, such as the during people on the Mayflower, or this century's "lost people" who risked their lives to reach this country for reasons well known to all, or people from Africa who were forced to come here as slaves, almost all the other ethnic immigrants came and stayed here for better living and better opportunity.

There may be a microscopic minority, if any at all, who thought of giving something to America rather than taking anything from this land.

So my point is, the majority of the immigrants are here for better accommodations, good automobiles, safe assets and a better standard of living in comparison to that of their homeland. It will not, therefore, be correct to view Indian immigrants to be an exception to the general norm.

Ill spent money

The student recreation room is dying a slow, painful death. It is soon to be replaced by a big-screen television with a seating capacity for 40 people. Surely, the money allocated for the new television could be put to some better use.

Harper currently has a television room. Unfortunately, after screening it for about two weeks, I've never seen more than three students at a time there. (This figure does not include the janitors hanging out there.) It is ridiculous to make a larger television area when nobody uses the one we have.

On the other hand, anyone walking through the pool room on any afternoon will see the pool tables in use. Harper claims costs for the pool room are too high. However, this problem is certainly not due to lack of use. Raising prices slightly to cover costs is a better solution than completely doing away with the pool area.

Harper is supposedly an institution of higher education. Why is it the best thing we find to do with our free time is watch television? Why must Harper bend to a society which revolves around the television set? Why is Harper making an effort to encourage us in this mindless activity? Perhaps a major part of the "guilty problem" in the American public's reluctance to do anything besides sit and watch a screen.

Also, the addition of the television room would severely restrict WHCM's audience. The student radio station is already hampered by a sadly small playing area, and the new renovations would shrink it even more. Instead of playing throughout Building A, WHCM would in effect be heard only in the cafeteria. That is, it will be heard in the cafeteria only when the cafeteria is quiet enough to hear it. (See next week's editorial for more on WHCM.)

I'm not saying that the area could not use renovation. The lounge now is very dull-looking and needs to be lived up. However, replacing it with a television is ludicrous. The money for renovation could be better spent making the Building A environment look more like a lounge, rather than a prison room. Maybe, just maybe, a coat of paint would do more good than high-tech equipment and afternoons filled with All My Children.

Holiday leftovers: forgotten but not gone

By Jamie Reeson
Staff Writer

Holidays come and go, and so do holiday leftovers you don't know what to do with. It happens every year, be it Halloween pumpkins, Thanksgiving turkeys, Fourth of July fireworks or the Christmas gift from hell you can't return or exchange.

After brainstorming and talking with some of the most demented people I know, I've come up with some wonderful ideas of what to do with those darn holiday leftovers. So here's some bad advice, or bad news, from your truly.

Halloween pumpkins are the worst to get rid of. Oh sure, it would be simple to let the local vandals smash them to bits. I say go on the roof and toss them yourself.

If a law enforcement officer approaches you just say, "I always thought pumpkins could fly. I was only setting them free."

Have you ever been faced with nine pounds of leftover turkey? You've eaten turkey sandwiches for breakfast and lunch for two weeks. If you were to succeed, a piece of dark meat may fly out.

It would be too simple to hand out turkey to all your neighbors, so why not be resourceful. Send turkey in the mail to all the folks who couldn't be with you for dinner.

What about the Christmas gift from hell, you know, the one you can't return or exchange? Usually, it is a shirt that is so ugly you can't make it look good even in a ugly night's pair of pants.

Instead of hanging it in your closet for an eternity, wrap it up and save it for next year. Give it to someone you normally wouldn't buy a present for. They'll be so shocked you bought them something, and are likely to wear it with pride.

For those who purchase multiple bricks

"I always thought pumpkins could fly. I was only setting them free."

of freetrackers on the Fourth of July, I have a cure for that dilemma. Don't save them for next year because the wick tends to burn rather quickly. Just look at my Dun Hammock-like fingers.

Be resourceful. Show contempt. Take all the textbooks you couldn't sell back, and have a book exploding party. You can use half a brick on some of the larger books.

I hope I have solved some problems you may have experienced. I'm not saying good and do what I suggest. Just be creative, and getting rid of leftover holiday paraphernalia should be no problem.

Health Corner

Are you hooked on nicotine?

Smokers can exchange their cigarettes for balloons and lapel buttons on November 15 and 16. It's a fun way to stop smoking. The Great Exchange is part of the Great American Smokeout sponsored by the Health Service and the American Cancer Society.

Non-smokers can adopt smokers for the day on November 16. Studies have shown that smokers who stop smoking for the day are often successful when they decide to quit.

A table will be set up on both days with information on smoking cessation, adoption papers, games, and quizzes from 11:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. near A242.

Nicotine dependence is a physical need or craving for the nicotine you get from smoking. Nicotine affects your heart rate, blood pressure and brain waves. It can restrict your circulation, lower your skin temperature, and alter other important body functions.

Answer the following questions to determine your nicotine dependency:

- How many after you wake up do you smoke your first cigarette?
A. After 30 minutes
B. Within 30 minutes
- Do you find it difficult to refrain from smoking when it is forbidden such as the library, theater and classroom?
A. No
B. Yes
- Which of the cigarettes you smoke in a day is the most satisfying?
A. Any other than the first one in the morning
B. The first one in the morning
- How many cigarettes do you smoke a day?
A. 1-15
B. 16-25
C. More than 26
- Do you smoke more in the morning than during the rest of the day?

- No
- Yes
- Do you smoke when you are ill and sometimes most of the day?
A. Yes
B. No
- The nicotine content of the brand you smoke is
A. Low
B. Medium
C. High
- How often do you inhale the smoke from your cigarettes?
A. Never
B. Sometimes
C. Always

Score one point for each B, and two points for each C.

Score of seven or higher indicates that you are highly dependent on nicotine, whereas scores of six or less indicate a low to moderate nicotine dependency.

Now, let's check out how much you smoke.

1. When you wake up your mind is on smoking, do you follow through on it?
A. Most of the time
B. Some of the time
C. Usually not

2. Some getting satisfaction from family, friends or professionals help you achieve your desired point?
A. Yes
B. No

If you answered A or B to question #1 and A to question #2, you have the determination and drive to successfully quit smoking. Contact Health Services, A242, ext. 2365.

Hunger walk provides food and education

BASIC and the Newman Association are sponsoring a Hunger Walk during Hunger Awareness Week, November 13-16.

The walk will take place on Wednesday, November 15 at noon. Money raised from the walk will go toward hunger relief. All proceeds go to the Illinois BSU/BASIC Hunger Projects and to Oxfam.

Last year, money raised helped twelve families of patients at Cook County Hospital to receive food vouchers. Proceeds also helped forty students in the Philippines receive training materials and tools for a year's education in farming techniques.

The walk will begin at noon in the lobby of Building A and proceed around Perimeter Road. Each participant can walk between one and two laps, one lap being two miles. The walk will last approximately one hour and immediately after hot cocoa will be served in the lobby of Building A.

Money is due November 22 in the Student Activities Office in A135b.

For more information, call Paula Taber or Dennis Darby at extension 2242 or 2081.

Hawks are going bowling

RC Cola Bowl or Midwest Bowl: it rides on Saturday's game

By Lou Nunes
Guest Writer

"A bowling we will go, a bowling we will go! Hi-Ho-A-Merry-Go, a bowling we will go!"

That's one song the Harper Hawks are definitely singing. But they would like to add one more tune to their repertoire: We are the Champions.

The Region IV champions, that is.

With a win at College of DuPage on Saturday, kick off at 1 pm, the Hawks can capture their third straight Region IV title. This would be their fourth in the last five years. More importantly, the Hawks will have won more championships (four) than any other team in this decade, becoming the "Team of the 80's."

As an added perk, Harper will return to the Royal Crown Cola Bowl at the University of Northern Iowa UNI-Dome in Cedar Falls, for the third consecutive year where they will face Waldorf College on Sunday, November 19.

"We can beat DuPage," said Full Back/Defensive Lineman Steve Rokusek. "It's just a matter of getting the job done."

If their 34-2 win over Triton in last Saturday's Region IV playoff Semifinal game was any indication, look out Chippawala.

QB Jerry Chaney led the Hawks (8-2) by completing 11 of 10 passes for 128 yards and four touchdowns as Harper skated off to a 27-0 lead before the Trojans (4-6) returned a blocked extra-point attempt for their only points in the contest late in the first half.

In the meantime, the Hawk defense, led by Tom Fuhler, Joe Belcher, Tony Sutton, Brent Harbold, Lamont Calhoun and Steve Rokusek, held the Trojans to only 26 yards of total offense in the first half, 78 for the entire game. They earned their eighth consecutive Region IV game berth.

The win also guaranteed them a spot in their fifth consecutive bowl game, their sixth in the past seven years.

A Midwest Bowl berth would await the Hawks should they fall on Saturday. There they would face the Minnesota State Champion (either Normandale or Fergus Falls) on Saturday, November 18 at Truett College in River Grove.

Head Coach John Eliask points out that the next two weeks will be very hectic. "On top of getting ready for DuPage, we don't know anything about Waldorf, so we're also looking for anything about Waldorf that we can find," he explains.

It was also very hectic because the N4C Region IV selection meeting was held Monday at DuPage.

Eliask gave the selections "mixed reviews." A 17 Hawks garnered All-N4C and All-Region IV honors (either First Team, Second Team, or Honorable Mention) including nine first-teamers edging out DuPage's nine overall and six First Team selections.

In addition, Harper First Team Selections: Belcher, (OL-DL), Lorenzo Butler (RB), James

Left End Brian Caney lands off an attack in a 14 yard pass play. Caney was named to the Region IV First Team.

Haywood (RB), Tyler Hill (K), Bob Redel (OL) and Juan Taylor (WR) were nominated for All-America consideration.

Two major controversies took place when Chaney and Fuhler (DL) were snubbed and had to settle for second team.

They were both screwed, Eliask said bluntly. "Chaney missed out by one vote and the other coaches in the league don't like Fuhler. This should give them plenty of incentive for Saturday."

The entire list of Harper All-Region IV and All-N4C First Team selections are as follows:

Belcher, Butler, Calhoun (DB), Brian Caney (TE), Haywood, Hill, Redel, Sutton (LB), and Taylor.

Harper's Second Teamers are Chaney, Vito Canquelpin (OL), Fuhler, Bradford Jones (WR), and John Renshaw (LB).

Brent Harbold (LB), Pete Milazzo (DB) and Steve Rokusek (DL) all received Honorable Mention honors.

Quarterback Jerry Chaney had his own personal record of four touch-down passes in the first half. Chaney made Region IV Second Team, missing First Team by one vote.

The opposition knows Lorenzo Butler (left) and James Haywood (right) as "Twin Death." Both made Region IV First Team and are accepted as the best Running Backs in the state. Haywood currently leads the Harper team with 171 attempted carries and 999 yards in season rushing. Butler has 144 attempts with 986 yards rushing.

Trustees elected

By Erik Wurrier
News Editor

The Harper College Board of Trustees confirmed the re-election of members Molly Norwood and John Coste at the November 13 meeting. After the confirmation the Board took care of unfinished business.

The official election results were: Norwood, 18,181; Coste, 16,288; Keith Sodaro, 11,744. Norwood and Coste were elected for two-year terms.

In the officer elections the board re-elected Barbara Barton as chairman; Mike Miller was elected Vice chair and Susan Orzack secretary. Officers held their positions for one year.

In its other major action, the board voted 5-1 to hire a financial adviser to help with financing campus expansion. The lone negative vote came from Coste who said there was no funding plan for the $16 million expansion program.

Current plans call for the state to provide $11.3 million, but this amount is not guaranteed. The remainder of the funds will come from bonds.

There is no contingency if the state does not provide funding.

Coste said, "We are funding this project incrementally... where does it stop?"

Chair Barton suggested the board work on a plan to build as funding becomes available.

Hunger awareness

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-Chief

Three thousand people die of hunger and malnutrition every day. Only 15 to 20 percent of the world's population receive adequate food and water for basic human survival.

A Hunger Banquet was held on Tuesday as one of the events for this week's Hunger Week. The banquet was sponsored by BASIS and the Newman Association.

The event was held to promote awareness of the world's poorer countries and the shortage of food in those nations. Participants of the event got the opportunity to experience first-hand what poverty feels like. Experiencing hunger for one day was bad, but most students will never know what it's like to be hungry and undernourished for days, years, or a lifetime.

As the guests arrived, each was assigned to a seat at the table. After a short introductory speech, the meals were served randomly to people from each group.

The first group (roughly 15 percent of the participants) received a complete meal with salad, bread, a main course, and dessert. This group represented the high-income countries, such as Sweden, England, Japan, and the United States. Most people in these countries have an adequate supply of food. In these countries, some leading causes of death, such as heart disease and diabetes, are related to the over-consumption of food.

Argentina, Korea, Spain and Poland are countries that belong to the second group. Thirty percent of the guests represented these middle-income countries. These

Assault charge not bonafide: police

By Marc Balke
Staff Writer

A falsified report of assault and battery was given to Palatine Police Sunday, November 5, according to Public Safety.

The man reported walking to his car across a Harper parking lot when he was approached and beaten by four men.

He reported a theft of $207. The actual incident was only a beating, not an assault and robbery, which occurred in Hoffman Estates, not Palatine, said

Palatine Police.

The man's injuries may have caused him to be confused, leading him to believe he was at Harper when the incident happened. He was treated for cuts and bruises near his eyes by Rolling Meadows Paramedics. Later that morning he was admitted to Northwestern Community Hospital for head injuries.

The alleged victim may face jail time and/or a fine for filing a false police report, said Palatine Police.

The Harbinger reported the robbery and assault in last Thursday's edition.

"We thought the information that we had at the time was accurate. It was only after the paper had gone to the press that we discovered the story was incorrect. The sources we contacted on Tuesday were reliable and we had no reason to suspect any misinformation," said Tari Vaughn, Editor-in-Chief of the Harbinger.

Public Safety was contacted last Tuesday night but was unable to release any information without Chief Kevin King's approval.

Female student "violated" in Library

By Marc Balke
Staff Writer

A female student reported a white male subject touched her breast with his hand in Harper's library last Wednesday afternoon.

She was sitting in a study carrel when the alleged suspect reached around and grabbed her.

The offender, a Harper student, was apprehended by two Public Safety officers at 1:33 pm.

A similar occurrence was reported to Public Safety last March, where a male student was playing "Loose" with female students from connected study carrels. The two incidents have no relation, said Public Safety, but are under investigation.

The Library is aware of the problem, and precautionary measures are being taken to ensure the safety of the students.

"I would never think something like this could occur here. It scares me to think what can happen to a female student going out to her car in the evening," stated a concerned student.

"After an investigation and evaluation of the incident, it was determined disciplinary action would take place in accordance with Student Conduct Procedures," said Public Safety Chief Kevin King.

The offender may face expulsion from the college, its programs and activities on a permanent basis. These charges would be added to any state penalties.

Harper considers sexual harassment an unwelcome sexual advance or request for favors, and/or any verbal or physical contact.

If a student believes he/she was "violated," the student should report the alleged act to Vice President of Student Affairs, Bonnie Henry.

Computer Art

By Erik Wurser
News Editor

Marlene Hunt-Brach is giving a one-woman art show on the third floor of Building C this month.

The show consists of pieces Hunt-Brach has done in the last few years.

The artwork is mixed media, consisting mostly of computer graphics, threads, and wood chips.

Hunt-Brach, who works in Harper's graphics department, did the work on an Amiga computer.

Her "high-tech" computer artwork has been displayed every year. This is Hunt-Brach's first one-woman show at Harper.

Although the pieces are for sale, Hunt-Brach "didn't do [the] work to sell," she said.

In the past, she has sold some of her pieces. One of her works was bought by Harper and hangs in the Education Foundation office.

Hunt-Brach doesn't try to explain her unusual work setting. "I think artwork should speak for itself. Everyone interprets things differently."

The show was arranged by the art department, which approached Hunt-Brach with the idea.

Students protest racism in college papers

Editors accused of prejudice toward minority and female students

(CPS) - Minority and feminist students at several different campuses protested their school papers' portrayal as insensitive or racist in early November, in some cases calling for student editors to resign.

In separate incidents, students called for "better coverage" from the campus papers at the universities of Houston and Illinois, and at Colorado State University.

For different reasons, a disgruntled student leader tried to recall the student editor at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill's paper.

Several hundred students gathered at the University of Houston's University Center to charge that the Daily Cougar, the student paper, failed to cover the coronation of the school's homecoming king and queen, alleging it was because this year's queen is black.

Black Student Union President Joel Richards said the homecoming incident reflected broader racial bias in the Cougar's coverage.

Editor-in-Chief Georgeanna Shepard defended her decision, saying "more people didn't care than cared" about homecoming. Last year's editors, she added, also ignored the event.

At Colorado State University, 300 protesters gathered November 3 to blast the Rocky Mountain Collegian, the student paper, for running a letter they called racist.

If someone calls me a racist, that's an unfounded accusation

- Scott Periman

The November 2 letter called for a "race of thoroughbreds" and supported abortion to eliminate "children born to welfare mothers."

On the same day the Collegian published the offending letter, about 30 men and women gathered in front of the offices of the Daily Illini at the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign to protest a "sexist" comic strip that had appeared in the paper the previous week.

Editors subsequently pulled the strip.

Other recent protests of campus paper coverage have been less civil. In September, University of Massachusetts-Amherst protesters burst through the back door of the offices of the Collegian to stage a brief sit-in protest of Editor David Mark's editorial calling United Nations observers on the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River "acknowledging pro-Palestinian."

The incidents called for Mark's resignation Mark refused.

Though no editors actually have been driven from their jobs by the demonstrations, yet, they readily concede the charges hurt.

"It really upset me to be perceived that way," Shepard said, "but I'm not going to go out and seek minority issues just because of this."

Rocky mountain Collegian Editor Scott Periman agreed: "no one likes criticism, but it's unlikely we'll do anything differently."

Camp past efforts to include guest columns from campus minorities and his own editorials criticizing racist incidents, Periman said. "If someone calls me a racist, that's an unfounded accusation."

Nevertheless, such accusations "hurt the credibility of the paper in the short run," said Tom Rolnick, head of the Minneapolis-based Associated Collegiate Press, a trade association of campus newspapers.

Other papers have faced criticism for different reasons.

At the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill, Sharon Kobischall, Editor-in-Chief of the Daily Tar Heel, weathered a petition drive to hold a recall election in September.

Student government member Jeffrey Beall, who started the petition drive, accused the paper of refusing to print letters to the editor that express opinions contrary to the paper's editorial stance, forbidding reporters to interview certain students and having a lack of "competent management."

Beall failed to get the necessary 3,500 signatures needed to hold a recall election, and the movement has since stalled.

Hunger Week

participants received a modest, but adequate meal. However, in most of these countries, about ten percent of the population controls 50 percent of the wealth. This leaves many of citizens below the poverty line.

The final 55 percent of the group represented the low income countries such as Ethiopia, India, Vietnam and El Salvador. The people in this group received a small bowl of rice. The citizens in the countries they represent often don't get even that much. The per capita income for these countries is between $60 and $440 a year. In many cases, the nation's debt per capita is greater than income.

Lady pilot; the sky's the ultimate limit

By Alicia Chinlund
Features Editor

Part-time Art student Gail Baldwin derives pleasure from molding clay into graceful pitchers, mugs and colanders at Harper College's Ceramic Studio. When she's not throwing pottery, Baldwin dons another hat as an American Airlines pilot (first officer).

The airline currently employs approximately 8000 pilots. She is one of only 120 female pilots.

For the past four years, Baldwin's American Airlines flights have taken her away from home for twelve to fifteen days out of every month.

Baldwin's interest in flying was sparked as a young child. She admired her father, a 747 captain for the Flying Tigers, the world's largest freight carrier.

One day, she hoped to learn how to fly. Her father felt "flying was no job for a woman." So Baldwin decided to pursue a real estate career in Lake Tahoe, Nevada.

At the age of twenty-five, Baldwin, with her father's financial assistance, enrolled in the University of North Dakota to study Aviation and Geography.

Baldwin's coursework took her from the ground to the skies. Each aviator had to be proficient in land and air maneuvers before passing the classes.

After completing her training, Baldwin received a private license, an instrument rating, and a commercial license. With licenses in hand, she was now equipped to maneuver single or multi-engine planes through the clouds for pay, or pleasure.

During the next few years, Baldwin taught flight instruction at the University of North Dakota, and then corporate jets at a local airport in Los Angeles, California.

She was hired by American Airlines six years after taking her first flying lesson. Initially pilots were trained as flight engineers to regulate the heating, cooling, electrical, pressure and fuel systems.

An opening arose and Baldwin moved into her current position as first officer. She works also as the captain, as part of a two-man crew. Each of them flies a leg (take-off to landing) of the journey. They share duties such as serving as flight engineer and communicating with the ground crew.

Baldwin receives up-to-date training every year on what to do if an emergency occurs such as the loss of an engine, a fire, or electrical problems.

"We are very safety conscious," said Baldwin. "We walk around the airplane and check for broken lines, bird strikes and other problems before we leave the ground. Our planes are very safe."

Baldwin enjoys the lifestyle that flying gives her. "I enjoy working on an irregular schedule. I usually fly for two to three days at a stretch. I manage the complex situation of flying by mentally thinking ahead, and planning my hand-eye coordination as I make my next move."

"When I fly I'm happy," said Baldwin. "I am fortunate enough to see a vista of the moon, stars, sunsets and countryside, most people can't see."

"I believe being a pilot is a great opportunity for people who like going to different places, meeting new people, and are not bothered by an irregular schedule," said Baldwin.

Smoke-free folly

I have just read the article concerning the planned smoke-free environment. I would like to express my opinion concerning a couple of news listed.

I will take note of the words "trend setter." What and who's trends are we trying to set? Who or what are we trying to impress? Are we really foolish and egotistical enough to believe because Harper does something other schools will automatically fall into line? Personally, I don't care what policies Truist or Roosevelt or Northwestern take on this issue. I don't attend them, and have no intention of attending in the near future. And since their students don't attend here, I fail to see where the trend comes in.

For right now, this is an autonomous issue and it should remain such.

Even if we do keep it an autonomous issue, it seems that those who would choose a smoke-free campus have an all powerful, God-fearing, communist-hating survey on their side. Amen brothers and sisters!

The only questions I have are: Who was surveyed? I understand Harper has about 25,000 students. What percentage participated? 100%? 15%? 200%? Where was the survey taken? In a smoking or non-smoking environment? Was the survey phrased, "How much time do you spend in the lounges of Harper?" or "Are you a smoker or not?" Were the students given a choice of, "I don't have an opinion?" (An appropriate question considering the editorialist's articles written each year on agony?)? When was the survey taken? Was school in session? I never heard about it and I spend around 15 hours a week here. Which goes back to where it was taken.

Did night students even have the opportunity for comment on this issue? According to the article, "Harper's population is in favor of a smoke-free environment." I believe the only thing the real majority of Harper's population agrees on is partying Friday and Saturday nights.

The only thing this survey proves to me is that a minority of students are choosing to rescind the privileges of another minority of students. (I should say at this point that I do not include faculty members in this argument since it is addressed to the Student Senate.) Which students are really the minority on this issue? I have my opinions, especially if the survey were to be given to night students, or even if there wasn't such a secrecy involved with it. I've seen classified documents that were not as well protected as this survey was.

I believe smoking is a privilege. A privilege once given, at least in a democracy, should not be taken away unless good cause is shown. From what I have heard, the issue that should be of foremost importance in this controversy is not even considered. Have smokers violated the privilege enough for it to be revoked? Again, from my experience, the answer to that would be no.

WHCM extinction

The station needs a transmitter

Did you know Harper has a radio station?

Most people don't.

Few people outside of Student Activities know anything about WHCM. It is a small "radio station" broadcasting throughout all of lovely Building A.

If you know about the station, do you care? Why should you? Time and time again, I've heard you say, "They never play what I want to hear. The DJs talk too much. There are too many public service announcements. You can't even hear the music, it's drowned out by talking during the day, and besides the speakers are distorted."

This radio station isn't really a radio station at all. WHCM needs the ability to broadcast outside of Building A. It has to mean something. It stands for nothing; it doesn't provide service to anyone except the internal staff. Perhaps that is the reason it exists, but it would be nice if it fulfilled some other purpose, you know, like a real station.

WHCM needs a transmitter, or it will face extinction. The station is facing a barrage of attacks from several sides.

The game room renovation calls for elimination of the WHCM broadcast in the game room area. It is feared the noise will be a distraction. However, music will still be allowed in the lounge and the cafeteria. The new room will be open, as it is now, so the music from the lounge will naturally drift upwards. To prevent distraction, the volume obviously must be turned down lower than it already is in the lounge.

This leaves only the cafeteria to experience the listening pleasure of WHCM. Unless the cafeteria is empty, or only partially full, the music must compete with the volume of college students imparting meaningful information.

So, by remodeling the game room, we are eliminating WHCM.

In years past, we were promised that WHCM would be broadcast throughout the rest of the campus via the Target Vision monitors. This has not happened.

Also, there was once a time when I could turn on my cable tv to listen to WHCM. That channel now carries a "real" radio station.

It seems that WHCM is being eradicated. There have even been rumors that because of recent complaints the administration would like to just get rid of the station.

Is this so bad? Is this their own fault?

Recently there have been many complaints concerning the volume of the music, which is odd, as the music is softer than last year. Each year records are kept and this year the volume has been down about 20% from last year. Perhaps the real reason the music seems loud is because we can't hear it. The speakers are distorted. A concerto would sound more obnoxious than thrash/punk if the speaker is bad enough.

There have also been complaints about the limited choice of music played. The DJs feel restricted by the harsh programming. Maurice Stone, the Programming Director at WHCM explains that because of the diverse nature of the student body, the music selection is kept under control. This makes sense as the median age of Harper students is around 30. The station used to allow the DJs to bring in albums, but found the individual tastes to be extreme. Unfortunately, this inhibits the station from playing a true representation of college music.

A transmitter would solve problems. The staff will continue to receive a hands on education. Complaints would be eliminated. The programming would be more liberal. The station would be providing a true medium for school identity.

Cabaret takes Harper Stage

By Tari Vangha
Editor-in-Chief

"Here, life is beautiful, the girls are beautiful, even the orchestra is beautiful," huses the German Master of Ceremonies in a heavy German nightclub in pre-World War II Germany.

Young girls prance on stage in skimpy outfits, while outside the country is quickly being taken over by the prejudice and evil of Adolph Hitler and the Nazi party.

Last weekend, the Building J Theatre was taken over for a few hours by German nightclub singers, Jews and Nazis, during Harper College's production of Cabaret.

The musical centers around the lives of an American writer and a British singer who fall in love in 1929, before the start of the Third Reich. Clifford Bradshaw (Robert Verbecker) is a second-rate novelist who leaves the United States in search of an inspiration. After stumbling throughout Europe, he decides to travel to Berlin.

As he arrives in Berlin, he meets Ernst Ludwig (Harold LeBoyer), a German citizen who drafts Bradshaw's help in smuggling goods across the border. Ludwig describes the contents of his case as mylons and other products that were limited during that era.

As a reward for his help, Ludwig offers Bradshaw an evening at the "Kit Kat Club," the hottest nightclub in Berlin, and recommends him to the boarding house of Fraulen Schneider.

After meeting Schneider (Barbara Zweifel), a charming elderly woman, and her boyfriend, Herr Schultz (Ed Heller), Bradshaw sets out for his first glimpse of the Kit Kat Club.

There he meets Sally Bowles (Deborah Anne Royals), a charming nightclub singer from England. Sporting green fingernails, Bowles is impulsive, mysterious and utterly irresistible. Bradshaw is charmed with her.

When Bowles arrives at his room requesting to move in, Bradshaw is shocked. However, after a little coaxing and several promises to be as quiet as a mouse while he is working, Bradshaw agrees.

Bradshaw is even more shocked and reluctant when Bowles later tells him she is pregnant.

As the musical continues, we see the perfect romances he torn apart due to the escalating Nazism in Germany.

Barber J. Zweifel and Edd Heller sing "I Couldn't Please Me More."

The Master of Ceremonies (Rob Williams) moves the show along with musical numbers that portray the gradual takeover of the Nazi party.

Williams is an almost terrifying representation of the cruelty and evil of Hitler and the Nazis. His voice and facial expressions (even through the stark white face makeup) are used very effectively in getting the message across.

Verbecker and Royals are excellent in their roles. They made a wonderful, loving, believable couple and played well off of each other.

I was especially impressed by Royals' performance. She radiated with the energy and enthusiasm that is absolutely necessary for the role of Sally Bowles. Royals also brought her own touch to the character, without trying to copy the performance of Liza Minnelli, who made the role famous.

However, the two actors that "stole the show" were definitely Zweifel and Heller. The pair was incredibly charming and certainly won the hearts of the audience. They make you leave wishing that Schneider and Schultz were your grandparents.

LeBoyer and Julie Moncek (as Fraulen Kott) also did an excellent job in their roles as the show's "bad guys."

The performances of the leads were backed up by the talents of Michael Desens, Paul Dombrowski, Kerry Glomski, Judy Ruzewich Klingner, Sean McClanahan, Jennifer Denise Peters, Dwight Powell, Lisa Razzano, Salvatore Rodriguez and Elaine Wasm.

The cast as a whole did an excellent job in maintaining the necessary accents consistently. This is a difficult task for even a professional theatre company.

Cabaret still has three more shows. You can catch it this weekend on Friday and Saturday at 8 pm, and on Sunday at 2:30 pm. For tickets or more information, contact the Harper Box Office at 397-3000, extension 2547.

Jesus and Mary Chain automatically brilliant

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

Jim and William Reid of The Jesus and Mary Chain have been calling themselves brilliant for quite a while now, and they are actually starting to live up to the claim.

Automatic, by The Jesus and Mary Chain, is one of the musical highlights of 1989, more eager to be called a classic than either of the previous JAMC albums.

Marking the middle ground between the screeching feedback of their debut album Psychocandy, and the surprising calm of 1987's Darklands, Automatic features just the right amount of ramping guitars and smooth sneering vocals. The ten tracks (12 on the cassette and CD) are bristled with pop hooks, marvelously jangled chord changes, and other things that make a great and memorable record.

One of the trademarks of a Jesus and Mary Chain song is the absence of a chorus until the very end of the song, instead of alternating choruses with verses, as most songs do. This is quite a unique way of song-writing that was used to its best effect on their 1987 single, Happys When It Rains. It is evident on the current single, Blues From a Gun, as well as other cuts from the new album such as Coast to Coast and Her Way of Praying.

The album leads off with the song Here Comes Alice, a title reminiscent of previous JAMC songs. The lyrics of this and other tracks on Automatic are strangely disjointed and ambiguous, somehow, more akin to Wire or Skinny Puppy than older Jesus and Mary Chain songs. The advantage of confusing lyrics is that instead of describing something with literals, they force the listener to create their own imagery...to fill in the blanks, so to speak. The songs speak freely and angrily about drugs, religion, sex, and anything else that people might find offensive.

Jim and William Reid have an excellent reputation for music that is getting better all the time. Their personal reputations for boozing and occasionally violent behavior need not detract from appreciation of their musical talent. They know when to be sure of themselves and when not to be sure, so sure. Their confidence in this album inhabits the music like a living thing, and that's just one more ingredient that makes Automatic and excellent feast for the ears.

PEANUTS celebrate 40th anniversary

By Dan Piasczek
Guest Writer

On October 2, 1950, Charles M. Schulz cartoon strip, PEANUTS, debuted in seven newspapers. PEANUTS comic strip is now the most widely syndicated comic strip reaching over 250 million readers a day in 68 countries.

In Denmark, he's known as Søren Bunt. In Mexico City, they call him Carlitos. In Latin, his name is Carlos Nizer, but millions of us know him as good old wily wacky Charlie Brown.

It is from PEANUTS that the world has adopted such phrases as "Good grief!" and "You block head!" into their everyday language. For 40 years we've followed Charlie Brown's battle with the kite-eating tree, Lucy's psychiatric advice for a nickel, Schroeder's fascination with Beethoven, Peppermint Patty's struggle through elementary school, Sally's obsession with Linus, and Linus' obsession with his security blanket. Snoopy always helped to define fantasy as he slipped into one of his many personas, including the WWI flying ace, Joe Cool, Beagle Scout Leader, and author of "It Was a Dark and Stormy Night." In 1960 Charlie Brown and the gang made their television debut winning their first of six Emmy Awards for animated specials. Since 1965, over 40 animated PEANUTS specials have aired on prime time on CBS, many becoming classics in their own right. After all, what would Halloween be without the Great Pumpkin, Easter without Easter Beagle, Thanksgiving without a dinner of popcorn, ice cream, peanuts, and jelly beans, or Valentine's Day without Charlie Brown running after the little red-haired girl?

In 1990, to highlight the anniversary year of PEANUTS, a specially created "40 Years of Happiness" theme and anniversary logo will be utilized on product packaging, hang tags, and P.O.P. displays throughout 1990. You can even watch out for Charlie Brown and the PEANUTS gang make an appearance at the next Super Bowl. Lots all with PEANUTS a Happy 40th Anniversary!

Hawks fall to Chapparals

By Lou Nanes
Guest Writer

What was considered to be the Harper Hawks' major weakness turned out to be its worst nightmare.

During the third quarter, with Harper ahead 14-10, College of DuPage quarterback Curt Miller missed the Harper secondary as he passed for 143 of his game total 323 yards.

That, along with a 26 yard interception return for a touchdown by COD linebacker Dave Patterson, delivered the crushing blow to the Hawks' hopes of repeating as Region IV Champions.

With the 20 point surge, the Chapparals took the lead for good, eventually winning last Saturday's title contest 37-20 on the Glen Ellyn campus to capture their first Region IV crown since 1986.

The win sends DuPage (9-2) to the Royal Crown Cola Bowl on Sunday. There they will face Iowa Representative Wadsworth (5-4) at the University of Northern Iowa UNI-Dome in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

Harper (8-3) will face Region XIII (13) Champion Normandale Community College of Bloomington, Minnesota (9-1) in the Midwest Bowl at Trilon College in River Grove with a 1 p.m. kickoff Saturday afternoon.

The fact that the Hawks outgained COD in total yards, (170 to 336) yards rushing, (179 to 13) and first downs (22 to 14) made this day frustrating. What made it even more frustrating was the fact that there were seven Harper turnovers highlighted by four interceptions from Chaney (14 of 34, 191 yards) and Miller's aerial success.

"That hurts because if you take away the mistakes that we had and the big plays that they had, we could have won the game," Head Coach John Eliasak said.

Another key element that hurt the Hawks offensively was the absence of All-Region receiver Juan Taylor, who was benched by Eliasak for disciplinary reasons.

"I think it hurt Jerry most because it forced him to throw to wide receiver Jones a lot more, but I thought that Scheubee (Clint Scheubert, Taylor's replacement) did a great job," said Tight End Brian Canoy.

The Hawks opened up the scoring when Chaney stuck over from the 1 with 3:07 left in the opening period. This culminated a 67 yard drive that was set up by linebacker Brent Harbold. Harbold intercepted a Miller pass at the Harper 39 yard line, then returned it nine yards to the 44, only to have it sent back 15 yards on a late hit call.

They could have easily added to it when cornerback Chris Steadman picked Miller off a second time at the Chapparral 26, returning it 15 yards to the 11. But the Hawks would advance it no further than the 3 when, on a 4th and 2 situation, a five-yard delay of game penalty forced Harper into attempting a 25 yard field goal.

On the ensuing attempt by Tyler Hill, Darril Brown was in uncontested and muffed it out. Tom Deegan then raced in, scooped it up and raced 58 yards to the Hawk 36.

seven apiece. DuPage went on to score on the final play of the half when Aaron Simmons hit an 18 yard field goal to put them on top at 10-7.

The Hawks saw the lead for the final time when All-American

James Haywood scored his 22nd touchdown of the year by leaping over from the one with 11:44 remaining in the third set up by an earlier completion to Haywood from Chaney (12 yards) and a 39 yard Chaney bomb to Jones.

Tax hike approved

By Erik Wurzer
News Editor

Five citizens protested the proposed raise in property taxes at the Board of Trustees meeting on November 21, claiming Harper College imposed the sharpest percent increase in taxes during recent years.

The board voted 7-2 in favor of a 7.18% tax increase, which did not require voter approval.

The increase includes a 6.06% for educational funds and a 1.32% bond and interest levy.

The board has the authority to levy 17 1/2% for educational funding and 7 1/2% for operation and maintenance, for a total of a 24% increase.

Operation and maintenance funds are used to pay custodial salaries, repairs of roads and grounds, and utility bills for Harper.

Other taxes levied include Life Safety, funds used to repair roofing, heating, and ventilation. Audit Funds also raised, are used to pay for the annual audit of the college's finances - bringing the tax total to 30.96%.

Property tax is charged for every $1000 in value of property owned.

Protester Ken Caciolan, said, "Harper is the second largest increase in my property taxes, second only to Palatine township... a inflation increase is reasonable, a 129% increase (since 1982) is not."

Board member Miller, one of the members who voted against the increase, said, "I just do not agree, or justify, this tax increase."

Harper did not levy property taxes in its first 20 years, making the recent increases necessary.

Change was first made in 1985 when Harper received a voter referendum to raise the tax from 15¢ per $1000 of property to 25¢ per $1000 of property.

Since then, levies have been less extreme and have not needed a voter referendum.

Officer requirements changed

By Erik Wurzer
News Editor

Student Senate passed a constitutional amendment lowering the credit hour requirement for officers by a 6-0 vote at the November 17 meeting.

Business Senator Ed Wallace proposed the amendment as a "peace making move" toward Don Bussey, who made a presidential bid with seven and one-half credit-hours. Bussey was allowed to run because exceptions were allowed by the old amendment.

The new requirement, six hours, was approved at after debate about the proposed amendment, which suggested a change to three hours.

Student Trustee Darlene Iverson supported the change in six hours. "Less is better, but three credit-hours? An officer should have to take at least two classes," said Iverson.

The new amendment allows for no exceptions in number of credit hours required for officers.

The senate was in favor of the "no exceptions" rule, making the amendment clearer than the original.

"We have to pick something and be ready to stand by it," said Physical Education Science Lisa Nunez.

American inequality

The one square mile called Alexandria is home to over 150,000 black South Africans. Alexandria has no running water, electricity or paved roads. Most South Africans are slum-dwellers about 15 by 15 feet. Few residents have a house, they sleep on mattresses on the floor. Ten Mark Mathabane rose from these conditions to become a best-selling author in America.

Mathabane, author of books Kaffir Boy and Kaffir Boy in America spoke Tuesday as part of a lecture series at Harper.

Most of the lecture focused on the conditions of racial inequality in America. However, <See Inequality page 2

Students want grades without the work

(CPS): Students today are more interested in getting better grades than their predecessors, but are more willing to cheat to get them, the nation's professors said in a recent poll.

Students' study habits generally aren't very good, the professors added in the survey, conducted by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

"Today's faculty present a discouraging portrait of students," said Carnegie President Ernest Boyer in the foreword to "The Condition of the Professions: Attitudes and Trends, 1989," which was released Nov. 5.

Of the 5,450 professors polled, 70 percent said students have become more grade-conscious over the past five years, but 43 percent said students are more likely to cheat and 55 percent said students do only enough to get by.

"About two-thirds of the faculty say too many students are ill-prepared for academic life, and they conclude their institution spends too much time and money teaching students what they should have learned in high school," Boyer wrote.

The study, conducted every five years to measure faculty members' feelings about their lives, concludes "Public education, despite six years of reform, is still producing inadequately prepared students."

The professors also thought their schools should emphasize giving students a broad liberal education instead of a narrower, specialized training.

In October, the National Endowment for the Humanities separately issued a call to alter all students' graduation requirements to include 50 hours of liberal arts classes.

The professors in the Carnegie poll felt better about their campuses than they did about their students.

Forty-nine percent of the professors called their schools "very good" places to work, up from 41 percent in the 1984 survey.

In addition, 75 percent of the full-time professors surveyed thought their institutions were providing undergraduates with an "excellent" or "better than adequate" general education.

Inequality

Mathabane did teach on the conditions he was raised in under Apartheid in South Africa.

"My father made ten dollars a week. Out of that, five dollars went for rent, three for survival, and two had to be kept on hand to bribe police during midnight raids," Mathabane explained.

His parents didn't have a marriage license, and were often arrested and brought to prison. Mathabane and his siblings were left alone, not knowing whether their parents were dead or alive.

He remembers writing through garbage to find bits of food. When they couldn't find anything, they would wait in line at a slaughterhouse for kettles of cattle blood, which was boiled as soup.

However, through it all, Mathabane never became hardened against whites. His mother was his biggest inspiration, reminding him, "There are good white people and bad white people, just as there are good and bad black people."

When he was given a tennis scholarship to Lamesa College, he expected America to be different. In a New York Times interview, Mathabane explained, "The town had two sections, one white, the other black. That sort of shocked me. That was exactly the case under Apartheid at home."

Mathabane feels that Americans has the same attitudes about segregation as South Africans. The difference is America has civil rights legislation, and blacks can transcend the segregation to become famous. He feels until communication between blacks and whites opens up, racism in America will continue.

Mathabane feels strongly that the conservatism on today's college campuses is strongly weakening America's victory. Believing that social activism is at an all-time low and it has affected "racism, sexism and homophobia" to corrode the moral fabric of this nation," in his New York Times interview he commented, "The spirit of conservatism that has gripped students is really sickening when you come to think of it because it has enabled so many young people to forget that you must, during those years, be idealistic. You must have a cause... Don't be ashamed when people call you radical or liberal because you believe in something. Your willingness to stand alone, to speak out, is the key to our salvation."

Elaine Stoermer

Director of College Relations

What brought you to Harper? After teaching speech in Texas, working as a public relations person for the American Red Cross in Virginia, and serving as a writer and later Promotion/Marketing Director for a Chicago publishing company, I heard the Harper College had an opening in the college relations area. The position was the best of all worlds — an opportunity to use public relations and writing skills in an academic environment. I was hired in 1975 and have been at Harper since that time.

What do you enjoy most about your job? I like the variety of the job and the enjoyment of working in an academic setting with the media, colleagues, and students of all ages. Also, I appreciate working with a Board of Trustees and administration which supports my being entirely honest and open with the media.

Greatest accomplishment: As a single parent, I am grateful for having reared two children who have survived the usual bumps and bruises of growing up to become happy and responsible (most of the time) adults.

Advice for students: Make the most of every opportunity to learn. Keep a sense of humor, take responsibility for your own actions and set your course to be successful, compassionate, loyal, honest, and happy.

In my spare time, I enjoy: raising, traveling, collecting unique items and, most of all, seeing my children work toward the goals they have set for themselves.

Hobbies: I would like to say I jog 20 miles every morning before breakfast, but anyone who knows me would challenge that claim immediately. I do enjoy walking and talking train trips on railroad railways.

Costa Rica internships offer educational experiences Harper students gain cultural knowledge on one-to-one basis

By Jeffrey Willson
Staff Writer

In Costa Rica today the temperature is in the eighties. Tropical birds fill through the mountain forests while vacationers sample the beaches of the Caribbean and Pacific coasts. Sound like a nice place for a three-month accredited internship? If so, you may want to look into a program being through Northwestern Illinois University.

In today's global economy an understanding of the culture and business procedures of other countries is a necessity. An intensive business or research internship is a real asset to one's education, why not serve it in a really pleasant country?

If you have at least two years of Spanish experience, this program may be for you.

Costa Rica has enjoyed a century of democracy and maintains close ties to the U.S. The country is considered one of the best educated, most literate and most egalitarian in the hemisphere, so with a notable lack of internal and foreign strife, it rarely makes the news here. (A recent exception was when the country's president won the Nobel Peace Prize.) One former student from the U.S. says, "You feel safer in the capital, San Jose, than in Chicago."

The economy is largely agricultural, producing crops like pineapples, bananas, and premium-grade coffee, and industry is based largely on the processing of such products.

To minimize the time interns spend getting socially acclimated, they first complete a four-week intensive Spanish course (emphasizing business usage) coupled with courses in political and cultural issues.

On arriving in Costa Rica (San Jose is closer to Miami than Chicago) interns are placed with local host families on a one-to-one basis, facilitating language progress.

Host companies are matched to the interns' interests. In the past, students have worked in such fields as plastics manufacture, oil distribution, textiles, opinion polling and inspection. Others have studied geology and tropical botany. Interns study various aspects of the business sequentially, receiving an overview of the company's procedures.

Fridays are reserved for seminars with the local Internship Council, to review the week's experiences. At the end of three months the intern completes a final paper on some aspect of the stay.

Any level of expense in Spanish can be accommodated — the program emphasizes language and cultural rather than business experi-

Spain for two to four weeks to explore corners of local history (like La Mesquita, originally a mosque built by the Moors during their occupation, now a cathedral) and culture (like the Flamenco.)

Harper students who want more information on any of these programs can contact Dr. Edgardo Panigoso at (708) 794-2680.

The cost of the program is $4,500, which includes round trip airfare, tuition, and room and board. The program earns a total of sixteen credit-hours in Spanish, contemporary development issues, and business, and satisfies the recent State of Illinois requirement for study of third world history.

For those short on time, money, or Spanish, two and four-week accredited programs are also available.

And if Costa Rica doesn't sound like your top of (premium-grade) coffee, a third program takes students to Cordoba,

WE NEED YOU FOR SPORTS EDITOR!

the Harbinger X-260

By Alma Chintund
Features Editor

Do you remember reading stories with your teachers and family as a young child? The stories were rich in knowledge, but the books were small. Now, in the age of the big books:

Jane Thomas, associate professor for the child development program and coordinator of the child learning center, writes big books, small books, audio tapes and teacher's guides for Nystrom Books.

"My big books are very popular with teachers and students. Children can see (the progression of the story) as the teacher reads," said Thomas.

In the past year, Thomas created five curriculum-based book sets for kindergarten children. All the stories have something children can learn such as to be considerate, respect other people, or to feel okay about their family. Each book comes with a study guide which contains activities in the areas of math, social studies, language arts and social sciences.

"The children are given activities they can do at home such as finding things people might use (in a job situation) like a flashlight," said Thomas.

Each story takes its share of time and money. Her five stories have respectively taught children about Native Americans, freedom and equality, problem solving, families, and time at night.

Thomas bases her stories on research as well as personal experience. For her story about Native Americans, Thomas got background information on areas such as living conditions, agriculture and rituals.

Nancy's Night Adventure focuses on a young girl's visit to the ribbon factory where her grandfather works as a night watchman. It is loosely based on Thomas's memories of his own husband's job as a night watchman.

Thomas hopes children will learn about different people, jobs, cultures, and life experiences as they hear her stories. Her books are currently used in kindergartens in our school district. Thomas hopes to utilize her books in the child learning center at Harpeth College in the future.

What you eat can help you think

According to pioneering research at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, some foods appear to increase production of stimulating chemicals while others apparently increase production of calming chemicals.

If your body sometimes feels like a dead battery, proteins might give you the jump-start you need. Proteins are the energizers. To get the most out of proteins, choose foods that have little fat and/or carbohydrates, especially when you want to be in the mental fast lane: Low-fat cottage cheese, skinless chicken, fish, shellfish, veal, very lean beef, dried peas, beans, skin or low-fat milk, and soybean based foods can help increase alertness and energize your mind. Protein contains an amino acid known as tyrosine, which is the main ingredient in the "activating" neurotransmitter dopamine.

and norepinephrine. Eating a high protein breakfast on the day of a big meet or exam (or whenever you need to be "up") can help you think more clearly.

you think more clearly.

Leave the Flakes or doughnuts for a quiet time when you want to study. Sugary foods lead to production of the neurotransmitter serotonin which decreases reaction time but increases concentration. Scientists believe carbohydrates can do a lot for us. They calm us, help us sleep, and keep us mentally focused. Sugar, honey, or corn sweeteners are simple carbohydrates which contain glucose—the best carbohydrate for getting your brain to make serotonin. Starches such as bread, rolls, bagels, muffins, crackers, pasta, corn, rice, barley, potatoes and cereals are complex carbohydrates and will help you to achieve a calm mood and a focused mind.

Computer Lab Usage

To Rick Mahner and all Harper students:

The Writing Center, F303, invites all students (as well as faculty and staff) to use its IBM pc's during open lab hours. While students preparing writing assignments would be given priority, it is not our policy to turn away any student wishing to use a computer. There are 21 pc's in the lab and very few times when all are in use. Of course, the writing teachers who staff the open lab might not be able to effectively assist those preparing programs or using new lab software, but such students are still welcome.

Rick, I appreciate your concern for students, and I hope the above helps. Pat Weinhold
Writing Center Assistant

WHCM response

This letter is concerning last week's editorial titled "WHCM Exclusion". Thanks for the article. The thought was there, but the way you worded it wasn't. I would like to straighten up a few things about WHCM.

First, yes, it would be very beneficial for WHCM to have a transmitter. WHCM is an in-house station. There aren't very many of us around anymore. In fact, at the Loyola Radio Conference two weeks ago someone asked, "How many of you have an in-house station?"

Out of hundreds of radio stations, only one other person responded. One benefit WHCM has over other in-house stations is that we broadcast on cable. The editorial last week mentioned we didn't. Well, we do! Last year we had a problem with Harper faculty forgetting to get us on cable.

If you haven't noticed, sometimes we have problems with the faculty. WHCM broadcasts throughout Building A. Building A is the only building that is dedicated to the students a place where they can get away from their studies and relax.

Why, then, are we getting so many complaints from the faculty? They are in the student center. The students should be able to do what they want in their building.

I would like to quote my advisor on something he mentioned about the faculty complaints, "If you're going to set up a lemonade stand on the esplanade, you're gonna expect to smell some exhaust fumes."

If WHCM got a transmitter, we wouldn't have to broadcast in the school anymore.

WHCM is good enough to broadcast over the airwaves. We have excellent DJ's, outstanding facilities (for a college station), and a good spirit.

Harper College is a community college. Think about how well we'd be able to serve the community with a real radio station: Harper news, community news, live Harper sports, etc. The list is endless.

Harper College is well known for many things. Why not be well known for an excellent radio station. We do have the potential.

For now, though, we are here to serve the students. We have an extremely large variety of music more than you'll hear at another radio station. We try to compromise with everyone and their complaints. I think you should complain when you have a reason to, but not when you just don't like the type of music that's being played.

I hope everyone will work with us and get WHCM some kind of transmitter. We can't let us go to waste. Editor: last week's article is a little premature.

Dianna Dickson
WHCM Station Manager

Smokers' rights

Historically, it appears that many peoples of diverse beliefs, backgrounds and practices have had to face their status as scapegoats of society to pacify the zeal of a fanatical minority of reformers. Whether it be the Crusades, the Pograms, the Salem Witch Trials, the Inquisition, Prohibition or the Holocaust, myriads of people have suffered persecutions to satisfy the parrot mentality. And now it is the turn of the smoker.

As the throngs of Eastern Europe break the bonds of stifling personal restriction to worship, to work, to vote, to travel, to speak, indeed, to live, we witness in our country an attempt to abrogate, even criminalize, rights and privileges that have obtained for centuries.

Such is the effort for a total prohibition of all smoking anywhere within the walls of Harper College. This effort goes forward despite the strenuous protest of all smokers and many fair-minded non-smokers; it goes forward on the basis of hidden agenda, unfair surveys, one-sided research and the personal commitment of a small minority of power seeking anti-smokers. Make no mistake about that: the power to persecute smokers is one of the roots of such oppressive measures, imagine the feeling of power a smoker persecutor will feel when "catching" an offender, who will then be commanded to stop or to face fines, expulsion, imprisonment or job termination! This would be institutional intimidation at its worst.

As the chair of the Committee on Fairness to Smokers, I urge: I implore the Harper community, non-smokers and smokers, administration, faculty, staff, students and citizens in general to prevent this "New Persecution." Write to the President and Board of Trustees of Harper College and strongly protest this new witch hunt. Give us this day our small, restrained, well-ventilated smoking area.

Larry P. Kent
Chair, Committee on Fairness to Smokers

V Building has been a non-smoking building since 1976. Tobacco mosaic virus can be transmitted to certain greenhouse plants via smoke. The faculty using V Building supports a smoke-free environment.

Indian students respond

This letter is being written in reply to the letter published in your paper under the heading Indians abandon homeland. It seems unfair to read such an article during International Week at Harper. As we know, America is a country of foreigners. Some came in earlier and some later. President Jimmy Carter's program during 1976-79 invited talented persons from countries all over the world, not only from India. It was not an exchange program or a short period program, but a permanent residency program. This program was instituted for America's benefits and technological development needs. It is selfish to drive them out after fulfillments.

Hard working and sincerity always works. Now the next generation of Indian people who came here have the same intellectual level that everyone has come to expect. They know the value of education. Chinese, Korean, Japanese and many other communities are well set by their own efforts. They also brought their culture with them. The same is true for Indians.

It is human nature to struggle for betterment of life. Those who work hard get success. Facts remain facts. Indian students at Harper

Clubs need offices too

I was recently appalled and amazed at the audacity of one of our third floor Student Activities Administrators. I went to visit this woman on behalf of myself and the other club presidents on campus that are inconvenienced by not having an office, meeting room, telephone, or typewriter. Not only is this a luxury that a select few have, but an insult to those of us who would utilize the office to its full potential.

As I stepped into this person's enormous office, complete with matching window treatments, I asked her what the probability was of me obtaining an office. Her immediate response was sickening. She began preaching of how many of the teachers on campus do not even have offices.

Then why is it that some clubs are given offices, while others are not? Her reply was that not every club receives an office because "the school does not exist on their being there, while the school could not exist without a newspaper, senate, a radio station, or a program board."

To smooth things over she tried to pacify me by offering to proof a memo, or the opportunity to use the telephone or typewriter in the conference room. There are already three clubs that function out of this room along with two full-time employees that use it as some sort of office. A fourth club operating out of the office is absurd.

Harper policies have, once again, prevailed by showing us that certain clubs receive special benefits while others do not. We are those of "less importance". Student Activities must realize that we may not use our full potential without a few simple things like a memo board where future members may inquire about membership, as well as a file cabinet where we may have something for our future presidents to learn from our mistakes and successes.

Not only do I challenge our administration to try to function without an office for a day, but to also to think about using some of those millions of dollars stagnating in an account towards a building for us to operate out of.

Last but not least, I expect to be treated as an equal. That, after all, is my constitutional right. Jacqueline L. Daabert
Food Service Service Club President

Clarification

The November 16 People in Your Neighborhood contained an incorrect response from a member of the College Advocates of the Deaf. Annette Marie Fain's response to "In my spare time, I" was printed "to @!@!!". Her response should have read "Playing with my niece." The Harbinger apologizes to Annette for the mistake.

When purchasing a hot lunch, you are greeted by a display of possible meal choices. This display does not do the food

At the beginning of the school week, I decided that I would get a hot lunch. None of the lunches looked too good in its decrepit, stale display form. Taking my best guess, I chose the Chicken Fried

On Wednesday, a Thanksgiving feast was prepared. I ordered the Ham and Cheese sandwich with potatoes and gravy, stuffing, and pumpkin pie. Probably the best meal of the week! The sandwich melted in my mouth, the stuffing made me lick the bowl, and the pumpkin pie reminded me of the way good ole' Mom used to make it. You couldn't deny that the cafeteria went all out this day for Thanksgiving.

It was the last day of the school week, and there was only one line I didn't get anything from—the salad line. I wasn't too hungry so I only got some salad and watermelon. Once again, everything I ate was very fresh and, indeed, good.

My pocket book may be hurting, but my stomach sure isn't.

Harbinger's top-ten musical picks

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

Once again it's the end of another short year and time to offer my opinion on the best albums of the year. As I predicted at the beginning of the year, 1989 was a good year for music, much better than 1988 was. Last year I had to stretch to make a top ten list whereas this time around I have no problem making a top twenty list.

And now, my top ten album picks for the final year of the eighties.

(#10) Xymox
Twist of Shadows

A former 4AD-label band, Clan of Xymox dropped the first half of their name and gained a wider audience with the popular alternative tracks Blind Hearts and Obsession which was a big hit in the clubs. It's an excellent album, but their first two were excellent as well.

(#9) Tears for Fears
The Seeds of Love

Not as big of a disappointment as I expected after waiting for four years, this album sees Curt Smith taking a bit of a step back and letting Roland Orzabal assume control. Best track: Badman's Song.

(#8) The Jesus and Mary Chain
Automatic

A brilliant stroke of genius from brothers Jim and William Red who, despite being alcoholic, vulgar, and had tempered, still make great music. Automatic is rarer than their last album, but they have thankfully left their footback-drenched roots behind.

(#7) The Wolfgang Press
Bird Wood Cage

There's a beauty in simplicity, and the songs on Bird Wood Cage are simple and beautiful. Well, maybe "beautiful" isn't the right word, considering the fierce vocals and lyrics, the driving beat, and the frantic guitar that's tucked way back in the mix. Rainwater gets my vote for best single of the year.

(#6) Love and Rockets
Love and Rockets

Just to show you that Love and Rockets are a great band, this is probably their worst album to date, and it's still great. Some of the tracks sound like Daniel Ash, Kevin Haskins, and David I are sleeping through them, but songs like Round for Hell burn with an infectious intensity.

(#5) The Jazz Butcher
Big Planet Scary Planet

The Jazz Butcher has been making albums for most of the decade, and each one has been better than the previous ones. Big Planet Scary Planet is a masterpiece. It's easily his best LP so far, with his vocal talent and lyrical brilliance shining bright on such songs as The Word I Was Looking For and Line of Death.

(#4) The Blue Nile
Hats

You thought the wait between Tears for Fears albums was long? Try the gap between albums by Scotland's The Blue Nile. Their acclaimed debut album was released way back in 1983. Finally, six years later, we get another album from them, and it's every bit as good as their first. Even on the upbeat songs the incredibly melancholy voice of Paul Buchanan makes everything seem so unbearably sad.

(#3) New Order
Technique

A triumph of production, "Technique" just happened to be a collection of the right songs, played and sung just right, and put together in the right order. I guess this is what you get when you do everything right.

(#2) The The Mind Bomb

Unlike the New Order album, it's absolutely impossible to listen to Mind Bomb with your brain shut off (or wandering somewhere else). This is a thinking person's album if ever there was one. Every one of these songs packs a wallop, and despite the fierce power of the first track (and others), you get the feeling that Matt Johnson is still holding himself back.

(#1) The Cure
Disintegration

Once you've heard this album a few times you start to skip the singles Love Song and Fascination Street just because you've heard them enough and they are the low points on the album. From the opening notes of the lush, majestic Plainsong to the sad closing notes of Unites, Robert Smith and co. have created a masterwork through and through.

Other noteworthy albums of 1989 include releases from Stevie Nicks, Van Halen, and Donnie Tronble, Barkat, and Tronble. Among the biggest disappointments of the year were formerly do-no-wrong artists XTC and the Rainmakers. Generally speaking, 1989 was a great year for great music. 1990 looks set to be less exciting than 1989, but who knows what surprise may be in store. Keep your ears open.

I already said that I had no problem making a top twenty list. Here are the rest of them:

- (#20) Pierce Turner
The Sky and the Ground
- (#19) Quash and Dury
Flip-flop
- (#18) Kate Bush
The Sensual World
- (#17) Ministry
The Mind is a Terrible Thing to Taste

- (#16) Elvin Costello
Spike
- (#15) Nazer Ebb
Belief
- (#14) Martin L. Gore
Conaniteit, e.p.
- (#13) Comedoid Bleeding
Songs From the Ashes
- (#12) Blue Blue Blue
Reinforcement
- (#11) Marillion
Seasons End

Back to the Future again!

By Joe Stachler
Staff Writer

Back in March of this year, many newspapers and television shows that center on the motion picture industry, were referring to the many films due to come out between May and August as "summer sequels." There was Indiana Jones, Star Trek, Ghostbusters, Lethal Weapon and James Bond film in runs.

Now, 1989 is turning from the summer of sequels to the year of sequels. Witness "National Lampoon's Christmas Vacation."

Stepfather 2, and, of course, Back to the Future, Part II.

Most of the cast to this sequel has returned with the exception of Crispin Glover as George McFly and Marty's girlfriend, Jennifer. (This time played by Elizabeth Shue).

The same team who made the original Future are back: Robert Zemeckis directs and Steven Spielberg produces.

The storyline of Future II is incredibly fast paced. So much so that one wishes traveling back in time was possible in order to pick up what was missed (instead, you'll just have to pay another $6.50 per ticket). It has a terrific science fiction plot and is funny as well.

Many of the scenes from the original are replayed here, such as the famous scene from the original where Buff crumbles into a manure truck. In the sequel there is a more modern twist to that same scene.

The future in this film is depicted as more peaceful than other hard-edged portrayals of the future like RoboCop and Blade Runner. The year 2015 is not altogether different than the present except for a few minor technological advancements and fashion changes. There are even sequels in the future.

Doc Brown is still a bit fanatic. Marty is still a bit busy head - no matter what age he is. Together they work through time and leave you with a huge smile that goes from 90 mph to zero.

One final note, don't be in a rush to leave when you think the credits are about to roll, there are scenes from part III due to be released next summer. Uh-oh!

Let's talk Squeeze

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-Chief

It was a very mixed crowd. Looking around, you could spot people from ages five to 50. They came clad in leather, sweaters, T-shirts, and even a couple (god forbid) in neon. About the only thing the occupants of the Aragonne Ballroom had in common on November 18 was they were all there to see Squeeze.

A medecine warm up hand dampened the crowd's spirit, but as soon as they felt the stage, the excitement began to build again.

Squeeze didn't use fancy costumes, laser lights or big sets; they didn't need it. The band's talent and Glenn Tilbrook's energy was all the show needed.

After seeing them at Popfest '88, the performance and the crowd at the Aragonne amazed me. The Babylon and On Tour didn't draw nearly the crowd this year's tour. Frank, did. In fact, Babylon and On was, honestly, boring.

The concert this year was anything, but boring. Squeeze moved through a mix of songs from Frank, Babylon and On and some of their older works.

The highlight came during the song Is it Love? when Tilbrook invited the audience to sing back up for the band in two-part harmony.

Squeeze finished the show with Wierdness, and was called back for two encores, in which they played Annie Get Your Gun and Tempest.

Stay tuned to next week...

Applications now accepted for PALS

Applications are now being accepted for the next group of Peer Advisors Listening to Students (PALS). All students are encouraged to apply. PALS, part of the DAWN program which is federally funded by FIFE (Fund for Improvement of Postsecondary Education), is a student volunteer organization providing student-to-student information and caring. The purpose: Recognize areas of concern, respond with care and refer when needed. PALS are trained to share information about drugs and alcohol, to listen to student concerns about any wellness area and to provide a friend to talk to as the first step in the healing process.

Students must commit to two semesters in PALS and participate in a three-day training program. Training will take place from 8:30 am to 12:30 pm on Monday, January 8, Tuesday, January 9 and Monday, January 15, 1990. A one-day Drug Awareness Workshop will also be held during the spring semester and weekly PALS meetings are on Mondays from 3 pm to 4 pm beginning January 22, 1990. PALS are also required to designate a two hour time slot per week for advising duty.

Applications for PALS are available in the Health Service office, A162, and must be returned by December 4, 1989. Students will be contacted by December 15. For more information call DAWN coordinator Phyllis Zatrock at extension 2626.

Festival chorus to perform

One hundred voices of the Harper Festival Chorus will present Ernest Bloch's "Sacred Service" and Clougen/Krugstad's "A Son, A Savior!" on Sunday, December 3 at 3 pm in Building M.

The single performance will also feature professional soloists as well as a professional orchestra directed by Anthony V. Musardo. In May, the chorus celebrates its twenty-fifth anniversary with a gala Silver Anniversary Concert on

Telephone registration set for December, January

Telephone registration for spring classes at Harper College will be held December 11 through 14 and January 2, 3, 4 and 8 from 10 am to 8 pm and December 15 and January 5 from 10 am to 5 pm. Students registering by phone must have their fee payment in the Business Office by 8 am on January 8, 1990.

Telephone registration is limited to students who have taken credit courses at Harper and new students who have filed an application at least two business days prior to registration and who are registering for nine credit hours or less. There is a $15 non-refundable application fee.

To register by telephone, students should call 397-1110 and have their social security number, course prefix, course number and section number ready. Hearing impaired students may call 397-7600 (TTY) to register. Twelve phone lines will be available to process registration as quickly as possible.

Students registering for their first college level English or math course who have not taken the mandatory assessment tests are responsible for contacting the Office of Testing Services, 397-3000, extension 2441, to schedule a test prior to registration. Counselors are available to answer questions concerning course selection by calling 397-3000, extension 2206.

Classes for the spring semester begin on Tuesday, January 16, 1990. Tuition is $30 per semester hour.

Ski trip space still available

One of America's premier ski resorts, Steamboat Springs, Colorado, is the site of this year's Harper College ski trip. The trip is open to students, faculty, staff and the general public.

Participants will leave Chicago on January 1, 1990 and return January 8. A cost of $521 per person, double occupancy, includes round-trip transportation from Chicago to Denver on United Airlines, with transfers from the airport to Steamboat Springs. Also included are seven nights condominium lodging on the mountain, five all-day lift tickets and welcome and farewell parties.

"The lodging on this trip is exceptional," said Director of Student Activities Jeanne Pankann. "It's located on the mountain which means it's very close to the lifts. In fact, you can go out your door and ski right down to the lift—no walking, no waiting for a bus to take you to the lift area."

Steamboat Springs is a world class resort, said Pankann, "no longer just Vail and Aspen. It's a skier's haven. There's a village at the base of the mountain and three miles from the village is the town of Steamboat Springs. There is also an excellent variety of local restaurants and nightclubs."

Forty-eight participants can be accommodated. A deposit of $110, due immediately, will reserve space for the trip. For more information call 397-3000, extension 2242.

Basketball Teams off to fast start

Men win 3 games of last 4

By Lisa Nasser
Guest Writer

When first-year Men's Basketball Coach Paul Kasper expected his squad to be competitive and maybe surprise a few people this year, did he expect to have a successful run on his investment this early?

Whether he did or not, he's got one. After an 0-2 start, the Hawks are on a hot streak going into Thursday night's contest at McHenry winning three out of their last four games to even their 1989-90 ledger to 3-3.

"I'm excited and very happy with what has taken place so far," the coach said. "I'm encouraged by our intensity. I think that it has given us a good effort each time we go out on the floor. Our players realize that basketball is a 40 minute game-not 38 or 39, and that it takes 40 minutes of playing hard, getting it together as a group and working well with each other as a team to win."

After opening losses to Morton (82-75) and Waubesa (109-62), the Hawks got to work by picking up their first win of the year north of the Illinois-Wisconsin border last Wednesday night in the Milwaukee suburb of Pewaukee over Waukesha Tech 88-85.

In the game, Harper overcame an early second half, 11 point deficit with the help of the three-point shot. Included in this six (as a part of his game-high 22) and Sophomore Dean Perutski's three, capped by the one that put the Hawks up for good with a minute and a half remaining. Freshman Paul Combs also added 15 points, tall in the second half including both ends of a one and one with nine seconds left that sealed up the win, Kasper's first at Harper.

Then came an 84-66 thumping of Richland in the opening round of the Harper Thanksgiving Tournament on Friday night. The win put Harper in the title game for the first time since 1984, breaking an eight game journey losing streak. This all came in part due to a pair of outstanding performances by freshman forwards George Dilles (23 points) and Derek Murray (20 points) that helped the Hawks pull away from a 42-36 halftime lead.

The inside attack by Murray (12 points) and Dilles (13 points) both All-Tourney selections, combined with a strong outside game by Whitman (12 points) and sophomore Jason Brooks (17 points) allowed Harper to come back from an early 15 point deficit in Saturday afternoon's title game to trail defending champion Wright 47-34 at the half. A 17-0 spurt out that to a single point at 56-55 before the Rams were able to pull away with an 81-73 win to reclaim the tournament championship.

But the Hawks weren't going to take this setback lying down. Instead, they went after Wright, chasing them down to their home court on Chicago's Northwest side for an exciting showdown that took place Tuesday afternoon. After the hosts scored the first eight points of the contest, Harper came back, taking a brief lead, to be down only one 29-28, at the intermission.

Then with a minute left in the game and the Hawks behind 58-57, Brooks hit Murray on an alley-oop that Murray barged in off the glass to put the team up for good at 59-58. After Wright's Charles Dillard lost an offensive rebound with 37 ticks left on the clock, the Rams put the final nails in the coffin 10 seconds later when Rodney Sanders was called with a technical foul for cursing at the referee to protest a foul called on Dillard (his fifth) when he tried to get a jump ball call on Whitman. Whitman, but the front end of his one and the bonus, and Combs hit both technical shots to make it 62-58. A Combs lay-up on the ensuing inbounds pass made it 64-58, putting icing on the cake.

Lady Hawks win 2 of first 3

Despite missing leading scorer and All-America candidate Amy Kornd (knee problems) and promising freshman Stephanie Garcia (personal reasons) for two games, the Lady Hawks and Head Coach Tom Teuchner are off to a 2-1 start heading into a Thursday evening match-up with McHenry and former Harber men's coach Bill Probst.

In the season opener last Tuesday, Harper revenge a season-ending loss in last year's sectional final to Highland with an easy 59-33 win at home. Center Candlyn Cowley made an impressive showing in her college debut by scoring the game's first 4 points. She finished with 15 and added 24 rebounds. Sophomore guard Monica Perovskiy drilled three 3-pointers and scored a game-high 16 points.

Dilles once again led Harper in scoring with 18, followed by Murray and Combs with 12 each. Dillard led Wright with 13, followed by Sanders' 11. Charles Davis and Steve Dean were next for Wright with 10 apiece.

Kasper felt that despite scoring five points, Brooks' defensive performance on Dean, who stirred the Hawks for 24

Garcia completed her first game by scoring 9 points adding 12 rebounds, 4 steals and handing out 6 assists. The Lady Hawks had 63 rebounds on the night, 24 off of the offensive boards.

Limited to 7 players in the opener of their Thanksgiving tournament, the Lady Hawks fell to Lake County, 63-56. Freshman Jeanne Harwig filled in admirably with 17 points, including 7 of 9 from the foul line. Cowley added 15 points and 16 rebounds and Nucky Boldog finished with 12 points.

Perovskiy went beyond the 3-point line five times to tie a school record and finished with a game-high 24 points (23 in the first half) in their 65-45 romp over Morton Saturday Night. The win gave the Lady Hawks third place in the tournament.

Cowley kept up her scoring pace with 17 points to points on Saturday, was instrumental in the win.

He (Dean) only had two points in the second half, that itself showed how super Jason's job was."

In pointing towards the remainder of the season, the rookie coach feels that if his team can maintain their hard work ethic, it will pay off in the long run.

"Better things can only come as long as we take it one game at a time."

Hawks are Midwest Bowl Champions!

Hawks whip Minnesota's Normandale, final score 46-7

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

Brad Jones hauls in another one of his five catches. Jones' catches totaled 132 of Harper's 178 yards through the air.

What a way to close out two decades of Harper Football! Thanks to a trio of bad snaps, the Harper Hawks cruised to their first-quarter touchdown on route to a 46-7 trouncing of 14th ranked Normandale of Minnesota on the Midwest Bowl at Triun College in River Grove last Saturday.

The win concluded the Hawks' season at 9-3.

"It's always nice to go out with a bowl win, especially for the sophomores," Head Coach John Elaski said, thanking each of the sophomores for two years of great service as they trained onto the field for pre-game warm-ups.

After the Lions' opening drive stalled at the Harper 39, the first of Normandale center Dan Leuer's bad snaps took place. This set up Pete Milazzo's block of punter Len Peterson, creating a 12 yard loss to the Lion 49. The Hawks marched it in eight plays later when Lorenzo Butler took it in, putting the score at 7-0.

Milazzo, along with Tom Fuhler's help, partially blocked Peterson's second punt, a 20 yarder, to set the Hawks up. Three plays later, Brad Jones (15 catches, 132 yards, 2 TD's) jumped up and caught a 25 yard pass from Jerry Chaney (4 of 8, 62 yards, 2 TD's) tying a Midwest Bowl record for most TD passes to make it 14-0 Hawks.

Peterson's bad luck continued after a Normandale drive stalled on their own 28. Then, time, Leuer's snap sailed high over his head, forcing him to try to run. He was met for a 12 yard loss at the Lion 16. James Haywood took it in on the next play, up points on the board, the defense held Normandale to just 58 yards total offense in the first half, including holding. All making it 20-0, with a mixed extra point.

While the Hawks were piling

American candidate RB Rich Lucas to 20 yards on seven carries.

"I told you we had a good game plan for them," said Defensive Coordinator John Newcomb.

In the meantime, the Hawks vaulted the lead to 34-0 at the half, behind another Haywood TD run and a 26-yard Chaney to Jones strike.

Back up QB Lars Sydén (4 of 6, 34 yards) kept up the scoring with a six yard toss to Brian Canoy in the third quarter. Haywood finished the score off by breaking a Midwest Bowl record for the most rushing touchdowns, to make it 46-0. That touchdown also tied the Midwest Bowl record for most touchdowns scored, making him Harper's first 150-point scorer in a single season.

Normandale finally got on the board when Jesse Sell scored on a seven-yard run with 5:27 left.

Elaski, who, after two decades of coaching moved his career record to 121-68-2, said that even with the win, there's a little disappointment.

Elaski continued, "Being in the Midwest Bowl means that you didn't win the region. You always want to win the region and go to Iowa [for the Royal Crown Cola Bowl in Cedar Falls]. If you don't [win the region], there's always some disappointment. But, at least we met our goal to win a post-season bowl game."

Wide Receiver Chris Schaudert and Tight End Brian Canoy celebrate Canoy's third-quarter touchdown catch.

James Haywood ends a brilliant Harper career with this fourth-quarter touchdown. His last in a Hawk uniform - that broke a Midwest Bowl record for most touchdowns rushing.

Harper's Steve Rokusak and Normandale's Kevin Murray both miss out on a Jerry Chaney pass.

Political Science Club receives $534 in funding

By Erik Wurser
News Editor

Political Science club asked Student Senate for a $534 grant to fund the forthcoming trip to the Model Illinois Government (MIG) convention. The senate approved the grant by a unanimous vote.

Some of the senators were reluctant to vote for the grant because the planned use for some of the funds was unexplained in the club's presentation.

The total cost of the trip is $1002, but club members are paying for $470 of the costs, according to Police of Science Treasurer Kevin O'Connell.

"We feel the money we're asking for is legitimate and reasonable," said President Jim Cabaj. "MIG is beneficial to the students."

MIG is a realistic simulation of state government providing the students with hands on experience.

MIG has a House of Representatives, a Senate, and a newspaper.

The structure reflects the actual Illinois government. Bills are proposed and deferred to a committee which will make a recommendation to the House.

The students debate the bills and attempt to pass them after making changes, giving students experience in real-life government procedure.

The newspaper is a daily which runs through the three days of MIG giving coverage to the student Senators and Representatives.

The paper is staffed by student journalists.

"Most people do not understand government," said Cabaj.
"MIG is a great way to learn how the government works."

all the accusations," said Eliasik. Because it is still under investigation, Eliasik was not allowed to discuss what rules were violated.

According to Taylor, Eliasik scheduled a meeting including them, Coach Bob Ferguson (offensive coordinator), and Hershey. During the meeting Taylor claims that Eliasik said, "You're [Taylor] not seeing the field until you pay Hershey and me our money."

Along with benching Taylor for the College of DuPage game, Eliasik suggested creating for Taylor and will not release his film highlights. "I don't recruit or make highlights for anyone that quits," says Eliasik. "Juan stopped showing up for practice, and, in my opinion, that's quitting the team."

"Coach told us why Juan didn't play. He said Juan chose not to play. We all knew it wasn't true."

"The whole situation is not fair at all. He benched me for reasons that have nothing to do with football," said Taylor. "I'm going to get him fired before I leave."

Other players have agreed with Taylor and believe Eliasik benched him for his rent money. "On the bus after the DuPage game, coach told us why Juan didn't play. He said Juan 'chose not to play'." We all knew that wasn't true," a player said.

The investigation is being conducted by Athletic Director Roger Bechhold and John Gekko, Dean of Athletics. Neither would comment on the situation at this point, but assured they will come to a conclusion. The results will then be given to Thompson who will make a decision.

Another player, who wished to remain anonymous said, "I want to play football next year. I wish they would just resolve their differences. I mean, Juan's already leaving next year and I'm not. This could ruin my chances."

"It's a sad situation. I don't want to see the program dropped," said Lou Namer, team statistician. "I like Juan and like Eliasik, but you don't ever want to see this happen. I hope everyone can get this resolved and things go back to normal. Eliasik is a good coach, he's done a lot for Harper and the players. I don't think anything should happen to him; he doesn't deserve it."

Pamela Watkins, the 1900th student to register for classes this semester, received a free 3 credit-hour class.

The prize of a free class, valued at $0 dollars, was envisioned to help boost registration.

"We developed a theme," said registration supervisor Maria Sokolovsk, "...and then used it to promote early registration."

The theme, "Capture the magic of Harper, Discover the 90's", has been successful this year in increasing early registration.

Registration is up 12.5% for this semester and the equivalent of full time registrants is up 6.1%.

Sculptor expresses feelings in her work Figures reflect essence of what they represent

By Alisa Chinlund
Features Editor

Sculpture cannot be taught through vocal or written instruction. It must be experienced by the artist. It is an art form in which the sculptor molds an object to reflect the perceptions, feelings, experiences, and interpretations of his or her environment. The sculptor takes an idea and gives it form and expression.

Sculptor Pat Rosello embarked on her art career at the age of ten. "I was an army brat. My father gave me clay made out of kasilin and mineral oil to mold and paint when I was a kid."

Rosello was hooked. She knew she wanted to become an artist, but hadn't decided what type.

Rosello dabbled in drawing, painting, and sculpting in metal, wood, and fiberglass, before choosing clay as her medium.

She has been sculpting for fifteen years. Six years ago, Rosello took her first sculpture studio class at Harper. Today, she still enjoys creating sculptures in the studio.

"I create sculptures"

-Pat Rosello

During her career, Rosello has sculpted cars, buses, Japanese Geishas, woman warriors, and Samurai. Yet, something was missing in the color scheme.

"I got tired of basic earth tones for sculpture," said Rosello. "The basic colors were dull. I wanted excitement. It's difficult to use bright colors without having them look like they were sold in a discount store."

Rosello enrolled in a computer graphics class a year ago, to help resolve the dull color dilemma. "I can draw the figure on the computer (Commodore Amiga) and design the colors for clothes," said Rosello. "I have a thousand colors to choose from. It's exciting to see what my sculpture will look like in full color."

It takes her approximately three weeks to create a sculpture. Rosello sketches the design on paper, and chooses the clay and color scheme. Each sculpture is hand-shaped, dried, fired, glazed, and fired again. Cooked pieces are then ready for display in galleries, art shows, or in the home.

Rosello tries to show the essence of what the piece represents. "I want you to know how the 5' tall Samurai warrior felt," said Rosello. "They were fierce. I try to reflect that feeling in my pieces."

Her new series of woman warriors, "Women for Whom the Ritual is Not Enough" shows women who are no longer subservient to their men. They are independent and have a sense of self.

"I create sculptures," said Rosello. "I chose not to make figures. They're pretty, sweet, and nice. My sculptures are full of excitement. After a while you get tired of cute miniatures."

Her work is displayed in several Chicago galleries including the Illinois Artisans Shop, Pat De Chai, and the Pursuit of Happiness.

Rosello hopes someday to have a one-woman show in a gallery. "I don't want to be a big frog in a big pond. I'd be happier being a big frog in a little pond."

Pat Rosello adds the finishing touches to a Samurai warrior sculpture. The piece represents a traditional Samurai equipped with a Katana (long sword) and a Gosa Katana (short sword).

Public Safety; the people behind the uniforms

By Jamie Breeson
Staff Writer

Public Safety: Who are they? What do they do?

"Our mission is to protect and serve the college community, and to provide services in the most professional manner possible," said Kevin King, supervisor of Public Safety.

Public Safety, located in Building B, operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

The staff of about 25 people includes four women, two security officers, a clerk dispatcher and the secretary.

Public Safety consists of three divisions: police officers, dispatchers and security officers.

The police officers investigate criminal offenses and traffic accidents. They are responsible for keeping our parking lot safe.

The dispatchers operate the radio center 24 hours a day. They take all incoming calls, and relay the messages to the officers. They also communicate with local police department whenever necessary.

Have you ever asked Public Safety to unlock your car door? Well, the security officers are the ones who let you in. They perform service-related duties, such as helping students who are locked out of their cars.

Not just anyone can become a security officer. First, they must attend a 400-hour state training course. Then, they are certified as peace officers by the state.

Security officers participate in an ongoing training process, where they receive 40-50 hours of additional training during the year, which includes report writing, interrogation, stress management and public speaking.

Public Safety does more to protect and serve Harper College than one may think. The 1988 statistics show 109 reports of criminal offenses including 54 reports of theft, eight break-ins, four assault and batteries, and six indecent exposures. Of the 109 criminal reports, 31 were cleared by arrest or by other means. In addition, there were 2,184 door opening requests, 681 motorist arrests, and 1,998 miscellaneous service calls. Public Safety was also called upon 1,322 times to direct traffic.

"The main purpose of the college is education, and we can't forget that," said King. "We are here to see that it takes place without disruption."

For immediate Public Safety service, call 397-3000, ext. 211. For other Public Safety service call ext. 330 or 441.

McAlpin and other winners will represent the United States in the Concours International Des Jeunes Createurs De Mode in Paris. She will compete against winners from 15 to 20 different countries around the world.

If McAlpin wins in Paris, her garment will be a part of the permanent collection in the Louvre Museum in Paris.

Letters to the editor

Who controls A Building?

This is a clarification to last week's letter to the editor entitled WHCM Response.

"Complaints from faculty. They are in the Student Center. The students should be able to do what they want in THEIR BUILDING."

Let's clear up the above quote and set the record straight. Faculty are not in the student center, "Staff" are. We are here to service the students in all of A Building, eg. Financial Aid, Health Services ect. It is not "their" building! It is to all who use and service the college. The lemonade stand quote is out in left field waiving the daises.

In the past several years, your advisor has not heard from us at all. It has only been when WHCM turns up the volume for requests of their own and do not alert "staff". Let's keep in mind we all are here to service as a team.

Our Wish List

Dear Board, we've been very good...

The wish list is one of the great American Christmas traditions. Believe it or not, some college students want more than cars, money or their degree.

Last year, in the December 8 issue of the Harbinger, Editor-in-Chief Doug Ray printed his wish list for Harper.

Each year Harper strives to reach its goal, Excellence in Education. Unfortunately, an institution this large always has room for improvement. This is the Harbinger staff's wish list for Harper College. (The list was fairly redundant, so I cut straight to day number 12.)

On the twelfth day of Christmas our Board of Trustees will give to us—Twelve hundred pencil sharpeners (V.P. Vern Manke gave us an early present).

Eleven groups of trees to break wind (cold wind, not warm).

Ten million stars (to gaze upon with a new Observatory).

Nine thousand books for an enlarged library (see the first day of Christmas).

Eight hundred new pieces of furniture (if the President can do it, so can we).

Seven less days of school (finals week).

Pause and take a breath.

Six new art pieces (something from the realism category).

and FIVE (minimum) buildings remodeled for handicapped access.

Four clean stairwells (remove the tobacco stains from the walls in F building stairwells).

Three thousand student parking places (closer to the buildings).

Two electron microscopes (if we can afford an Observatory, why not?).

and One Liberal Arts Building.

Douglas Ray
Editor-in-Chief

Things have changed since last year. There are sharpeners all over campus. The Observatory is nearing completion. Access for the handicapped has improved, but there is still a long way to go. Harper will build not one new building but THREE, three new buildings!

Following the tradition, here are a few things we'd like for this year's 12 days of Christmas.

On the twelfth day of Christmas our Board of Trustees will give to us—Twelve groups of trees to block the wind.

Eleven thousand students who care about what goes on in their school, community, country and world.

Ten percent lower prices in the cafeteria and book store.

Nine more planets to destroy (we're almost done with this one).

Eighty clocks for class rooms rooms.

Seven less days of school (finals week).

Sixty waits (for a WHCM transmitter).

Five pieces of discernable art (not counting Bill's bust).

Four journalism teachers (so we can have a department).

Three newer, better and larger open computer labs.

Two smokers on the Environmental Health and Safety Committee.

and One Sports Editor.

Clarification

In last week's news story, Tax hike approved, there were several errors.

The Board of Trustees voted 6-1 in favor of the hike, not 7-2. The Board has the authority to levy up to 25¢ for educational funding and operations, not 24¢ as stated in the story.

Additionally, the quote, "I just do not agree, or justify, this tax increase," should be attributed to Board member Mount, not member Miller.

This year there's no shortage of greatest hits albums. From David Bowie to Dionne Warwick they seem to be plaguing us everywhere.

In the middle of all this is Duran Duran. You remember them, right? Early 80's video band, teenage idols, countless number one hits.

Their new release, Decade, is the eighth from Duran. Decade is just another cliché album. The kind you'd buy your friend to remind them of the decade. There's nothing special about it except fairness.

But let's not waste our time discussing how the album sounds and let's symbolize. Let's discuss the album's meaning - a decade of Duran Duran music.

It seems today we forget what hits the group gave us, and, actually, are still giving us.

Way back in 1980 the group released their smash album Duran Duran. The group consisted of Simon LeBon (lead vocals), John Taylor (bass guitar), Nick Rhodes (keyboards), Andy Taylor (lead guitar), and Roger Taylor (drums). None of the Taylor's are related.

Album sales started slow but soon became popular with the release of their 1981 single Planet Earth. Planet Earth only gained mass popularity in the U.K. With their next release, Girls on Film, Duran Duran captured much of the hearts of many U.K. teens. America

Not yet breaking into America, Duran went back to the studio to record their next album, Rio. Then, with the release of Hungry Like a Wolf, Duran broke the charts worldwide claiming not only American popularity, but worldwide recognition. Surprised by their sudden fame, Duran put out the title track single, Rio, proving themselves confident musicians.

That year, after Rio hit double platinum, they put out their next single, Save a Prayer, escalating them to the pinnacle of musical popularity. Every radio that was played, every hour on MTV, every teen magazine, the faces of Duran Duran were splashed

When Duran's third album, Seven and the Ragged Tiger, came out with singles like Union of the Snake and The Reflex, their musical ability increased, but their mass appeal decreased. How can you top an album like Rio? Even with a good, but not great album, Duran nevertheless sold out for their 1984 tour all around the states.

Feeling they had to prove themselves as a live band, they next released a live concert album, Arena, with one extra bonus song. Wild Boys, with Duran boosted to the top of the charts holding fans tight as Duran reached their top of their popularity.

Things started to become shaky for the group. Tensions between them ran high and they struggled to get their last single out — movie soundtrack A View to a Kill. After A View to a Kill Duran broke up. The band split into two new bands: The Power Station (J. Taylor, A. Taylor) and Arcadia (LeBon, Rhodes, R. Taylor) each breaking out three smash singles.

Soon people forgot about Duran Duran, and no one remembered when they decided to get back together in 1986 and do another album. This time only three members stayed. LeBon, J. Taylor, and Rhodes. There new album -

Notorious. Notorious caused a bit of deja vu, but didn't go far in America. It did, however, gain much respect with the critics and go number one in Italy, Japan, and the U.K. Other singles released were Meet El Presidente and The Skin Trade. None went anywhere.

Decade Duran Duran's dedication to themselves. Their new album consists of their best hits over the past decade. Displayed above is Duran's new album, look at the cover art during the holidays.

Well, fans, are you convinced this decade had a half way decent decade?

Choosing not to give up over their last album's notorious defeat, Duran went ahead and released another — Big Thing. Duran felt they had produced their best album yet, I Don't Want Your Love reached number one showing they could still do it. But, just the same, no one wanted to hear them, even after they released their next two singles, All She Wants Is and Do You Believe In Shame?.

Well, fans, are you convinced this group had a half way decent decade? They reached the top and the bottom. Now they just lay in a comfortable muddle.

Decade takes you on Duran's journey through this decade - the worst and the best. It's the fairest greatest hits album I've seen this year because it takes you on their ups and downs. It's true Duran Duran.

It's the End of the Decade

The results of the Best and the Worst of the 80's Survey are here!

By Michael Waskiewicz
Entertainment Editor and Steve Hitt
Staff Writer

It's the end of the decade and we all have our memories of it. Some are good, some are bad. Whatever the case, we can all look back and laugh, or maybe cry, at our past ten years.

The Harbinger wanted to know what the worst and the best was for everyone. So we constructed a survey for Harper students and faculty to fill out.

Most of the people who were selected to fill the survey out were somewhat intimidated by its eight pages. But I think when they started, they found it quite fun. In fact, I know they had fun.

Looking back into the past is what made it fun. Seriously, could you pick one single event in the past ten years that you would pick as your favorite. What would it be? It's tough! So while reading this, ask yourself the same questions. It could be fun. In fact, I know I know you'll have fun!

Thanks to everyone who helped!

The funniest results of the best and the worst

By Michael Waskiewicz

Along with the best and the worst came the funniest. If an answer was too hard to put down for any question, it was easier to put down the funniest. Some of these were so funny or creative we felt that they deserved to be recognized. These are some of what we got:

For the worst television show we noticed some pretty cute answers: Nova, this actually received an overwhelming response. Fantasy Island; Remember Square Pegs; Maimaim; Alice; offshot Hio's Yellow Rose; Pat Sajak; or "New" shows such as the New Monkeys, the New Masters, and the New Leave It to Beaver.

For worst movie, humorous answers included Back to the Beach, the Blue Lagoon, HOTS, and Return of the Killer Tomatoes.

Best thing that happened to you

1. Fell in Love
2. Graduated High School
3. I found myself and friends while condoms and crotch grabbing were among the worst.

For best dressed Harper's own Student Activities Coordinator Mike Neiman won a few nominations along with Jeanne Parkhill winning the same award.

Of all the answers we've seen here, though, the funniest one was an answer to the best thing that ever happened to you question. According to one student, the best thing that ever happened to them was the Harbinger.

Well, there you have it, not the winners, but the Best and the Worst of the nineties.

The above list was meant for humorous purposes only and, in no way, was meant to harm or discredit anyone.

Shoulder pads proved to be a close, but not close enough best trend

Student Activities Coordinator Michael Neiman adds one of the final touches to the tree before President Paul Thompson. It is different groups and organizations attended the annual celebration which was coordinated by Neiman. Each group was to bring an ornament that best represents their image. The odd shaped ornament is a blown up rubber glove, courtesy of Health Services. Many decorations filled the tree, including, people chains, angels, tickle tape, stockings, list, Garfield and many more.

Terry Karlov, her son Billy (right) and friend, enjoy the cookies and cakes of the festivities. The kids were saddened to find out that Santa would not be coming. (Santa was out buying a brand new truck to transport all those presents to all the good little boys and girls).

Men's basketball is off to a magical season

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

To borrow a few words from the rock group Heart "Try, try, try to understand, he's a Magic Man."

The "Magic Man," first-year Men's Basketball Coach Paul Kainer, has magically begun to completely turn around a program that had won just 11 games over the last two years.

Harper, only a five-game winner last year, has won four consecutive games to raise their record to 6-3 as they face College of St. Francis tonight in Joliet (7:30 pm tip-off).

"It's certainly better than losing," the coach said. "It's nice to complete the week undefeated, but we need to improve on the consistency of our play, or we're going to run into teams that are much more consistent than we are."

Once in point in their 85-82 win over Elgin Saturday, and 64-56 win over Elgin Saturday, the Hawks blew big leads almost losing both games.

Against McHenry (2-4), the host Scots erased a 16 point early second half deficit to take a five point lead. But, thanks to the efforts of George Dilles (21 points), Jason Brooks (20 points), Paul Nelson and Derek Murray (13 points each) the Hawks were able to dart their way back to the lead for the win.

In the Elgin game, Harper said the host Spartans (1-5) erase a 22-10 lead in the first half by going on a 15-6 run to pull within three at the half (26-25). After finally tying the game at 44, a Paul Combs' three pointer and a hoop from Dilles put a lock on the lead.

Combs led all scorers with 15. Sophomore Dean Perakakis added 14 and Murray contributed 10 to the effort.

More good news came to them that day when several members of the Hawks' Monday opponent, Elmhurst, came down with an illness that forced them to forfeit the game to the Hawks.

You never want to pick up a forfeit because you didn't earn it, all it does is give you a free win, Kainer said. "But we'll take it."

Currently, the coach plans to look for a replacement. "Hopefully, we'll find somebody down the line."

Assistant Coach Duane Sell feels the forfeiture is a blessing in disguise.

"It gives us a chance to rest everybody because sooner or later you start to burnout," Sell said.

After facing St. Francis tonight, the Hawks come back to host Lake County on Saturday (3 pm tip-off), then travel to face Truman in Chicago on Tuesday evening at 5:30 pm before hosting Oakton Tuesday, December 19 at 7:00 pm Harper will also compete in the eight-team Highland Christmas Classic in Freeport, Illinois on December 22 and 23.

Lady Hawks recovering from a shaky start

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

If a 13-3 run that saw a 19 point deficit turn to 9 in less than a three minute span in Saturday's 73-60 loss at Elgin were any indication of what the Lady Hawks will do this year, then a bright and rosy future could be on the horizon.

But for the moment, they find themselves struggling to stay above water with a 3-3 record. They picked up a forfeit win on the December 1st contest against Oakton (due to a cancellation of their season because of a lack of players), early last week and a 67-40 loss last Thursday at McHenry, coached by former Harper Men's mentor Bill Probst, piled on top of Saturday's setback.

Despite the recent misfortunes, Head Coach Tom Teschner feels that the "real" Lady Hawks are yet to be seen.

"I'm very proud of the girls for the way they're playing. They're giving their hearts out each time they're out on the floor," he said.

In the McHenry game the Lady Hawks played with a full cast (nine players) for the first time this season. Trailing 25-20 at halftime, they were to close at 31-30 on Patty Cancolla's basket off the glass with 14:53 left, culminating a 10-0 run.

Then the bottom fell out. Thanks in part to McHenry Coach Probst's coaching (despite the Scots 15-11 forced turnover after turnover (31 in all), leading to a 25-4 run that put the contest out of reach 56-33, with 9:36 left.

"We just weren't able to run with them, their defense forced us into doing what they wanted to do," Teschner said after the game.

Carolyn Cowley led the way with 13 points followed by Cancolla with 11 in her long awaited debut, guard Amy Kneel had eight points as she played on a knee brace that she had first put on less than an hour before tip-off.

"It's gonna take time for her to get the feel of wearing it," Teschner said. Once she does, look out.

In the Elgin game, the absence of the 6'1" Cowley and Cancolla (also 6'1") getting into foul trouble hurt their rebounding, limiting them to one shot on a good portion of their possessions.

Seraphine Garcia led the hawks in scoring with 18 points, followed by Kneel with 14. Cancolla and Monica Premyski added 12.

The Lady Hawks will get a week of practice in before hosting two-time Region IV Semi-Finalist Sauk Valley Saturday at 1 pm in Building M.

"It's a week off that we'll need to get everybody rested up and ready to go," the coach said.

Rags and riches for wrestlers

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

One can best describe the first three meets of the season for the 1989-90 Harper wrestlers as going from riches, to rags, and back to riches.

But, thanks in part to outstanding performances from Sophomores Jason Fincane, Eric Bailey, Bill Cordis, Rob Malecki, Keith Deman and freshman Walter Sandevan, the Hawks could be rich beyond their wildest dreams with a basketful of national qualifiers in February.

Eric Goldberg competes a move to get out from under Walter Sandevan along with a Region IV title to boot.

"We're better because of all our kids that came back from last year," 19th year head Coach Norm Lovelace said.

The season began in high gear as Bailey, Deman, Cordis, and Malecki placed in the top four at the Southwestern Michigan Autumn Open in Dowagiac, Michigan on November 11th with Bailey and Deman sharing the title at 167 lb.

"The sophomores really set a good example of what hard work and determination will do for the freshmen," Lovelace said.

After no Hawk wrestlers placed at the Northern Open in Madison, Wisconsin over Thanksgiving weekend in which Harper went up against NCAA Division I powers like Iowa and Iowa State, they regrouped at Saturday's Warhawk Open at the University of Wisconsin Whitesater. There Fincane took third in the 142 lb weight class followed by Sandevan placing second in the 118 lb. weight class.

"Sandevan's little match" was a real close one that he should've won," Lovelace commented. "As for Fincane, he had a sterling performance."

Bailey reached the 167 lb. Semi-Finals where he lost to the tournament MVP, an All-American from Marquette before a knee injury forced him to default during wrestling.

"We hope it's nothing serious," the coach said, "but we're afraid it might be ligament damage."

With four invites over the semester break, Lovelace would like to see his squad progress forward. "We'd like to see the kids get better with each match."

Lovelace also feels good about the addition of football players Steve Rekuak, who will compete in the heavyweight division, and Chris Steadman, who will compete in the 177-190 lb. weight class. "There's no question that they will help us out."

The Hawks' four meets over the break are the Wisconsin Open on the campus of the University of Wisconsin Parkside Saturday, The Trios Invite next Saturday in River Grove, the Carthage Invite Saturday, January 6th in Kenosha, Wisconsin and the Harper Invite in Building M Saturday, January 13.

All-American Football

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

Add three more All-Americans to the growing Harper list.

RB James Haywood, DL Joe Belcher, and LB Antonio Sutton were named to All-American teams on Tuesday. Belcher and Haywood were named to both the NCAA (National Junior College Athletic Association) and J.C. Grid-Wire teams. Haywood earned NCAA first team and Grid-Wire honorable mention, while Belcher received second team honors from Grid-Wire and NCAA honorable mention. Sutton was named Grid-Wire honorable mention.

For Head Coach John Eliakim it marked the first time in five years that the NCAA had not selected three or more Hawks.

"It's funny because they [J.C. Grid-Wire, a Santa Ana-based junior college ratings service] selected three of our players, and the NCAA only selected two."

In addition, Haywood tied Normandale RB Rich Lucas' 22 touchdowns for the NCAA title. The final statistics were tabulated before the Midwest Bowl, when the Harper defense held Lucas to 31 yards rushing and no TDs, while Haywood set a Midwest Bowl record with three TDs.

Eliasik investigation continues

By Michael Waskiewicz
Entertainment Editor

The continuing investigation of head football coach John Eliasik has revealed that the alleged accusations made by player Juan Taylor are false.

"If Juan owed me money for an old debt, why would I bench him for a game that cost us at the regional championship?"

-Coach Eliasik

In early December, Taylor claimed that he was benched from the regional championship College of DuPage game because he did not pay his rent to coach Eliasik, whom managed the apartment. The complaint led to a full length investigation causing many worries to the school and anyone related to the football program. Taylor was benched from the COD game because he had not shown up for practice for a period of one week due to missing a train. He was not benched for not paying his rent money.

During this period Taylor was supposed to attend treatment of which he missed a day. Taylor could offer no excuse. According to Eliasik, if a player misses treatment, it is just like missing practice, and the player is benched for the following game. Eliasik acted according to the rules.

After being benched, Taylor stopped showing up for practice and treatment. Eliasik then stopped recruiting for Taylor and withheld his spotlight film because he was not considered part of the team anymore.

Juan Taylor then made his complaint to the Dean of Athletics and sought the Harbinger for publicity of the event.

The controversy incited President Thompson to send a memo to all faculty and staff calling the situation serious and instructed them how to "appropriately" respond to anyone asking questions about the Taylor complaint.

"If Juan owed me money for an old debt, why would I bench him for a game that cost us the regional championship?" Said Eliasik. "Juan made his own decision not to play, I had nothing to do with the rent he owed me."

Collegians smoke less than others; but chewing tobacco's popularity continues to escalate

(CPS) College educated people are less likely to smoke, but college men are using chewing tobacco more than they used to, two separate studies have found.

A Centers for Disease Control (CDC) survey of about 20,000 people found that less-educated people, who also tend to be of a lower social and economic status, are more likely to be smokers than high school grads or people with at least some college credit.

"There has been progress in reducing cigarette smoking, but the study shows most of the progress is limited to the well-educated," said Dr. Linn Fucini of the Atlanta-based CDC.

Among the 18 to 34 year-olds surveyed, 41 percent of the people who didn't graduate from high school were smokers.

By comparison, 14 percent of the high school grads smoked, and only 19 percent of the people who had more than a high school education smoked.

Yet tobacco remains a campus staple. Separately, a Pennsylvania State University study found that one in five college men use chewing tobacco, almost double the number of college men who smoke.

Elbert Glower, director of the Center for Tobacco Studies at Penn State and head of the study, said he was surprised to find a high number of students who use smokeless tobacco.

Of the 5,994 college students surveyed, 22 percent of the men chew tobacco while only 13 percent said they smoke. Of the women surveyed, 2 percent said they chewed, and 16 percent said they smoked.

"People see smokeless tobacco as a safe alternative to smoking. The very first hazard people think of with smoking is lung cancer," Glower said.

However, a 1986 surgeon general's report said smokeless tobacco causes cavities, gum diseases and oral cancer. It is also believed to be as addictive as cigarettes.

Glower fears an epidemic of oral cancer, a disease that typically develops become evident until its victims are in their mid-fifties, will erupt in a decade or two when the current generation of chewers moves into late middle age.

College News Update

Tuition costs rising fast

(CPS) Cune 2007, tuition at private universities will average $46,815 a year, Research Associates of Washington predicts. Public research university tuition will be $7,715 per year, while public four-year college tuition will average $6,152 for a year.

Student leaders recognized

The principle members of clubs and organizations may be eligible to receive "20" parking stickers this semester. To qualify the member must "sell" it and maintain no less than six members, the group must meet at least once a month and must attend the Round Table meetings. The Round Table is a forum for clubs and organizations to share ideas and help each other with specialized projects.

Over 54 people would currently be eligible, however the impact on faculty parking is not expected to be significant as only a handful of clubs regularly participate in Round Table.

This privilege has been granted as a result of lobbying by the Student Involvement Committee. If students feel the administration recognizes their efforts, student involvement will increase, according to chairperson Don Bailey.

Pool Room rumors falsified

Although the pool room was scheduled for renovation, no work has been started. Contrary to recent rumors, the area will be changed this semester.

Free legal advice available

Harper's Student Activities Office is providing free legal advice from practicing attorneys to students who pay an activity fee. An attorney will be available Wednesday afternoons from 1:00 pm to 4:30 pm and evenings from 5:15 pm to 6:45 pm in A336 (third floor, Building A).

Students can make an appointment by calling 397-300 ext. 2242 or 2243, or by coming into the Student Activities Office in A336. Students without appointments can see the attorney on a walk-in basis, if time permits.

Warmth leads to cultural exchange

By Nancy Wahl
Guest Writer

Glenn came to Harper College on January 9 at 8:00 pm. It appeared in the guise of a performance by two Ukrainian groups from the Soviet Union.

The tour was made possible by a recently signed agreement between the Friendship Ambassadors Foundation of Upper Montclair, New Jersey and the Kiev Branch of Spunk, the youth travel organization of the Soviet Union.

The first part of the program was performed by Group D, a singing group led by Igor Denaren, one of the Ukraine's most famous contemporary pop singers.

The group's repertoire included songs in various styles including traditional Ukrainian Duma, English ballad and rock. The performance was dynamic, intense, and dramatic, and audience response was in kind.

The second half of the program was performed by Drachka, a select group from the premier dance troupe Ukraina. It is the ensemble's first tour of the United States. Its members are students, workers, and young professionals from the city of Kiev.

This portion of the program included traditional Ukrainian folk songs and dances and additional Moldovan, Georgian and Russian numbers.

The costumes were in beautiful and brightly embroidered colors and the designs and shades all had symbolic significance. It created the impression of a group of bright fluttering birds as the young men and women whirled and leaped in a profusion of early hand ribbons.

For many in the audience, the performance was a chance to see national dances they had not seen in many years and to hear their native language spoken and sung.

As meaningful as the program was, the greater significance of the visit of the Ukrainians was in the cultural exchange between the two groups, and the Harper College families of students, faculty and staff they stayed with.

The group ranged in age from 16 to 32 and was distributed between a number of families. The warmth with which the group was received reflects on the openness of the Harper community. It was responded to in kind by the members of the group.

The gifts of Ukrainian souvenirs included linens, vodka, champagne, and books of poetry by national poets considered heroes.

The group was very interested in American television movies, how our children go to school, what things cost, and how our families function. One young man was very surprised by how many American women drive cars and work. One found it very odd that his brothers, a 47-year-old grandmother, worked and went to a university.

The teenage son of one staff member was worried needlessly about language difficulties. It took less than one hour to realize he and the two teenage Ukrainians he was hosting had several words in common: movies, Arnold Schwarzenegger, Rambo, pizza, and girls. Some languages are universal.

No one missed a bus, was lost, or late for any events. There was an abundant amount of interchange for two groups of people who did not share a language - which proves there is much that can be said with the heart and eyes that can never be expressed in words.

Spring semester; time to wake up

By Jamie Beeson
Staff Writer

I have arrived at a brilliant conclusion about coping with the next sixteen weeks - crying doesn't help. I cried for three hours last night, and did nothing but swell my eyes shut.

Spring semester 1990 does, however, have a nice sound to it, especially for those of us who will be graduating in May.

The past four weeks, I shamelessly spent my money, worked over 90 hours and grew a beard that everyone finds repulsive.

Fortunately, I did follow my own prescription by sleeping as much as some dogs do. In fact, I called in sick one day and slept until some sort of fungus was growing in my nostrils.

If your winter break sounds like mine, then I think it's time to be good to yourself. You can't legally sleep late anymore, so you must find alternative ways.

For compact disc player owners, spend some money on yourself for a change. I highly recommend the latest releases by the Rolling Stones, Whitesnake, Tesla and Aerosmith. I know, I bought them all.

If you must this holiday season was "do it to the excess," then I advise taking a good look in the mirror. It leaves come to your eyes, then you're with me.

A good way to lose that extra flab is to join Chicago Health Club, and join now! Cher says you can still get 1989 rates and you don't have to pay a cent for 30 days.

The cold weather on Harper's campus can be violent at times. It brings out the creativity in me, especially in getting from Building I in Building A.

Planning the warmest route from I to A is a sure way to shape up, because the warmest route isn't always the shortest. If you choose the path with the most flight of stairs, then you're bound to shrink those love handles given enough time. If all else fails, you could make an obscene course out of the goose droppings.

On a more serious note, welcome back to a fresh semester. May you get out what you put into it.

Just promise me one thing - when your instructor assigns a research paper, don't say you'll start it early. You know damn well you won't.

DO IT.

Where are you going to eat today?

Walter Koops Harbinger Food Critic

What's the person to do?

The Harper cafeteria costs too much to eat at, 7-11's Big Bite hot dog isn't enough to fill your stomach, and home is too far away.

Where are you going to eat today?

There are many restaurants and fast food places in the Harper vicinity that have proven to be cost effective as well as providing a well balanced meal. It is true that it is easier to eat at Harper, but for some, it is too expensive for too little. People need an alternative.

The following list is an alternative list to the Harper cafeteria for those who need a little more than just the bare minimum:

10. White Castle

Maybe it just me, but I'm a sucker for sliders. White Castle provides taste quality at a very affordable price. If you don't feel like hamburgers, get chicken. It's all here.

Average meal price: $2.50

09. Denny's

A popular teenage hangout, yes, but no one can deny that Denny's does give a wide variety of foods to choose from. From salads to steaks all prepared foods appeal to the eye and taste great.

Average meal price: $5.00

08. Arby's

Fast food with taste and lots of it. I don't really think it is the beef from Arby's that tastes so good, I think it's the Arby's roast beef sauce. But wait... there's more than just plain old roast beef sandwiches. There's ribs, chicken, french dips, and more.

Average meal price: $3.50

07. Taco Bell

For a fast and very addictive lunch, make a run for the border. The taco's are excellent, the burrito's are fantastic, and the nacho's are the best around.

Average meal price: $2.50

06. Wendy's

It's true the hamburgers are good, but what makes Wendy's great is the salad bar.

Everything you want from pasta to actually salad is available.

Average meal price: $2.00

05. A&W

Mike a trip to Woodfield and get some root beer. While your at, have a good meal and try the best curly fries around.

Average meal price: $3.50

04. Swenson's

You may not know it, but there's more than just ice cream at this little cozy cafe. Pleasant service along with a variety of delicious food choices make Swenson's one of the best restaurants around.

Average meal price: $4.00

03. Palmers

Hidden in a shopping center next to McDonald's on Algonquin, Palmers plays up the cute little coffee shop routine with style. Definitely a "must" restaurant.

Average meal price: $5.00

02. Vie De France

Found in the midst of Yappie Heaven (the mall), Vie De France tries to bring France to America. Vie De France succeeds.

Harbinger Food Critic Walter Koops walks into the Harbinger office with many samples of Harper cafeteria alternatives. Vie De France, Arby's, and A&W are among the top choices of Koops.

it bringing good food in hungry mouths. Try the croissants, the experience is short, but sweet.

Average meal price: $5.00

01. Lucky's Diner

When it comes to appetizers, drinks, and just plain old good food, St. Louis style Lucky's diner tops the cake. Lucky's appetizers are so large they could be meals, and there is a wide range of food from tacos to hot dogs to even omelets. The best alternative for the Harper cafeteria. Leave room for a doggy bag in your car; you get more than your money can buy at Lucky's.

Average meal price: $7.00

Born on the Forth fares well against competition

By Joe Stachler
Staff Writer

"We did not fight the enemy, we fought ourselves. And the enemy was in us." This was basically the perception that Oliver Stone made while an infantry man in the Vietnam War and recited by Charlie Sheen at the end of the film Platoon. That film marked a significant change in the film industry by boldly depicting a confusing atmosphere that U.S. Marines had to try and make sense out of while trying to liberate that country from Communism.

Since then there have been dozens of Vietnam War films. None of them have substituted to the "John Wayne" iron sides interpretation of what is basically the only war that we have lost. Instead, most of the films have been based on actual accounts of what really happened over there, without trying to glorify or cover up any of the mistakes. Each one seemed to show that it was a doomed endeavor from the start. Born on the Forth of July is the best of them.

Born on the Forth of July is the story of Ron Kovic (Tom Cruise), a Vietnam Veteran who was severely injured and became paralyzed from the chest down. He started out in life as the All-American boy in a small town who was good looking, athletic, and tried to be a good Catholic. Throughout the film his attitude on war was to fight when your country calls you, and defend the red, white and blue.

When war breaks out in Vietnam as he is close to High School graduation, he has few reservations about doing his share as a citizen and joins the Marine Corps for action on the front line. Once there, the reality of war hit Sgt. Kovic head-on. Confusion and pain befell him and his fellow soldiers.

After getting wounded, he winds up at a run down and makeshift veterans hospital. He finds little of the respect that he expected by being a returning soldier from Vietnam. Kovic's attitude changes about the war and soon he speaks against the government that he once loved and was willing to die for. His perception of the United States is to "love it or leave it. I love it," said Kovic. "But the government is a corrupt bunch of thieves." Kovic soon becomes an important respected figure among demonstrators and four years later he addresses the 1976 Democratic National Convention.

Tom Cruise successfully exudes the pain and erratic energy that Kovic felt during his early trials, looking for answers. A great performance. Ron Kovic himself was so satisfied that he awarded Cruise his own Bronze Star.

Born on the Forth of July needs to be seen. People should not see it because it is the latest Tom Cruise flick, or think that it is another traditional war film, but to learn about the experience of a man whose tragedy turned into a blessing of enlightenment. Ron Kovic never wanted sympathy, he wanted understanding.

This film is brutally realistic, and probably even toned-down from that. To expect anything less from Oliver Stone would be an insult to him and all Vietnam Veterans.

To all those that are returning, welcome back. To those who are here for the first time, good luck! For those that don't know me (most of the people I know don't even know themselves) I wrote a letter to the editor last year and the editor-in-chief liked it so much she decided she wanted me to write for the paper (foolish girl). She is even letting me do a column (foolish, foolish girl).

She wanted to know if I would be doing this column on the important issues of the day like the invasion of Panama, the fall of the Iron Curtain, etc. or if I would be doing it on really important things like why do girls like guys that treat them badly (and vice versa) or why is the number of red lights you hit on the way to school directly proportional to how late you are or why do times get longer when you are in a hurry? Who knows? Who cares? (Is anybody out there?)

As you can tell, I may not know what direction I'm going in all the time (or even much of the time) but that's okay, it means that I can keep pace with the high level decisions that are made around here. Speaking of which, if you know of anything going on around campus that seems a little strange, drop me a line here at the Harbinger. Don't expect any kind of super major result. (Hey, this ain't the Trb) but we'll see what we can do. If a guy used we'll at least have some fun with it.

What will be here next week? Only time will tell what may come from my dirty little mind but I will try to make it as amusing and/or thought provoking as possible (with as few big words as possible). So long for now and maybe you will hear from me later (if I don't get censured too much).

Letters to the editor

"Communist" cloud

Although I read with great interest Mr. Larry F. Kent's attempt to justify the rights of smokers, I also found his letter to be insulting and demeaning to those individuals who for decades have suffered from the loss of personal freedom in their own countries because of the Communist's control over its government. By comparing the mere abandonment of cigarette smoking in public places to the lifelong struggle to survive in a country that does not provide adequate jobs, housing, food or clothing for its population seems to minimize, at best, the actual daily horrors experienced by these people. Come on, Mr. Kent, even you must admit that your point is stretched more than just a bit.

I felt too that the terms you cite such as hidden agenda, unfair surveys, one-sided research, and power seeking are smokers should be explained further because they are extremely vague phrases. One can only assume the reason research is one-sided is because only those who have died or developed a chronic disease because of their smoking habit have been able to prove the findings of researchers. And, for your conclusion that non-smokers are simply power seekers, open your eyes, Mr. Kent, and notice the power that Harper smokers already possess—the power to burn down our school! And, in case you are wondering how I reached this conclusion, please be aware that many times I have seen Harper smokers simply drop their lit cigarettes on the floors and stairwells of our buildings. It seems to me that since smokers are dangerously abusing a privilege, they should lose this privilege!

So, in conclusion, Mr. Kent, call us non-smokers parents, call us power-seekers, in fact call us anything you wish, just please take your cigarettes to the least ventilated area Harper has to offer—its outdoors!

Harbinger has Satanism?

I am thoroughly upset about your article in the October 26 issue titled "An Interview with Satan." Whether it was written as a joke or not, it was in bad taste. The Harbinger, I thought, prided itself on respectable journalism. You generally provide good coverage on news in the Harper Community and other subjects. Why then did you put in an article interviewing Satan? What was your purpose in publishing this article? It certainly was not to inform, and it certainly does not entertain. So many people are easily influenced and might take something you say on the interview seriously. A lot of people today worship Satan, and by publishing this article you are making worshipping Satan seem alright. You are giving him publicity which he does not need. He wants publicity just as criminals do. Devil worship is not constructive. This article was written for one reason. It was meant to catch the Harper students' eyes. You know that most students just from the title would read the article over any other one. You probably were right. More students probably read this article than any other one. You should not have to attract readers by addressing garbage like this. A respectable paper like the Harbinger should report the news. People can find articles of this nature in supermarket tabloids. So the next time you think about putting in an article about Satan or another article of a similar type, think again. Do you further want to tarnish the Harbinger's reputation?

Women's Basketball shoots for the win

By Lou Nemes
Guest Writer

Could this finally be the year?
Could this be the year that the Ladyhawks finally give 12-year head coach Tom Peschner his first NAC Conference crown?
It would be nice, the coach said.

Stephanie Garcia goes for the win

What could make it happen if the current 10-game win streak and 12-4 overall record (3-0 in the NAC) that the team sports going into a non-conference matchup at Kankakee on Thursday night? Kankakee has won 45 of their last 46 games dating back to last season, then they won their first 10 games prior to a loss to Moraine Valley in the Region IV title game last March.

I've been at the other end before, Peschner said. I just hope we can keep clicking. After a 67-59 loss to Sauk Valley on December 9, the Ladyhawks started their winning ways with a 57-42 beating of Truman and a 61-53 win over Waukegan.

Then they pulled off a pair of big wins to capture the Blackhawk East Christmas Tournament Championship by reversing the loss to Sauk Valley 71-60. By beating Illinois Valley 52-51, the Ladyhawks claimed the title.

Guards Amy Kozol and

Stephanie Garcia, along with Center Patty Canchola, were named to the All-Tournament Team, this was highlighted by Garcia being named Most Valuable Player.

Continuing their winning streak, the Ladyhawks picked up another pair of away wins by beating Highland 62-42 and pulling out a 49-45 overtime win at Lake County.

Next, they opened up conference play with a 65-51 win at home against the Illinois Valley team they beat at the tournament championship, a 70-29 whipping of Joliet where they cruised to a 41-3 lead in the first half and, overcome a ten point deficit midway through the second half to down Rock Valley 72-63 as they went on a 22-3 tear to close out the game.

If I could do this to Moraine Valley and Kankakee, just imagine how real good we'd be, Peschner joked.

After the Kankakee game, the Ladyhawks will travel to DuPage on Saturday evening at 5 pm.

Guard Amy Kozol lends off members of Rock Valley's team in Tuesday's game. Watch for game results in next week's Harbinger.

Men's team fares well

By Lou Nemes
Guest Writer

It's gone well so far, but there's still a long way to go.

That is how first-year Men's Basketball Coach Paul Kastner sums up his team's performance through the first 18 games of the 1989-90 season.

I'm pleased, up to this point, with some of the things that we're doing, but there are a few things we need to work on, commented Kastner. Overall, I am pleased.

Kastner acknowledges the fact that the NAC is perhaps the toughest league in the state.

I think we realize that in order to do well we have to play well game in and game out, Kastner said. I think we also recognize that once the conference season starts, you have to start over from scratch and work toward a successful season then.

Among the players leading the Hawks this season is George Dilles. A 6'3" freshman forward from St. Vukar High School, Dilles has scored double figures in each of the last nine games. Included in this was a school record 49 points against Truman on December 12 that gave the Hawks a 103-96 double-overtime victory.

It also gave Dilles Region IV Division II player of the week honors.

In addition, he was named to the All-Tournament Team at the 22nd Annual Highland Christmas Tournament in Freeport. Dilles posted a 30 point performance in a 72-70 win over host Highland and a 35 point effort in an 82-70 victory over Sauk Valley to give the Hawks a third-place finish in the tournament.

I think George has done an outstanding job offensively. I also think that he realizes that without someone to give him the ball, like Jason Brooks or Paul Combs, he wouldn't be able to score as much as he has, Kastner said. He also knows that he needs to improve on the defensive end, which he is working hard at. Kastner also points out that other people have contributed to the team's success.

I think the play of our guards has been super right in and right out and our forwards have done an outstanding job so far, Kastner added.

Looking ahead to the remainder of the regular season, the coach said he feels that it's simply a matter of intensity.

We need to have consistent level of play every night, Kastner said. I believe that in addition to our intensity on the road, we've got to improve our level at home. If we can, we would be able to get the effort that we need to be a consistent successful team.

Next, the Hawks (12-4 overall and 3-1 in NAC) will host Rock Valley on Tuesday night and travel to fifth ranked College of DuPage, Saturday night.

Bonds sold for expansion

By Tom Pessier
News Editor

The Board of Trustees approved the sale of revenue bonds to generate $3 million for Harper to build a $16.5 million expansion to the campus.

The expansion of Harper College will include the renovation of Building F to allow for additional library space and the construction of three buildings. The proposed buildings will accommodate a maintenance storage facility, a larger bookstore and a Performing Arts Facility which will contain a 400 seat theatre, 20 classrooms and some offices. Construction for the project is hoped to begin in March 1991.

Additional funding for the project includes $6 million generated by sale of a 120 acre parcel in Arlington Heights in 1986 that was once considered for a second campus and $5 million in construction credit from the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE). Additional funding is still needed and awaiting approval from the State. The project has a low ranking on IBHE's priority list and it is unlikely to receive funding this year, according to President Paul Thompson.

A referendum passed by the community in 1975 allowed for the sale of revenue bonds for the construction of a second campus and the expansion of the main campus. However, because of lower enrollment, the second campus was not necessary and the board has decided to focus on the expansion of the main campus.

Student loses to FBI

(CPS) A State University of New York - Plattsburgh student has lost an appeal to get a look at the Federal Bureau of Investigation's (FBI) file about him.

The Third Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals in Philadelphia ruled Jan. 8 that the FBI did not have to let student Todd Patterson, 18, see his own file, started because Patterson had written the FBI six years ago seeking information about the Soviet Union for a junior high school class project.

The court said the file's contents were covered by "state secrets privilege" and thus could not be obtained through the Freedom of Information Act.

"The FBI's position always was that they had the right to investigate him and the right to maintain his file," explained Asst. U.S. Attorney Susan Cassell, who argued the case for the bureau.

Patterson might appeal the decision said his lawyer, Frank Adin, a Rutgers University law professor.

"Tentatively, I'd say yes, but the final decision hasn't been made," he said. "I would have thought that the FBI would have more to do with their time than follow a teenager around," mused Edward Martone of the New Jersey American Civil Liberties Union, which argued the case for Patterson.

Harbinger offers cash reward

There were no signs of forced entry. The door was locked on Friday afternoon. The computer was last seen Friday afternoon around 4:30 pm when Alisa Chisland, features editor, left for the day. Tari Vaughn, editor-in-chief, and Maria Jozwik, secretary, arrived early Monday morning and noticed the computer was missing. Jozwik called Public Safety and reported the theft.

The fact that it was stolen was upsetting enough, but realizing we have not paid for it yet was even more upsetting," stated Vaughn.

The computer, one of two purchased in December was the newest addition to the computer network at the Harbinger. Increased revenue made the purchase possible, it took four months to save the funds.

"We really needed the new terminal, it's a shame we will not be able to afford another one until next fall," stated Vaughn.

The Harbinger is offering a cash reward to anyone with information leading to the return of the computer.

The theft is still under investigation. If you have any information, please call Public Safety at extension 2330.

Spring graduates will face keen competition in job search

(UPI) — Spring graduates will face a tight, competitive job market, most observers agree.

"Things have been slower this year," observed Peg Hultum, career placement director at Jacksonville University in Florida. "We have noticed a decided decline in hiring in the (October through December) quarter."

So have students. "It's kind of disappointing," said Mike Farrand, a St. Cloud (Minn.) State University senior who will graduate in March with a marketing degree. "There's not a whole lot out there."

In contrast to the tough job hunting season, when students at some schools reported fielding multiple offers, is a major annual survey of graduate job prospects in this year's recent much more sober pictures.

Michigan State University, which asked 250 key corporations and employers about their nationwide college grad hiring plans, found the companies foresee making 13.3 percent fewer job offers to students this year.

It's "a decidedly mixed outlook," agreed Victor Lindquist, author of Northwestern University's Lindquist Endnot Report, the other major annual measure of student job prospects.

Michigan State survey director Patrick Sheetz said companies cited a gloomy view of business conditions in 1990, mergers and buyouts, increased global competition and slow turnover of current employees as the reasons they have had to cut back their hiring plans since 1988-89.

"It's going to be a big game of musical chairs, and somebody is surely going to lose out," said Sheetz.

Of the six regions Sheetz surveyed, the best place to look for jobs will be in the Southwest. Next best is the Northeast, followed by the Southeast, North Central, South Central and Northwest states.

Employers said they'd offer 1989-90 bachelor's degree graduates average starting salaries of $25,256, a 3.3 percent jump from last year's average, Michigan State's study found.

For MBA grads, the average expected salary is $39,840, a 3.1 percent increase. Companies also promised $33,740 for master's degrees, up 3.3 percent, and $37,111 for doctoral degree graduates.

The relatively small salary rises and limp job opportunities seem to stem from an attitude change from 88-89 when employers "worried there wouldn't be enough grads to hire in the future, scrambled to get the best prospects."

This year, many of the biggest firms are cutting back.

For example, IBM, always one of the most active recruiters of new grads on Dec. 5, announced it would reduce its 1990 work force by 11,000 employees and "severely limit" hiring in 1991, said spokeswoman Collette Abbott. "We will maintain a presence on campus, but we really are limiting hiring."

"It's a decline in business, becomes pronounced and widespread, there will be an immediate and sudden drop in job opportunities for college graduates," Lindquist warned.

Recruiters visiting campuses, moreover, are being more selective than in the past. "We've had a lot of contacts by employers, but hiring is a different story," reported Jacksonville's Hultum.

"You have to have the right degree and the right experience or they won't hire you," said Cindy Goebel, a fall graduate of St. Cloud State who majored in applied sociology. "There's just so much competition out there. They can pick anyone they want."

"There's a tremendous amount of competition," concurred Jacksonville senior David Fleisher, adding that a recruiter often interviews 10 candidates in 30 minutes.

At Purdue University in Indiana, where about 27,000 on-campus interviews were conducted last year, the number of bookings are running at about the same pace as last year, said career services director Richard Stewart.

Stewart, though, is guarded about predicting a banner year. "I'm a little cautious that the market might

Students line up at Purdue University's placement office for a job interview. The same number of interviews, but fewer job offers.

be softening."

"I don't see some of the big players like IBM being as aggressive, but it's hard to tell what effect that has," he said.

At San Diego State University, recruitment has been just as so, reported Judith Gumbiner, director of career services. "The fall wasn't as active as others have been, but the spring should be more active."

Jacksonville's Fleisher, who's been on the job trail since October, worried about finding a job per se, but isn't worried about finding a job he wants.

Fashion design student represents USA in Paris

By Alissa Chisholm
Features Editor

Paris, the fashion capital of the world. Home of haute couture where designers showcase their styles, ensembles. Graceful models stroll down the runway in seductive, elegant or classic outfits adorned with accessories galore.

Watching an international fashion show is a fantasy, unveiling your designed garment to an audience in a dream come true.

Last November, a dream became reality as Harper College fashion design student Rachel McAlpin, of Park Ridge, won a chance to represent the United States in Paris during a New York competition.

design schools -- including the Chicago Art Institute and the International Academy of Merchandising and Design -- for one of ten Paris trips.

Her victory was a milestone for Harper's 20-year-old fashion design department said Sandra Clark, coordinator of fashion design and merchandising. "We competed last year, but this is the first time we have a designer representing the United States in the international competition."

Clark believes Harper has a strong, high quality design program with excellent instruction for talented fashion design and merchandising students. "Our major problem is that we are lo-

The Concours International Des Jeunes Createurs De Mode (Paris competition), on December 19, sponsored by Glamour Magazine and Air France gave McAlpin a chance to compete against 160 student designers from 19 countries including France, Finland, Japan, Italy and the USSR.

Her task was to design a fashionable and elegant day time outfit for spring or summer to be worn by a young lady during the Art De Triomphe Grand Prix at the Louvre Museum in Paris, a graduation ceremony at a well known university, or the opening of a new fashion museum in a large city on a sunny summer afternoon.

McAlpin describes the design she submitted for the Paris competition as "wearable art. I like to use my imagination and create. I want people to take a second look."

-Sandra Clark

"I didn't expect to win anything," said McAlpin. "I was so happy to be in New York and in the competition. I was very excited when I won. Then, I lost it. I was numb from head to toe."

McAlpin competed against 53 students from 27 of the nation's top fashion schools in northwest suburban Chicago," said Clark. "People don't believe we can be a viable fashion school."

(By winning a variety of awards in numerous competitions) we have already gained a superior reputation as an excellent fashion design school," said Clark.

Her dress symbolizes a fish. "I like fish," said McAlpin. "I tried to incorporate scales and finches into the design." The garment is made out of ultra-soft half circle applied by hand to provide scale effect. Wire and brass are used to add shape. The back is open and covered with chiffon.

McAlpin was not alone for the Paris trip. Sixty Harper College fashion design students, faculty and friends traveled overseas to attend the international competition.

The program began on December 18 with a side-trip highlighting past fashion trends and future possibilities.

The evening's price de resistance was a Sonia Rykiel fashion show, "Sonia Rykiel is the Grand Dame of Paris fashion," said Clark. "Her collection was imaginative and very classic. She highlighted the splendour of black and gold, and a lot of neutral colors. Her designs were highly sophisticated. It was a quality presentation."

Students also had the opportunity to visit the American Academy of Fashion Design in Paris. Guests were treated to the evolution of mid 19th and early 20th century garments via a lecture and historical fashion show.

The international competition gave McAlpin a chance to show her design, and Harper students an opportunity to attend a presentation with an extensive display of world-wide student fashions. The commentary was simultaneous in English, Spanish and Japanese.

"The designs in the international competition were innovative, sculptural, unusual, highly creative and avant-garde," said Clark. "The garments were very sculptural," said Clark. "They were three-dimensional, not flat garments."

Although Japan won the top honors in the competition, Harper was victorious in its own way. "Our students have learned from design and merchandising presentations in the national and international level," said Clark. "This edge will help us in future competitions."

"This trip was a wonderful exposure to many different avenues of the world of fashion," said Clark. "It was a chance to meet students, see fashion illustrations, visit museums, boutiques and the Paris flea market."

Health Corner

Winter often brings health problems such as colds, flu and other respiratory infections including cold air directly into the warm bronchi of the lungs causes spasms which result in shortness of breath and coughing.

Frequently people especially those with chronic respiratory conditions, breathe through their mouth, thus preventing warming and humidification of air which normally takes place in the nose. To minimize this added burden to the heart and lungs, cover your mouth and nose with a scarf or use an air warming mask while outdoors.

Allow yourself time to walk slowly. Try to stay out of the wind. Always dress for the weather. Wear warm bulky clothing in layers. Keep your ears and head covered and be sure to provide protection for your hands and feet.

The optimum indoor room temperature should be 68-72 degrees. Dry heat will cause drying of the mucous membranes of the nose, mouth and throat. Therefore, every home needs added moisture in winter. The optimal indoor humidity is 40% and can be achieved by using a humidifier.

With all these precautions, including eating properly and getting adequate rest, you may still catch a cold or flu.

Mark's Menagerie

Mark James
Staff Writer

Well, here I am back again for a second week (they actually liked my first article, these people are so easy to please). I want to start off by actually mentioning a name (Oh my God, get the lawyers ready Ed, I'm, don't worry, I'll be nice Mark).

I'd like to welcome back Mr. Owens. For those of you who didn't know, Mr. Owens had to take a leave of absence for the last part of last semester. You will find that of the people who have taken his class, either they like him or they don't. With Mr. Owens there it is no gray area. If you really want to learn about English and how to properly use it, even if you are like me and choose most of the time not to use that information as well as how to really tear apart a story and get to the heart of the matter through things like symbols and such, take his English 101 or 102 class. Even if the only thing you do is show up for class and by no means a freak of nature you are able to avoid his scrutiny when he picks on students, you will still, by omission, learn something (Anything? Anyone? Bueller?).

I was one of the strange ones who took his class and liked it (I like weird things) and because of what I learned in his class I was able to make my Lit class a nightmare for the teacher by tearing apart stories further than he wanted them torn apart (heh heh heh, I get a kick out of tormenting teachers). But, beware those of you who want to take his class just so you can torment Lit teachers, if you deserve a C in his class you will not get a B. He calls out an "C" and you get what you earned.

While I'm on the subject of learning, why is it that the only students (okay, only about 10% of the students) that go to the tutoring center are consistent busses are those who get A's or B's? I'm not talking about the student tutors, they have to have had an A in the subject they are tutoring. I'm talking about the students who go there to receive help. I saw one student last semester raise his average from an 80 to a 93 in Trig just by going to the tutoring center. I don't know how he did on the final, so I don't know his final grade, but a 13 point pickup isn't bad at all. If you need help with a subject, go (especially if you're a cute girl that needs help with History or Math). Your transcripts don't show if you received your grade on your own or with the help of tutoring. But with tutoring it might raise your GPA. You would be crazy not to go if you need help.

Speaking of crazy, it reminds me of a substitute I had one time. This guy had a class about a month and did things like make fun of people's names, never be available for help, ignore the primary instructor's directions, things like that. He was asked once what "such and such" meant and his response was that he didn't know, but he would put that question on the final so he could read our responses and figure it out the day, too.

His final was a joke. Strip percent of it was a word search type of game. I almost asked him if it a crossword puzzle was the rest of the final. If he had been afraid of being expelled, I would have asked him if the subject he had to teach was Greek. He didn't seem to have a very solid grasp of the subject he was trying to teach if he sometimes wondered about his grasp on reality. On well, enough about things past. I'm sure nothing like that would ever happen here at Harby.

Well, time for me to look up to my cap again if wish they would clean it out once in awhile, the stench from the monkey's is driving me insane. Remember, don't dumb—don't be caught drinking and driving.

Ecological action needed
'An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure'

During the last few years, Harper's campus has seen a lot of talk about environmental issues.

Unfortunately, it's seen little action. Last semester, Student Trustee Darlene Iverson headed up the push for an aluminum recycling program. When the aluminum can collection receptacles arrived, they were large, clearly marked blue and white boxes. Since then, the big boxes have been replaced by discreet, brown garbage cans marked "Aluminum cans only" (Keep an eye out for them, they're pretty evenly distributed around campus).

The establishment of a can recycling program was Harper's first step at ecological awareness, and we support the effort. The Harbinger also recycles all leftover newspapers and uses a large portion of recycled paper. However, we feel that much more can be done in the fight to save the earth.

In a school of about 25,000 students, plus teachers, administrators, staff, etc., a lot of paperwork is shuffled around daily. Any paper without color in it is recyclable. So, let's recycle. It would not be difficult to place bins around campus to collect paper. If the collection was convenient, Harper's population would pitch in.

In fact, an on-going paper drive would be an excellent way for a club or organization to pick up some much-needed funds. One of the most dangerous substances for the environment is styrofoam. The production of styrofoam uses fluorocarbons, which destroy the earth's ozone layer. Also, styrofoam is not biodegradable or recyclable.

However, Harper's cafeteria is still using styrofoam plates, cups, bowls, and to-go containers. This styrofoam could be easily replaced by paper products, and should be. Paper is just as effective, comparably priced, biodegradable, recyclable, and not as dangerous to manufacture.

Also, by using recycled paper products, Harper would help create a market for recycled paper. The market is currently experiencing a glut due to the overwhelming number of people recycling.

Modern society has done a lot of damage due to the earth. We must begin to repair the damage, or we will find our entire race homeless. Ecological awareness has to start at home. As an educational institution we should be teaching preservation. Only through education and awareness can our generation survive long enough to use what we learn in our classes.

Amnesty International lends hope to political prisoners

People all over the world are being imprisoned and tortured for their race, religion, or sex. This is a fact that has been proven by the exhaustive research of a world-wide organization named Amnesty International.

Amnesty International is trying to make a difference in these and other human rights violations by bringing people together on a grass roots basis.

The members are informed by the International Secretariat in London. They are given information that has been painstakingly gathered by the organization's internationally respected research staff.

The members then write letters to the appropriate government officials of offending countries to obtain information regarding the prisoner or to have him released, depending on the circumstances of the case.

This method tells the governments that other people know what they are doing, and often results in the release of prisoners. It has been very effective for the 24 years of Amnesty's existence, but there is a lot more work to be done.

Harper College provides a perfect setting for the continuation of this important work. It is a place of learning for thousands of students, and the fact that it is a community college allows for students and community involvement.

I am currently working to start an Amnesty International campus group at Harper. I need people who are interested to contact me, Michael Schweisheimer.

It does not take a large commitment to become a part of Amnesty, just a little time and a lot of hope. Remember, "It is better to light one candle than to curse the darkness."

Michael Schweisheimer

'Interview With Satan' response an overreaction

In response to David Spada's letter in the January 18 Harbinger regarding an Interview With Satan, I think I speak for many when I say that you are overreacting quite a bit. Of course the article was written as a satire—perhaps there should have been a header stating that the Interview was a Harbinger Halloween tradition, having run for three years already. Also, Mr. Spada, you say that "It certainly was no informal satire; rarely satirical and it certainly does not entertain." Well, it entertained me, as it has done for three years, and probably many others who also don't take it as seriously as you have.

There's another point I feel I must raise: It's time you opened your mind to other people's viewpoints. I certainly don't consider myself a Satan worshiper, but I were, it's my preference, and I would take offense at the things you said. One man's good can be another man's evil. Your beliefs should be respected as much as any other person's, whether they worship God or Satan or nobody.

Finally, your argument that the Harbinger used this article to gain attention is pointless. The Harbinger is free, so why would they have any reason to improve their circulation by printing "sensationalistic" stories?

I feel one, hope to see an Interview With Satan reprinted again this October.

Top of the Hill Singles Review

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

I Go To Extremes, Billy Joel
How can Joel top the "Fire" song? However, a good attempt with a better-better beat.

You Surround Me, Erasure
After the release of the semi-popular dance track Drama, Erasure comes out with a different song You Surround Me, has that gothic-music sound blended together with a good drum machine. It sounds more or less like a love story. An original song.

Standing There, The Creatures
Siouxie Sioux and Budgie of the Creatures team up for the second time around at The Creatures, this time with a song that is a sequel (of sorts) to the Creatures' success Peck-A-Boo. It's a good laid-back song with lyrics that take mean-baiting to new heights.

Proud to Fall, Ian McCulloch
The first single from the former Echo and the Bunnymen lead singer is an exquisite pop creation. There's just the right amount of everything: guitar, drums (courtesy of Burns Williams of the Cure), and vocals. Coupled with a little background knowledge of the last few years of McCulloch's life, this song takes on profound meaning.

Getting Away With It... Electronic
Jesus! I Love You, Revenge
Two members of New Order have just released side projects singles. The first is Bernard Sumner, New Order's vocalist, whose side project is called Electronic, which also features guitarist Johnny Marr (Smash, The The) and Neil Tennant of the Pet Shop Boys. The song is catchy and easily liked. Slightly inferior to Electronic is Jesus! I Love You by Revenge, which is the name of Peter Hook's side project. The song is good but has too much of the feel of a sub-par New Order B-side.

Burning Inside, Ministry
Oh what a creation this song is, especially if you like violent, fast, and noisy music. Taking another giant leap away from the original near-disco Ministry sound, At Journeyman and Paul Barker edge ever closer to thrash metal. Contains such lyrical gems as "I really couldn't be bothered with you, get out of my face and watch me die."

Tin Omen, Skinny Puppy
With the participation of Ministry's Al Jourgensen on the latest release from Skinny Puppy, the AI Influence pushes its way into Tin Omen, particularly near the end of the song when the drums completely overwhelm the rest of the music.

Hallucination Generation, The Gruesome Twosome
Quite a good dance track from a new Network artist. Nothing particularly exciting, but it's better than a lot of others.

Shame, Nitzer Ebb
The LP version of Shame was good enough, yet Nitzer Ebb felt it was necessary to re-record it for a new 12" and 7" version. The re-recording is very much inferior to the original. This in mind, it's worth seeking out the German import 12" which is remixed from the original and not the new version. As long as they were re-recording it, they should have made it a little faster too.

Glory will be remembered

Mike Schweisheimer
Staff Writer

Sometimes, history is the source of the greatest drama. In Glory, a film directed by Edward Zwick, history has been made into a moving motion picture.

Glory tells the story of the 54th regiment of the Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry as seen under the command of a 25-year-old Bostonian, Colonel Robert Gould Shaw. The 54th was the first all-black regiment created by the North to fight the Civil War.

The film centers around the young Shaw, played by Matthew Broderick. Beginning with his horrifying experience at Antietam until he accepts the invitation to lead the first all-black regiment. The film then follows him through the training period and finally leads them into battle in the attack on Fort Wagner.

Broderick's performance was good, but he did not seem quite right for the part. He conveyed what Shaw's character was supposed to be adequately, but it was obvious that his own personality and past roles clouded what could have been done.

The incredible performance of the supporting actors are what gave the film its true power. Denzel Washington's portrayal of Trip, a runaway slave, electrifies the screen with hate that was driven into his character by white men.

Morgan Freeman, known for his work with the Elmore Company (the Coast), played a grave digger who volunteered to fight with the 54th. His role largely strengthened the spirit of black pride black soldiers had during the Civil War.

As a whole, the film was very entertaining. The story was taken directly from history and strengthened by the in-depth look at some men of the regiment. The only problem I had was that every conflict was resolved in a way that made everything all right. It came off as being too good to be true.

The way in which was put together by Zwick was in an epic style. The images were stark and memorable, with colorful patriotic lighting and the painful reality of war and death. History was definitely portrayed accurately.

Glory is worth seeing for its entertainment and historical attributes. It shows the racial hatred that has held man back for centuries, and the pride and determination that has motivated them to fight against that oppression into modern times. Not a flawless work of motion picture art, but one that will be remembered for the story it tells.

Educational planning flow chart

* Develop an educational plan through discussion with a counselor.

* Narrow your choice of four-year school as soon as possible. Transfer information materials, workshops on transferring, and visits by college representatives may help you in this process.

* Obtain a catalog from the school(s) that you are considering and become familiar with their General Education and your major area requirements.

* Approximately one year before you plan to transfer, contact the school(s) of your choice requesting application for admission, financial aid and information on housing. Note any deadlines for return of applications, fees or transcripts.

* If possible, visit the school(s) that interest you the most and talk with the admissions staff and/or the advisor(s) in the department of your planned major.

* Submit all the necessary applications to the four-year colleges/universities of your choice and request that the Harper College Registrar's Office, A-213, send transcripts to them.

* File a petition for graduation from Harper College in the Registrar's Office no later than midterm of the semester you plan to graduate.

* Have a final transcript sent to the school(s) to which you are applying.

Mussolini Headkick Themes for Violent Rebirth
 The cover depicts a man hanging from a swastika... and if that's not enough to wake you up a bit, then you probably won't wake up at all. The band, vehemently anti-fascist, features Luc Van Acker of the Revolving Cocks. The music, apart from mildly intriguing songs like Europe, is mostly just there.

★★

The Neon Judgement Blood & Thunder
 The latest offering from the Neon Judgement is nothing significantly above or below average. Once you get past the attractive Wim Wenders photograph on the cover you get to hear decent tracks like 1113 among the less interesting ones.

The Young Gods L'Eau Rouge (Red Water)
 The Young Gods first domestic LP release is a thrilling and pavlovian display of musical pyrotechnics. With vocals in their native Belgian French, give the music, that carries the album (lyrics are provided in both French and English). The record begins and ends with two marvelous tracks, Le Fil de la Mer and L'Enfant. In between are six others ranging from the powerful Rue Des Temples to the light-hearted Charlotte. A fascinating album.

Pankow Gisela
 Pankow's Gisela is an album of infinite variety from humor to sincerity from industrial to beer-drinking songs. The production and mixing are particular standouts. The remake of the Normals

Controlled Bleeding

T.G.T.

Warm Leatherette is, in a word, terrific. Definitely worth a listen.

 The follow-up to last year's Machine Gun, Revo by The Genetic Terrorists (identities unknown) is an eminently listenable single. There's nothing worth placing here.

★

Controlled Bleeding The Fodder Song
 Fit an extreme contrast to the T.G.T. 12-inch single, this three-track 12-inch is magnificent. This is the first foray into industrial dance music from Controlled Bleeding that really hits the nail on the head. An absolute must for industrial fans.

Erasure Wild
 Erasure's sixth album and without a doubt is their best musically. Taking their music a little more serious this all-keyboard band steers away from all dance tracks and gets a little more pop. This is a pretty wild album.

Tora Tora Surprise Attack

This Memphis based band has used their 70's influence well to put together a great hard-rock blues album that is devoid of the usual posing, stereotypes and the rip-off factors that are prevalent throughout the music environment today.

Tora Tora's debut album, Surprise Attack is a vibrant, energetic hard rock album like 24 Days, Love's a Rush, and Walking Shoes all have great guitar hooks that catch your attention and keep it there.

Even ballads like Phantom Rider and Bring There are done without the usual hit making formula (ala Warrant) and are pretty much straight forward.

Overall, Surprise Attack is a great example of a young band fresh from the club circuit interpreting bluesy hard rock in their own way, without choosing to rip anyone off. Not that Tora Tora is all that original but, if you like rock 'n' roll without the usual posing, Surprise Attack will satisfy.

Rush Presto

The Canadian power trio Rush has long been known as the kings of progressive-influenced hard rock since their debut in 1974. With their newest effort, Presto, they have slightly returned to their more basic roots.

Although Presto tries to recapture the balance of synthesizers and guitar that had made Rush so famous in the past, Presto falls short of being a classic like Moving Pictures was in 1981, and ends up more on the mediocre side. The problem lies not with the song writing but with the arrangement of the synthesizers into the songs. Its done well on tunes like Show Don't Tell, Superconductor, Red Tide, and Presto. But songs like Warpaint, with its theme of teenage love, leave you wondering when the album is over or hopefully it could end sooner.

But in defense of this album I must say it is their finest effort since the Signatures album of 1983. Even though the boring drone of synth-soars through the mixes in most of Presto, guitarist Alex Lifeson has more of a contribution on this album giving him the opportunity to be in the spotlight again. Overall it is with great hope I look forward to the next Rush album cause it is obvious Rush is returning (be it rather slowly) to the energetic complex sound they had on classic albums like 2112 and Moving Pictures.

Stafford loan fee reduced 5%

Recent legislation has re-established the 5% origination fee, down from the 5.5% fee that had been in effect from October 1 to December 31, 1989 for Stafford Loans. An origination fee helps offset the costs of the program and is deducted from the loan proceeds.

Stafford Loans made since January 1, 1989 will have a 5% origination fee. Loans with the first disbursement prior to October 1, 1989 were never affected by the additional .5% fee. Students whose loans had first disbursements made between October 1 and December 31, 1989 will still have to pay the full 5.5% fee on all subsequent disbursements.

The change was part of the Budget Reconciliation bill signed by President Bush on December 19. The change to the 5.5% origination fee was initiated as part of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings balanced budget legislation. No additional changes are expected until October, when requirements may force an increase in the fee.

Womens' Basketball streak broken

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

The winning streak may be over, but the dream is still alive.

Lady Hawks Basketball coach, Tom Teschner, saw the team's 10 game winning streak come to an end last Thursday. The Harper women fell to host Kankakee 64-42 in a non-conference game.

The dream is a first ever NAAC Conference crown in which they rose their record to 4-0 (13-5 overall) by beating DuPage 43-34 Saturday evening, setting up a showdown with two-time defending NAAC and Region IV titlist Moray Valley Tuesday evening in Palos Hills.

"The important thing right now is the conference," Teschner said. "We have to make sure that we stay healthy. If we can, we have a shot at the conference title."

In the Kankakee loss, forward Carolyn Cowley played with tonsillitis and a back injury to guard Joanne Kiering hampered the Hawks' effort against a team that had won 43 of their 44 games with 21 straight at home. On top of that, the host Lady Cavaliers were ranked #9 in the country.

A 16-0 run early in the game gave Kankakee the lead 20-4 less than five minutes into the game. They went on to lead 38-19 at half time.

Sophomores Amy Kozel and Patty Canchola led the Lady Hawks with 14 points each.

"I wish that everyone had been healthy so we could have given them a good run at it," the coach said.

Teschner also felt that Canchola played the best game of her career. "She came on strong in the second half, it was a good effort."

In the DuPage game, the almost lost it as the Chippawals (3-12, 1-2) took a 34-43 lead with 5:30 left and Kozel took charge.

A three-pointer 16 seconds later gave Harper the lead for good at 36-34. A second three-pointer plus another field goal by Kozel put the game away as they out scored COD 10-0 the rest of the way. Kozel finished with 24 points.

"It just proves that we have to come ready to play each game," Teschner said.

After Tuesday's game, they return home to host South Suburban on Saturday afternoon at 1 p.m.

Men on road to success

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

The way Harper's Men's Basketball team has been playing lately, Head Coach Paul Kaitner may want to consult Cinderella about borrowing her glass slippers.

This, in part, is because of a pair of strong ball games the team played, despite splitting them last Tuesday. The Hawks ended visiting Rock Valley's 10 game win streak 76-70 at home and fell to DuPage 56-83 Saturday night after racing back from a 26 point deficit. The team now stands at 11-2 on the season and 2-2 in NAAC play going into a Tuesday night showdown at Moray Valley, ranked #2 in the nation.

"We feel that we can compete with anybody," said a proud assistant coach, Dean Sellner.

In the Rock Valley win, the team averaged the 84-61 loss to the Trojans (15-5-1) in the Sem final round of the Highland Christmas Classic on Dec. 21. A 17-2 run to open the second half erased a 39-28 half time deficit, giving the Hawks the lead for good. They were able to stretch that lead by 12 to 63-51 with just over eight minutes to go. They then held off a late Rock Valley surge.

Forward George Dilles led the way for Harper with 19 points while guard Jason Brooks added 16.

In the DuPage game, the Hawks played with the fifth placed Chippawals (5-3, 2-1) until a 10-0 run gave the hosts a 41-25 lead with two minutes remaining in the first half, they took a 45-31 lead into the locker room.

score Harper 6-3 the rest of the way.

Dilles again led the way with 15 points, followed by guard Paul Combe.

The Hawks will host South Suburban on Saturday afternoon at 3 p.m.

Wrestlers' work pays off

The Harper College Wrestling Team has been working hard throughout the season and over the semester break and the work has paid off with a consistent season of victories.

January 13 was the Harper Invite tournament, where the home team captured an impressive first place trophy. Just as impressive, every Harper wrestler placed in the tournament. 118 pound Walter Sandberg took first place, along with Jason Finucane (142 lbs.) and Eric Bakay (158 lbs.).

Second place finishers included Rob Malicki (134 lbs.) and Keith Denam (167 lbs.). Third place finishers included Paul Musgo (126 lbs.), Bill Cordis (150 lbs.) and Steve Kozick (Heavy Weight).

The team also placed 3rd at the tough Carthage Invite, the best the team has ever placed. Eric Bakay and Jason Finucane aggressively took first place finishes along with a second place finish by Walter Sandberg and third place finishes by Bill Cordis and Keith Denam.

Jason Finucane was nominated MVP of the Carthage tournament.

Eric Bakay was nominated MVP of the Harper Invite.

Harper wrestlers easily defeated Waubesa Valley and McHenry County at Sugar Grove, IL.

This week the team will be at the North Central Invite at Naperville.

As the season closes to an end, Head Coach Norm Lovelace and Assistant Coach Dan Loprieno are looking forward to an exciting finish at the regional meet, which will be hosted here at Harper February 10. Top finishers will proceed to Nationals at Bismarck, North Dakota, Feb. 19 and 20.

Bakas selected as trustee

Former Harper Vice President fills empty seat on Board

By Marc Balke
Staff Writer

Former Vice President of Academic Affairs, Peter R. Bakas was appointed to the Board of Trustees last Monday. Bakas, a resident of Arlington Heights is filling a vacant seat that has remained open on the Board for some time.

There were nine candidates applying for the position, but only Bakas had the experience Harper sought.

In a Daily Herald interview, Barbara Barton, board chairman stated, "Bakas was chosen for his financial knowledge and college administrative experience."

Bakas has worked in the education system for 18 years. He has been a Vice President at College of Lake County, business manager at Arlington Heights Elementary District 25 and with Illinois State University in Normal.

He applied for the Trustee opening because he wanted to stay involved in educational and community affairs.

Presently, Bakas is President of Associated Management Services, in Arlington Heights.

Bakas worked for Harper from 1981 to 1985. Replacing him was Vice President of Student Affairs, Dr. Bonnie Henry. Bakas will be replacing Trustee Michael Miller, who resigned last year when he accepted a job in another state.

Barton commented "We are very pleased there were some outstanding candidates, but his financial expertise and college experience made him stand out."

Clubs and Organizations Day planned

By Alisa Chisland
Assistant Managing Editor

Are you involved in campus activities? Would you like to be? Here's your opportunity. Clubs and Organizations Days are slowly approaching. This year, 12 of the 25 campus groups will set up tables, from 9 am to 2 pm on February 5 and 6, in the Building A lounge.

"This is a good way for new students to become aware of clubs and organizations," said Michael Neuman, coordinator of student activities.

"It was very effective in the past," said Neuman. "Last year, five to ten new names were added every day."

"Clubs and Organizations Days give students a chance to ask club members questions, and shop around in one easy place," said Neuman.

Students may contact student activities in A336, extension 2242, for more information about Harper's clubs and organizations.

BACCHUS Chapter started

By Marc Balke
Staff Writer

BACCHUS (Booze Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students), a national student organization with more than 300 affiliated chapters at institutions of higher education has a new chapter at Harper College.

The group's primary concern is with the health of their students, the institution and the community. They help all ages become more aware of the use and non-use of alcoholic beverages.

One the philosophers is to alleviate the abuse of alcohol on campus. Member Mary Hook said, "We promote sensible drinking, while enhancing an understanding of alcohol and its abuse."

Last Wednesday, BACCHUS held its first meeting on campus. Three members from Eastern Illinois University's chapter were present to kick-off the new chapter while helping students get acquainted with the organization.

"While keeping students informed we promote positive lifestyles and we also help develop decision-making skills," said Hook.

Students, faculty and administrators are welcome to join. Meetings will be held on Wednesdays from 1pm to 4pm in room A347.

For more information contact Tanya Salas at extension 2220.

Project

Together
Each Accomplishes
More

By Jamie Berzon
Staff Writer

How would you feel about tutoring a young child, possibly a future college student? If this idea turns you more, then Project TEAM (together each accomplishes more) is for you.

Project TEAM is a cooperative effort between Harper College and Willow Bend Elementary School, located off Algonquin Road across the street from the Arrium and Don-Moy restaurants.

The Willow Bend staff selects roughly 25 students from the fourth, fifth and sixth grades to pair with volunteer tutors from Harper College.

The tutors are composed of faculty, staff, administration, students and "Friends of Harper."

For a variety of reasons, some students may be "at risk" children and all of their experiences in school may not have been successful.

"One reason we are interested in Project TEAM is to show the children that college is a possibility," said Elaine Stoermer, director of college relations. "Some day, we'd like to see them at Harper."

To be a volunteer tutor, you must make a commitment to meet with your students at Willow Bend from 3 pm to 4 pm every Wednesday starting in January, have an interest in providing individual attention and homework assistance for an at-risk child, and be ready to have a gratifying experience working with true colleagues and marvelous children.

"I am really appreciative to the faculty who make this tutoring opportunity possible for the students," said Stoermer. "They were very helpful in recommending tutors for the program."

Contact Elaine Stoermer, director of college relations, in A314 for more information and application forms.

National Roller Skating Champions for Sophomore Dance, Pamela Watkins and Bill Gianneschi.

Skating to victory

By Alisa Chisholm
Assistant Managing Editor

Biomedical Engineering honors student, Pamela Watkins, maintains top grades through dedicated study and perseverance. However, school is only a part of Watkins' life. When she's not cracking down on the books, she is rolling her skates.

Watkins and partner Bill Gianneschi are the current National Roller Skating Champions for Sophomore Dance.

Last summer, Watkins and Gianneschi danced their way into the judges' hearts with their waltz, tango and fox trot routines.

"I was surprised when we won Nationals," said Watkins. "It was a dream come true."

Watkins has been competing for 11 years. Every week she practices her craft. First, she concentrates on the basics and then the dance steps.

She does not resort to weight lifting, ballet or aerobics to build endurance. Her tools are patience, stamina, concentration and hard work.

Currently, Watkins is preparing for her next competition, the first weekend in March.

Watkins soon roller skating as part of her present and future. She also envisions another future. "I would like to finish college and get a good job," said Watkins.

Health Corner

Mammogram test offered on campus

It may surprise you, but one out of every 10 women in the United States will develop breast cancer during her lifetime. Fortunately, when discovered in the earliest stages, breast cancer is nearly 100% curable. Early detection is what mammography is all about.

A mammogram is a simple and harmless x-ray. It is recognized as the most advanced and effective way of detecting breast cancer. Anyone 35 or older is urged by the American Cancer Society to have a mammogram.

The Health Service is bringing the University of Chicago Hospital's mobile mammography unit to the Harper College on the following days and times:

Saturday, March 3	8 am to 1 pm
Sunday, March 4	7 am to 6 pm
Tuesday, March 6	7 am to 6 pm
Wednesday, March 7	10 am to 8 pm
Thursday, March 8	10 am to 8 pm
Friday, March 9	7 am to 6 pm
Saturday, March 10	8 am to 6 pm

In the mobile unit, skilled female technicians will administer mammograms in comfort and privacy. It's all very simple and only takes about 15 minutes. Your test results will then be read by a team of University of Chicago Hospital radiologists who specialize in mammography. Within five days, the findings will be mailed to you and your personal physician. Your mammography will be kept on file by the University of Chicago Hospital for future comparisons.

The mammography is available to you, your family and community members at the reduced cost of $60. Mammography no longer requires a doctor's authorization, and as of January 1, Medicare reimburses the cost of a mammogram. To schedule an appointment, or for more information, please call 1-800-666-6550.

Spend 15 minutes on yourself. Mammography is one of the most important ways to take control of your health. It's a simple exam that can save your life.

Industrial double-feature

Latest LP's from 'Ministry' and 'Skinny Puppy'

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

Two big-league names in industrial music recently released new albums: Ministry's The Mind is a Terrible Thing to Taste was released on December 14 by Sire, and Skinny Puppy's Rabies was released just two weeks later by Capitol.

The two albums are vastly different but with more than a few similarities. The similarities are explained by the presence of Puppy producer David Ogilvie on the Ministry album, as well as Ministry's Alan Jourgensen's appearance (and influence) on the Skinny Puppy LP.

As harsh as Skinny Puppy has been in the past, the Ministry album is decidedly noisier and more violent than Rabies. The Mind is a Terrible Thing to Taste starts off sounding more like Megadeth than Ministry, at least until you get used to the latest Ministry style. The album is best described as a combination of drat-speed metal, hardcore punk and of course industrial.

Track five, Breathin', is the highlight of the album. It's the song that opened their December concert. The cassette and CD have one extra track, Dream, which is a sample of a girl asking "Do you believe in angels?" The electronically altered voice of Jourgensen replies "No."

Every track on the Ministry album ranges from good to excellent, with the notable exception of Test, which is a song that has no business existing on the record.

The language on the LP is quite profane, but first you have to decipher the lyrics. Most of these songs contain the "F" word, and some of the lyrics are even worse. This is not, however, profanity for the sake of profanity, particularly in the case of the song So What.

So What, the longest track on the album (over eight minutes), is about people who commit murder just for kicks, tracing the behavioral aberration back to childhood trauma and parental ignorance. The lyrics are in the first person as the singer explains that although he knows that there is something wrong with him, he still enjoys killing. "Now I know what right/I'll kill them all if I like!"

I'm a time bomb inside/ no one knows it yet/ but it's too late/ I'm ready to fight."

The Skinny Puppy LP also contains some special songs: the Exton oil spill, in eVIN KEY's typically disjointed lyrical style, a sample of the lyrics reads, "budgets that burst with oil crude gas in public no compassion common criminals seek asylum concrete pillow Exton dreams hidden hierarchy no one in power taking blame."

The tracks Fascist Jack and Jim Onen (the current single) are very similar in style to mid-period Ministry. The best track is called Worlock. It's actually a Skinny Puppy song that delicate ears can handle. The song River makes you wonder just where Skinny Puppy finds all the samples they use.

There are two extra tracks on the Puppy CD and cassette. One is a live performance of the song Spahn Dope, a 15-minute chunk of noise that is best ignored.

All things considered, both albums are very good but certainly not for everybody. I think the Ministry album is marginally better, but both have their ups and downs. Note that there is an official link between the two bands (Jourgensen); it will be interesting to see what director Jim Jarmusch's both groups like.

AWOL has ingredients for success

By Eric Jason
Staff Writer

Well, I'm back again, after a slight break in action, to cover a new angle on heavy metal. This time around I'll be covering local heavy-metal rock bands that play the club circuit in and around Chicago.

Despite the bad rap from some media writers, I think there are plenty of good bands to see on any given night at any given bar in Chicago. In the past year alone, two Chicago bands, Tatone and Knuffs Knuff, have been signed to major labels and are touring the nation.

Before I get too carried away with the story in this new column, (sorry, I don't have an official name yet), I'd better start with who this week's is about.

The band is AWOL, a four-piece hard rock outfit who has been on the club circuit for about a year and has a solid-sounding demo called On the Edge On the Edge. It's a strong, consistent, tight hard rock album that has a tendency to grow on you. Songs like Jump Up (Take Me Away) and Chance of a Lifetime definitely show guitarist Eric Bradley as an up and coming local talent.

AWOL impressed me with their live performance as well as their demo. I had the opportunity to check them out a few months ago at Stay Out West.

AWOL relied on their own material for most of their set, but also did some great cover songs by U2 and Van Halen, as well as a wild version of the Pink Panther Theme.

Overall, I'd say that with strong live performances and a solid demo, AWOL has the ingredients for a strong local following.

'Mystery Train' moves along

By Michael Schweisheimer
Staff Writer

The rhythm of a train that just keeps moving along, and the steady pulse of R&B music, accompanying that sight. This is the feeling that director Jim Jarmusch gives to Memphis, the birthplace of rock and roll, in his new film Mystery Train.

He accomplishes this through an ironic and humorous narrative which encompasses three vignettes all tied together by the Arcade Hotel. This seedy little place is located in a run-down area of Memphis near Sun Studios, where people like Elvis and Roy Orbison first recorded.

The characters are much more important than the plot in this film. Jarmusch's writing, the actor's portrayals, and the cinematography by Robby Muller make the characters interesting, funny and ironic.

Every single performance in the film is enjoyable and effective. Even the actors with small incidental parts contribute to the movie as a whole. Screaming Jay Hawkins and Cinque Lee are especially funny as the night clerk and the bellboy of the hotel. There is no extremely powerful acting, but this is not an extremely powerful movie.

The production techniques create a visually memorable film. Jarmusch shot the whole film on location in Memphis. Also, the night scenes, which make up most of the film, were shot at night.

The only thing that truly unites this film and makes it special is the irony of all the characters going to the same place, yet missing each other. Some of the characters are related to each other, in some way, within the story.

The film's real satisfaction only arrives when the unifying irony is understood. Once this happens, many of the little occurrences in the film have new meaning. Until then, the movie seems somewhat slow.

Despite that slowness, the movie is fun, and the satisfaction of realizing what is happening makes it very worthwhile.

Mystery Train is not a film for everyone. It is a film for those with the patience and humor to laugh at the irony and paradox in life. Jarmusch has created an original and entertaining movie without a lot of showbiz glitter.

Mark's Menagerie

By Mark James
Staff Writer

Well, sports fans, here we go with another exciting week of Mark's Menagerie (oh boy). I thought I would start with something coming up.

What's coming up is Clubs and Organizations Days. You know, the semi-annual event where strange people stand around tables in the main path of A building and students play "Run the Gambit" Who ever gets the least amount of club flyers wins.

This brings us to a question like, "Why don't you join the such and such club?" Your response usually is "Well, I would but I have homework and I have to go to my job and my third-Great Aunt's Grandmother on her cousin's side is having her teeth pulled."

I have two responses for about 80% of you out there (and you know who you are): 1) everything after "but" is B.S., and 2) a but is something you sit on when you don't want to get off your ass.

This is my second year here. Do you actually think I believe most of you are doing all of your homework? Hey, I'm not as dumb as I look. Most of you (me included) don't even make it to all of your classes.

And how about that work idea? ("Oh me, I might miss making an extra $4 if I miss an hour of work to become involved with something. Oh my God, the world will come to an end.")

Come off it. This is one of the richest areas in the country and you are going to go broke because of one hour of work? (Yea, I was born yesterday.)

Now, don't get me wrong. I do love most members of the 70's who do show up for every class and do all of their homework and missing one hour of work would devastate them. A lot of these people, however, are already involved with either a school club or an activity off campus. You will not find many, if any of them, at a local party on Friday or Saturday night.

Anyway, enough excuses. Here is a couple of reasons why you should. The first is that being involved with clubs is fun.

The International Friendship Club is almost always doing something. Yea, you might not have enough time to do everything, but you could show up once in a while.

The Political Science Club is going to Springfield in February to play at being a senator or congressman, sitting in the chairs that the real people do, writing and acting on bills and resolutions the way it happens in real life.

These are just two of over 30 clubs that Harper has. One of them is bound to be doing something that interests you.

The second reason concerns the real world (no flunk), college life ain't nowhere near what real life is about, sorry to burst your well-protected bubble).

When it comes to applying for a job and/or getting promoted, are you really naive enough to think that they'll only be looking at your qualifications and seniority? Do you think your darling smile and great body is going to win the day? If so, I would love to be competing for a job with you. By the time you get your head out of your ass, I would be your boss.

When it comes to jobs and promotions anything (and I do mean anything) goes. If I can get a real job before you this year, and/or get promoted before you, that could be enough to get me a VP spot two years before you, an Executive VP spot five years before you and make President of the Company while you're still waiting for your first priority parking slot.

Wait a minute, why am I trying to help you become competitive with me in the real world?

Go ahead, play "Run the Gambit" and stay out of the clubs! "Nauff said."

An open letter for the few who really care

When I came to the office Monday I found stuck to my memo board the usual pile of almost illegible post-it notes telling me to call this person or that one.

After sifting through them, calling some and putting off others, I found a note at the bottom that read "I would like to speak with you about your editorial on environmental issues." The note went on to include the name and phone number of Marya Flynn, a current Harper student. Fully expecting another lambasting about the opinions expressed last week, I hesitantly dialed the number on the note.

I was pleasantly surprised. Marya wanted to know what she could do about the situation. We exchanged ideas, discussed who to talk to about them, and agreed to keep in touch about the progress with the project.

For years, student leaders have complained about apathy on campus. Unfortunately, the attitude isn't restricted to Harper's campus. Apathy is the disease of the eighties, and I fear, the nineties.

In the past, changes and reform were initiated by a person or group of people. The women's movement had its Susan B. Anthony, the racial movement its Martin Luther King, and the anti-war movement its college war protesters. These people were willing to sacrifice everything to defend their beliefs.

This generation, however, is lacking both leaders and movements.

Today's society has a definite lack of concern for what is going on in the world around them. Most of those who know what's going on don't care. Few of those who care are willing to do anything about it. We have no real Susan B. Anthony's, Martin Luther King's, or college war protesters.

Reform movements have come to a screeching halt under the burden of conservatism. There is still plenty to reform, but there are few willing to disturb the peaceful facade of conservatism, calmness, and well-being.

As a citizen who does care, it's inspiring to come across the Marya Flynn's of the world. The Harbinger fully supports Marya and her efforts to make the world a better place.

Anyone who is interested in helping Marya with her efforts can contact me at the Harbinger Office. I will make sure you get in touch with her.

Thank you Marya, for caring. The world needs more people like you if it is going to survive.

Lady Hawks take steps toward victory

Amy Kozol goes up for a score in Tuesday's game against Triton College. Check out next week's Harbinger for results from the game.

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

To paraphrase a line from Paula Abdul's current single Opposites Attract, the Lady Hawks took one step back and forward last week.

Starting out with a 45-43 loss at Moraine Valley last Tuesday evening, the Lady Hawks stepped back into a three-way tie for first place in the NAC at 4-1 with Illinois Valley and the host Marauders (two-time defending conference champions).

A 72-46 win over South Suburban on Saturday afternoon took them a step forward by matching last year's victory total (their 14th win against 6 losses).

In the loss, a 16 for 67 effort (23%), 7 for 33 in second half showed Moraine Valley (10-7, 3-1) to gradually get back into the game. Adding to Harper's woes, Center Patty Canchola picked up her fourth foul with 16:44 left in the game, forcing Head Coach Tom Teschner to go with 34-year-old Ann Nelson in her place for a large chunk of the second half.

That, along with forward Carolyn Crowley still lingering from tonight's, the Marauders' loss of six starters, Karen Otto (16 points), Laura Thurston (16 points), and Amy Birmingham (16 points), went to work erasing a 12-20 deficit with an 8-0 run that put Moraine on top for good at 17-12 with 8:00 left.

Amy Kozol and Stephanie Garcia paced the Lady Hawks with 12 points each.

It's very frustrating because usually if you hold a team to 45 points, you'd win. But Triton was showing made it possible for them to win," Teschner said.

Saturday, the Lady Hawks took out some of that by bouncing on a weak 5-17 South Suburban team. After a 31-23 halftime lead, the Lady Hawks proceeded to open the second half with a 16-3 run that put it all but away. Kozol again led Harper with a 33 point effort that equaled a career best set last season against DuPage.

"Better, better, much better," exclaimed a happy Teschner.

After facing a sub-500 Triton team in River Grove Tuesday evening (Jan. 31), the Lady Hawks travel to Oglethorpe, Illinois to face Illinois Valley Saturday evening at 5 p.m. with a share of the NAC title at stake.

Kastner & Co. go for comeback season

By John Brinckerhoff
Staff Writer

What a difference one year makes! Last year at this time, the Hawks' basketball team was struggling to survive the season at 5-17.

Now, with new Head Coach Paul Kastner and Assistant Coach Duane Self's new group of players and winning attitude, they have turned the team around. The Hawks have insured their first winning season in five years with last Saturday's win.

The Hawks now have a record of 14-7 and are "looking to make some noise," as Kastner put it.

Even though the South Suburban team was 7-12 going into the contest, Kastner can be deceiving. Self was quick to point out, "We played a much bigger team and screened them out well." Despite South Suburban's size and talent, it wasn't enough against the Hawks.

In the first half, Harper controlled the tempo by passing the ball, finding good offensive shots and getting the ball to George Dilles for some easy baskets. On the offensive end, the Hawks went to a 2-3 zone defense to collapse South Suburban's big men. Ralph Abraham showed formidable skills in the post area.

Despite Harper's well-controlled tempo in the first half, Suburban's White hit a three-pointer to end the half with South Suburban leading at 29-28.

In second half, Harper looked to go inside right off the bat to Dilles, who converted one of three chances in the post. He ended up scoring the Hawks' first four points of the half.

With 1:09 left and the score at 64-59, Dilles, the Hawks' leading scorer with 19 points, fouled out. Harper did not let up, though.

South Suburban made a run at the 27 mark. White scored and was fouled, it in for a four-point play to make the score 68-63.

The Hawks held their ground to pull out a 69-65 victory.

Hawks basketball fans will also be excited to know that last Tuesday Harper beat the nation's sixth-ranked team, Moraine Valley, 69-61.

How does a basketball team become successful? When reminded about his team's latest success, Kastner said, "if you do the little things, the wins take care of themselves."

Student Senate in turmoil

By Lisa Aust
Managing Editor

The Student Senate has undergone a substantial change in personnel. Three offices have been vacated and filled since January 26 when Mattson abruptly stepped down from the presidency and Ed Wallace resigned from the treasury.

In addition, the position of Clubs and Organizations Representative has been vacant since December.

John Fallabee, the former Vice-President, took over Mattson's office. Mary Hook was unanimously elected to fill the Vice President's position.

A former senate contender Kevin O'Connell, was elected Clubs and Organizations senator. O'Connell was unanimously elected senate treasurer and is currently the treasurer of Political Science Club. Senator Don Bussey commented, "With everything going on, I can't believe the senate got off so easy."

The senate has also had other internal problems beginning with the heated race last of personality conflicts.

"Unfortunately, with all of the personnel changes it was hard to get organized. I want to focus on smoothing things out so we can all work toward something useful."

Hook may have to work toward her goal without much help. Concern has expressed that Fallabee has over-committed himself and will not be able to fulfill the time commitment. Fallabee is the President of Formulator, the Vice President of Political Science Club and has an outside job.

"I understand their concern," Fallabee countered, "However, I feel this is not an issue. I always have and will find time to take care of my responsibilities."

"At the last meeting, I presided and felt comfortable in the role. We got a lot done."

Free Richard Lewis tickets offered by committee

By Tony Wall
Staff Writer

Harper College is currently investigating the adoption of a new college theme to be used on printed material during this decade. Students have the opportunity to participate in the selection process in return for a chance to win two tickets to see comedian Richard Lewis March 9 here at Harper.

The Institutional Marketing Committee, composed of administrators, faculty, staff and two students, began its search for a new college theme last year. With lack of consensus on any one theme, Harper turned to an outside consultant, Terry Sullivan, to assist the committee with recommendations.

"The ideal theme," said student senate and IMC member Don Bussey, "would be short, simple and remind all students what Harper College can do for them."

Themes being considered include "Harper makes it happen", "Your future begins at Harper", "Harper College...your future may depend on it", and "Harper makes a difference."

Students are being selected through certain classes and the Harper magazine to participate in theme consideration by either selection or proposal. Students naturally should be surveyed, said Bussey, who is responsible for gathering the opinion of students. "they can identify

Students default on loans

By Phyllis Benson
Staff Writer

A US Department of Education plan to help lower student default rates on loans went into effect January 1 causing concern in the college community.

Under the plan, schools with high default rates can be dropped from the Stafford and Supplemental Student Loan programs if they don't improve collection efforts. Students registered at these campuses could no longer get student loans.

The plan reports that 18 percent of all borrowers from public two-year schools defaulted and 33 percent of all borrowers at proprietary schools defaulted in fiscal 1987.

Solano said that Harper's rate is only 4.9 percent, "amongst the lowest in the state and is not a problem at all."

Solano said the new plan puts an undue burden on the financial aid office and the college. The regulations require all schools to disclose specific consumer information to students. The requirements are more and more difficult to comply with as the default percent rises above 20 and 30 percent, said Solano.

"Our biggest burden is that we have to do entrance and exit counseling interviews," said Solano, "either in person or on videotape. We must make sure that the student is advised and counseled on both the loan, how it is paid back and the consequences of default."

Solano said that because Harper offers career and vocational programs, they face the same regulations as proprietary schools (chauffeur training and truck driving schools for example), which have a much higher default rate.

"If a student is seeking employment," said Solano, "we must disclose to prospective students entering the program any licensure or certificate required by the state; for example in nursing. We must also supply information about pass rates for exams and disclose information about job placement for all students, not just ones in the certificate and vocational programs."

Solano said that having to follow up on every individual student, whether graduated or not, has become an administrative nightmare for Harper and other schools.

"The whole legislation is aimed at the proprietary schools," he said. "They're in the business of education to make money. Because we happen to offer similar career programs, the Department of Education applies the same set of regulations to us."

Solano said Harper has a low default rate because it has done a good job of counseling students on loans, explaining the obligation of payment and the consequences of default. Students at Harper tend to complete programs of study more than at other schools and can find gainful employment to repay the loan.

Solano suggests that students who have difficulty in making the payments should keep open communication with the lenders and let them know if there is a problem so payments could be deferred.

New Student Fall Registration Begins The Week Of September 24th, 1990

Former student fights serious battle Baker needs your help

By Laura Lakowski
Staff Writer

Keith Baker, a former Harper student, was seriously injured in an automobile accident on September 15. Baker had accomplished a lot in his life. He was Exploring Area Chairperson of Area III East Central for the Boy Scouts of America in 1984-1985. Also in 1988, he received the Sheriff O'Grady Youth Service Award.

As a result of the accident, he has a weak right side, the speech part of the brain and the memory recall are disabled. Even though Baker is not greatly physically handicapped, he is mentally handicapped which is sometimes worse.

Currently, Baker is being treated at the Traumatic Brain Injury (TBI) Rehabilitation System of Iowa in Rembeck, Iowa. His home environment is similar but yet different from his home in Mount Prospect.

He lives in a house with four to six other patients.

Baker goes to a farm everyday where he is responsible for rabbits and a calf. He feeds and waters them. As part of Baker's daily life, he goes to the local high school where he swims, does a variety of physical activities and sees a speech therapist.

Baker basically understands what people say. But when he wants to say something, in the middle of speaking, gibberish comes out. Baker remembers his habitual instincts and is always willing to help.

One week before Christmas, Tom and Barb Baker (Keith's parents) had to refinance their house at five times the original cost. They can afford about 12 months of treatment for Baker. Business Office Cashier Barb Baker said, "any help is appreciated."

Harper students are sponsoring a Dance Party to help out with some of Baker's medical bills. One dollar from every ticket sold will go toward a fund to help Baker. The Dance Party will be held the Dance Party to show support and thoughtfulness for Keith Baker."

Health Corner

National Condom Week
February 14-22

Having sex is like driving a car. Both are lots of fun. Both are a responsibility. And both can be hazardous to your health if you meet up with someone who doesn't do it safely. Wearing a condom is an inconvenience, but it can increase your chances of staying healthy. Today, both men and women purchase condoms and cooperate in their usage by learning how to put them on and remove them comfortably and safely.

Don't take any chances with your health. Learn more about condoms on Thursday, February 15 from 11 am to 1 pm at the Sexual Responsibility display in the cafeteria. Participate in the "Count the Condoms" contest and "Condom Quixy Quiz" for spectacular t-shirt prizes.

Is there a doctor in the house?

By Jamie Benson
Staff Writer

Face it, you've had colds that outlasted Mike Tyson's marriage to Robin Givens.

Goofy is the best word to describe the weather this winter. It can really foul up your health.

In case you haven't noticed, everyone is sick. If it isn't a persistent cold, it's this wicked flu bug that turns you into mush for a week.

After suffering one of the above ailments, I've come up with some ideas for dealing with them. Here's some bad advice, or badice, from your truly.

First of all, you don't necessarily have to do what the doctor ordered. I did what I ordered. If everyone did what the doctor said, then being sick would be quite wearisome.

A HOT bath and a scanty pot of plug are key ingredients in the war against colds. The plug will make you forget about your cold in no time. I'm not suggesting that you get hounded when you're sick (but it does help).

The flu is another story. There isn't much you can do about it, except sleep and watch a lot of television, which is perfectly ok in my book.

If you are able to move, then feel free to do the things you've been continuously putting off, like watching all your unlabelled videotapes to find out what they are. You have to watch something because most of the naps will just make you sicker.

I've found the best way to kill time when you're sick is by playing Nintendo. You can rent a game from Blockbuster for $2 and play it until your eyes turn colors. You'll know it's time to quit when you start throwing things at the television.

If you decide to reside on the couch, then you better follow my checklist of things you'll need with reach: all remote controls and TV guides, a cordless phone, numerous blankets and pillows, aspirin, absolutely no school books (must mags preferred), and a barf bag.

So if you do get sick this season, don't put on a new face. Put on a happy face and stick it to your ailment. When I get sick there is one thing I don't want to see... my couch with a dent in the shape of my rear-end.

Volkswagon; Advertising in a class by itself

By Jamie Bresson
Staff Writer

Hats off to Harper's marketing department.

Last semester's Mkt 217 class selected the Volkswagen company for their class project. Their objective was to invent a new, creative advertising approach for two new models, the Corrado and the Passat.

Volkswagon was very helpful. They were more than glad to supply the necessary materials the students needed for investigation and marketing research.

One goal of the class project was to reposition Volkswagen's new line of cars in the marketplace.

"The continuing goal was to allow the students to understand the procedure of creating advertising," said Don Sedik, coordinator of the marketing department.

The advertisements were print ads for magazines. They contained colorful graphics, as well as various slogans. "It's time to think about Volkswagen again" was the standard slogan.

Sedik said, "The class presented the ads flawlessly and in a very professional manner."

The advertisements will not, however, actually be used by Volkswagen. The idea was for the class to physically create advertisements, rather than read about it in textbooks.

"They did a good job, and I'm very proud of them," said Sedik. "All in all, the students learned a great deal."

The last songs were, well...crazy. Performing Prince's "Let's Go Crazy" and closing out with the unforgettable "We're All Crazy in Chicago."

Somehow, Brandmeier never fails to leave a crowd speechless. He left, suspended in mid-air, thanking all his loyal fans.

The Leisure Suits band deserves mention too. They are a first class band and a fine compliment to Johnny's talent.

By Steve Hill

Despite the pain and downtrodden emotions gaining the upper hand, McCulloch left room enough for some upbeat, hopeful songs such as "The Flickering Wall," the first track

"Start Again" is a song of intense sadness, not pain, or angst, or even depression...just an empty sadness, a sadness borne of despair and loss. It's a perfect way to close the album which McCulloch dedicates to his father.

Mike on Movies

By Michael Schweishelmer
Harbinger Movie Critic

The movie theater is no longer the only place to view great films these days. Now, more and more people watch movies on video in the comfort of their own homes. For this reason, I am dedicating this week's column to movies that have been recently released to video and are worth seeing.

Dead Man Out
The death penalty has become an issue which has received increased attention lately. This movie, had the balls to tackle the issue in an intelligent yet entertaining way. The acting in this film is incredible. Ruben Blades plays a man who has great issues on death row, and Danny Glover is the psychologist who must bring him back to sanity so he can be legally executed. The surprising end to the film leaves the viewer stunned. Directed by Richard Pearce, this film is perfect for those evenings when a little more than light entertainment is desired.

Do the Right Thing

This is Spike Lee's masterpiece in film. Everything in this movie is executed to the point of perfection and clearly states the sad state of racism in America today. A must-see for anyone who is a member of the human race.

* out of * stars

Paris

This black comedy/horror film directed by Bob Balaban discusses the horrors of leprosy and the creative imagination of a child. Randy Quaid and Mary Beth Hurt star as the scary parents, and little Brian Maderky gives a stunning first performance as the little boy who won't eat the leftovers. Set in 1934, this nostalgic work is destined to become a cult classic.

* out of * stars

The Rachel Papers

This intelligent film aimed at young adults stars Dexter Fletcher as the Ferns Bechler of picking up girls. It seems he sets his sights a little too high when he attempts to woo the exhilarating Jane Sky. Following the two in and out of love, this movie has a warm feeling and deals with the emotion of love in a realistic and humorous way. Director Damian Harris has one-upped John Hughes by giving his story a realistic and touching end.

* out of * stars

Women on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown

The latest film from the world-renowned Spanish director Pedro Almodovar. This film was shown here at Harper last semester, and for all of those who missed it, here is your chance. This movie is as colorful as a ladies fashion magazine in terms of looks and its characters. Carmen Maura stars in this wonderful comedy about the little ironies of life. It is definitely worth the few bucks at the video store to pick up this film, have a few friends over and enjoy.

Electric Phase

By Eric Jason
Staff Writer

Viewed is a French-Canadian band that has been causing a stir with the underground scene lately. Viewed is a hard band to classify because they have such a unique sound that it lies somewhere between Metallica and Pink Floyd (a sort of psychedelic thrash or stoner-rock).

The album, Nothingplace is a conceptual album about a person from the future who voyages into his own mind. It's not just the story that makes this album so great, it's the frantic unpredictability of the music itself and the singing of frontman Snake which gives the music so much life. Songs like Into My Hypertube, Unknown Known, and Sub-Effect have frequent changes and cutting guitar courtesy of ace man D'Amour that leave you confused and amazed at the same time.

The stand-out cut on Nothingplace has to be the remake of the Pink Floyd classic, Anytime You Desire, which has delay effects by D'Amour and haunting singing by Snake that gives this song a strange, noisy, psychedelic feel.

The Floyd influence is strong on tunes like Missing Sequences and X-Ray Mirror which thrash out but still have a very hypnotic and mystical feel about them.

Overall Nothingplace is a very dark album full of high concepts, deep lyrics and vital musical genius. I recommend that if you're not into deep-thinking music, this is not the album for you. But, if you like strong rhythm sections (courtesy of drummer Away and bassist Blake), killer guitar and high concepts, then this is a winner.

Aluminum can recycling efforts continue

Throughout the campus there are special containers marked for the disposal of empty soda cans. Harper is encouraging everyone to dispose of their empty aluminum soda cans in these containers so they can be recycled. It takes 94 percent less energy to produce aluminum products from recycled aluminum than from raw materials.

Please help with this recycling program. Do not dispose of empty aluminum soda cans in the classroom wastebaskets and other trash containers; use the special containers provided.

Community service group comes to Harper

Circle K, the world's largest collegiate community service organization, is forming a chapter at Harper. They promote group activities serving the needs of the community and campus while developing leadership and fellowship among their members.

Circle K is part of a family of service organizations, including Kiwanis and Key Clubs. The groups work together with other organizations to make a difference in their community.

Circle K will be having their first meeting on Wednesday, February 14 at noon in the Student Activities Conference Room. Anyone interested in helping their community or developing their leadership and social skills is welcome.

Brass quintet to perform at Harper

The Ashbury Brass Quintet will present a mini-concert at 12:15 pm on Thursday, February 8 in room P205.

The brass ensemble began performing together while the five were graduate students at Northwestern University. The members are now individually associated with symphony orchestras such as the Chicago Symphony, the Milwaukee Symphony and the Elgin Symphony.

Together, however, they are the only brass ensemble to have won first prize at the Fischhoff International Chamber Music Competition as well as the Sanders Award at the Coleman Chamber Music Competition. Their program includes classical, jazz and folk standards, the marches of John Philip Sousa and the music of the American musical theatre.

Members of the Ashbury Brass Quintet include Neal Benson and Kevin Hartman on trumpet, Gregory Flint on horn, Mark Fisher on trombone and Charles Schuchat on tuba.

For more information about the performance, call the Harper Music Department at extension 2568. There is no admission charge.

Hawks soar toward Regional Championships

The Harper College wrestling Hawks, tenth ranked nationally, closed out a brilliant season with a pair of impressive wins over two tough St. Louis teams this past weekend.

Menander and Forest Park Colleges fell to the battling Harper team in their final tuneup for the Region IV Tournament to be held this weekend on the Hawk campus.

Peaking at just the right time, Coach Norman Lovelace's important challenge with virtually the whole team in good shape. The largely sophomore squad will field a strong team which boasts a number of outstanding individual grapplers who have compiled career records. Indicative of this year's Hawks is the phenomenal win/loss record of their top five men.

Among them, Walter Sanabria at 118 pounds, Rob Malacke at 134, Jason Fuscane at 142, Eric Blakey at 154 and Steve Rokusek, heavy-weight, have won no fewer than 124 matches while sustaining only 18 losses. Lovelace is looking for the "Big Five" to continue their good work into the Region IV.

Lovelace also expects strong support from other talented wrestlers as well. Keith Demann, 22-9 at 167 pounds, Bill Cordis, 16-9 at 150, and Paul Munro, 16-12 at 126, give the Hawks the kind of balance that has seen them become the one of the best teams in the country.

Since most of this year's team are sophomores, experience should stand them in good stead as they attempt to bring Harper a regional crown. It won't be easy, because the competition includes Lincoln College, last year's NJCAA national champion, currently ranked sixth in the country.

In a strong field, though, the Hawks are strong and Lovelace is optimistic that the team will give a maximum effort and that good things may happen.

These young men have worked hard this year, and they deserve the success they have achieved so far. We've looked forward to this tournament, and we'll be ready. We'd like to see this weekend as a springboard to the NJCAA Nationals which will be held in Bismarck, North Dakota on February 19 and 20.

Sanabria, Malacke, Fuscane, Blakey, and Rokusek, the brilliant "Front Five" are premed and ready, and so too are Munro, Cordis and Demann. Battling unexpected injuries, Lovelace is confident the Hawks will give good account of themselves.

Look for the Hawks to soar this time, maybe higher than Walter Sanabria (top) and Eric Goldberg (bottom) practice take-downs in preparation for the Regional Tournament.

Jason Fuscane (top) and Bill Cordis (bottom) in practice.

Hawks Basketball on losing skid

By Lou Nemes
Guest Writer

Head Coach Paul Kaster has been known to have said that losing can be as contagious as winning. If so, it may be time for him to perform a doctor's house call.

The Hawk's Men's Basketball Team has gone on a two-game losing skid, dropping a 91-80 decision at Trion last Tuesday and a 101-80 loss at Illinois Valley on Saturday. The losses dropped Harper to 15-9 for the year, 3-4 in NAC play.

In the Trion game, freshman George Dilles kept up his scoring pace with 34 points to lead all scorers. The Hawks, who trailed for a good portion of the game, whittled an 84-69 deficit with 5:46 to go in the game. Derek Murray also contributed 16 points in the losing cause.

At Illinois Valley, the Hawks and Apaches (12-10, 3-3) were in a very close ball game for the first 30 minutes. Illinois Valley went on a 10-1 tear to put the game away in the process. Dilles once again led the Hawks in scoring with 26 points. Dean Petrusakis and Jason Brooks followed with 11.

After facing Joliet at home on Tuesday, February 6, the team gives up against Rock Valley this evening. Game time is 7 pm.

Lady Hawks take steps forward

By Lou Nemes
Guest Writer

When Ann Nelson hit a 17-foot jumper with 4:27 left in Saturday's Harper-Illinois Valley game, everyone sensed that the NAC Women's Basketball title race may be coming to an end, spelling a first-over NAC Conference Championship for the Hawks.

Nelson's basket triggered a 7-0 run late in the game that gave the Lady Hawks a 60-55 win over the Apaches Saturday evening. The win, coupled with a 77-61 victory at Trion last Tuesday evening, put the Lady Hawks alone at the top of the NAC 16-overall and 6-1 in league play.

"We've been making big steps with each victory," said sophomore Amy Kuziel, who scored a total of 27 points.

Another big reason for Saturday's win came due to the team's success at the free throw line. The Hawks hit 23 of 24 shots, including their first 20 headed by Stephanie Garcia, who hit 13 of 14. Kuziel, who went 7 for 7, also contributed.

The team can all but clinch the title this evening if they get by Rock Valley in Rockford tonight and the visiting Joliet team on Tuesday night at home.

Condom Week educates public

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-Chief

Many common sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) may result in health problems ranging from infection to types of cancer to death. However, chances of acquiring an STD are greatly reduced with the use of a condom.

National Condom Week, February 14-22, is an annual promotion to educate the public, and education through humor to promote condom use.

"Building humor into a sometimes embarrassing topic gives people a legitimate reason to giggle or laugh," says the Condom Resource Center.

Each year, the number of STD cases grows. AIDS continues to spread to over 25,000 people every year. AIDS is currently an incurable disease.

against STDs.

The Condom Resource Center, organizers of National Condom Week, use information, innovation, visual images, and education through humor to promote condom use.

"Visual images, such as gonorrhea and syphilis, are curable, but very serious if left untreated or untreated."

The best strategy for controlling the spread of STDs is avoidance of exposure. The most reliable method is avoiding sexual intercourse. Also, intercourse with one mutually uninfected partner is 100% effective.

Using one condom with each act of sexual intercourse can greatly reduce the risk of STDs.

If you think you might have an STD, the best thing to do is get tested. Health Services, in room A62, offers free, confidential testing for most STDs.

Learn more about condoms on Thursday, February 15 from 11 am to 1 pm at the Sexual Responsibility display in the cafeteria. Participate in the "Count the Condoms" contest and "Condom Quickie" Quiz for t-shirt prizes.

Pool room renovation still planned

By Alicia Chinlund
Assistant Managing Editor

The pool room needs a new name. It will no longer be just a hangout for pool buffs.

Thanks to Student Activities and a Senate subcommittee, the room will be converted into a mini student center, according to Student Activities Director Jeanne Pankann.

Plans are in the works to purchase four gaming tables for chess or monopoly, a large screen TV with video hookup, pinball games for the current TV room, study carrels and lockers, said Pankann.

The plans also call for the controversial demise of WHCM from that area. Pankann has stated the music will interfere with those watching the television.

The cost of the project has not yet been determined. Bids for the alterations must be approved by the Board of Trustees during each phase.

Originally the work was scheduled to take place during winter break, the renovations are now pushed back until May.

In the meantime, the college will sell five of its eight pool tables. They have been refitted within the past month. Anyone who is interested in being put on the bid list may contact Theo Keshavazhi at extension 2222.

Washington fraternity suspended after sheep incident

(CPS) — A University of Washington fraternity was suspended in late January after residents were found semi-clothed and in the company of two sheep during initiation rites at their house.

UW's Interfraternity Council (IFC) suspended the Theta Xi fraternity Jan. 24, even before the Seattle Animal Control Board finished its investigation into the matter.

The evidence clearly demonstrates Theta Xi members' guilt and complete insensitivity to having and animal rights," said a statement issued by the IFC, which refused to list the exact charges brought against the house or to comment on whether the sheep had been seduced.

"It sounds like the stuff movies are made of," said Jonathan Brant, head of the Indianapolis-based National Interfraternity Council (NIC). "It makes me think of the movie Animal House. This is clearly against NIC rules," and completely inappropriate.

Seattle police responding to a call Jan. 12 found pledges wearing only underwear. Some had white grease on their hands and peanut butter smeared on their bodies. The officer reported that the sheep appeared "overheated and agitated."

The sheep and pledges were in a room with a sign on the door that read, "Nobody allowed except activists, pledges with permission and cloven hooved animals."

Police turned the animals over to the Seattle Animal Control Department, which will issue a report in early February on whether or not the sheep were abused.

Theta Xi members were unavailable for comment.

Both Brant and Eric Berg, secretary of Washington's IFC, say they haven't received other reports of animal abuse by fraternities. However, last January, members of Washington's Delta Upsilon fraternity arrested a pointer to its death from a classroom balcony.

Biology class to study in Isle Royale

By Sandra Stewart
Staff Writer

The Biology Department is offering a unique course during the Summer 1990 session. Instead of the usual academic prerequisites, a student registering for BIO 152, Field Biology, must show maturity, intellect and physical ability. Enrollment is by consent of the instructor, Bill Andersen, and is limited to nine students.

Andersen calls the class a "mobile classroom." After one and a-half weeks of preparation and classes at Harper and various sites in the Chicago area, the class will travel by van to Grand Portage, Minnesota. From there, a three-hour boat trip will take the students to Isle Royale, a U.S. National Park in the northwest corner of Lake Superior, where they will spend another one and a-half weeks. Andersen remarked that the class is "only three weeks long, but it is an intense three weeks. It is a lot of fun, but it is a classroom."

"This is the only class I've taken where you have to crawl over the instructor..."
-Student

Isle Royale is an oasis of rugged wilderness with no vehicular traffic. All travel on the island is done by foot. The island is accessible only by boat or seaplane.

The mobile classroom will travel to a different campsite each day. The students will hike five to fifteen miles per day with full backpacks, studying the environment as they go. Andersen explained that "the emphasis is on reading the environment, looking and determining why vegetation is there, discovering the history of the area, figuring out why certain plants are in certain places, and what is happening vegetation-wise."

Although the students will spend most of their time studying the plant life, the island is also a home for wildlife. Isle Royale is well known for its wolf and moose populations. The wolves will not be an evident as the moose, although signs of their presence will be visible.

The class will also be an exercise in group living. Andersen said the students will "function as a team, working as a unit." A former student told him, "This is the only class I've taken where you have to crawl over the instructor to get out of a tent in the morning."

The students will share tents provided by the school. The only equipment that must be provided by the student is a sleeping bag and pad, and proper clothing. The $400 fee covers all costs of the trip including equipment, transportation, books, tuition and meals while on the island.

The class is not restricted to biology majors. However, a serious candidate for the course would have an interest in the environment, and be willing to make a commitment to the class. Students will earn four credits for the course.

There are a limited number of openings for this class. Interested students should contact Bill Andersen, D291h, ext. 2414 for more information.

Mark's Menagerie

By Mark James
Staff Writer

As we go through life one thing learned over and over again is nothing remains the same. Change is constant. Yet seldom is it possible, especially in a bureaucracy, to find an individual responsible for change.

For once we have someone creating a change on campus who isn't afraid to take responsibility. I speak of the often spoken about change to the poolroom. There are many things which can be said about this change (and most already have been many times).

Before it gets lost in the controversy, for taking responsibility for this decision, I show leadership not always shown to college students.

Most decisions that are made in a bureaucracy are made with the sole intention of not taking responsibility and/or attempting to place the blame in another area. For this reason, it is not my place to say whether the decision to change was right or wrong. I only have the right to say whether I agree with it or not.

My attitude on this change is, for right now, one of wait and see. I think that the change will enable a new group of students to use the area that don't use it right now. I don't think it will bring in more students, just different. I will bring it to give it a chance.

There are certain aspects of the change that I disagree with. Right now there are plans for the couch to have its back to the pool tables that are in operation and for WHCM to be shut off for the entire 2nd floor.

The thing that scares me is the couch. One of the reasons we were told for the change was the flying pool balls. I've seen some of the damage they have done to the windows in the poolroom. What kind of damage could they do to the back of someone's head? If I was unfortunate enough to get hit, I know where I would be (or my survivors) the next day. Let's see, I prospective lawyer @ $100,000 per year for 10 years + punitive damages = $BIO DUCKS. Hinn.

Of course if you're really worried about sitting on the couch you can sit in the study area. I don't know about you, but right next to the TV at home I have a hard chair right in front of a table that is strategically leveled off so that both sitting short of sick em will stay on it for longer than 20 seconds.

I've got an idea I understand that the study cards haven't been purchased yet. Why not use the money that is allocated for the study cards and buy a plexi-glass partition to prevent someone getting hit in the head? If it goes high enough, it might even make a good sound barrier so that the people who are shooting pool can still listen to WHCM without disturbing the people watching TV.

Speaking of the TV, I do have one question. Is this TV going to have a "Close Captioned" box? Will the new VCR? Since one of the purposes for the change is to make the TV room more accessible for Harper Students lets not forget the hearing impaired. They have a right to use the new equipment too.

Naif serious stuff. Time to talk about Valentine's Day stuff. What sort of sadomasochist could have dreamed this up? I mean you got this little dude going wangs do! They can't even properly celebrate Valentine's Day (I've heard here at the Harbinger, and I will break up with them for you through my column. To protect the innocent, though, you will have to use a false name. I think this Valentine's Day stuff can really get out of hand.

Maybe we should celebrate an anti-Valentine's Day. A day that if you are in a relationship you celebrate by breaking up, and if you are single you send flowers to yourself and sign it with someone else's name. Nah, that sounds too much like my love life now. Hinn.

flowers for the girls. If a guy has more than one girl he might be interested in at the time, this could really turn out to be a little turnabout, have the girl give the would lost if that was the case. I know of one girl who would have to buy out an entire flower shop, but enough about past relationships.

Or this candy stuff? This gets expensive and makes our loved ones bigger although, in all fairness, I think this idea came from a guy who was getting back at the girl who came up with the flower idea.

And what about the pressure that goes with this day? If people are going out, there comes expectations that nothing is supposed to go wrong this week, that everything is to go as planned. Ha! What, did God come down and say "Then day, you have the other 364 days to screw things up. I don't know, I haven't seen or heard about any burning bushes recently."

How bout those people who aren't in a relationship? Does this day mean that their entire lives are invalidated coz they ain't got a honey? (I hope not).

Or even those people that are in a relationship but don't want to be in a relationship with the person they are in a relationship with. What do these poor chaste Valentine's Day (I've heard here at the Harbinger, and I will break up with them for you through my column. To protect the innocent, though, you will have to use a false name. I think this Valentine's Day stuff can really get out of hand.

Will Board ban smoking?

The bitter war of the smokers/non-smokers is about to end. February 22, next Thursday, the Board of Trustees will consider the recommendation of a smoke-free campus from the Institutional Wellness Committee and the Environmental Health and Safety Committee. The committees propose a campus wide policy of banning indoor smoking.

The Harbinger supports the rights of both smokers and non-smokers. We feel that with some adjustment the present policy should be enough to keep everyone happy. There is no need to adopt such an extreme rule.

There have been complaints of people smoking in inappropriate areas. However, a casual look around the hallways and lounges reveal that smoking areas are not well identified. A random sample of students shows uncertainty about where exactly smoking is permitted. Thus, they smoke where they see others smoking. There should be more ash trays where the most want people to smoke, maybe they'll get the hint.

Also the most common smoking areas happen to be well traveled areas. This means smokers and non-smokers are going to come into frequent contact. It is easy to understand the frustration of someone allergic to smoke who finds there is no way to avoid a smoking area on the way to class. Surely alternative locations can be found.

If this proposed policy is ended (in the summer of 1990) allergic students may find life even harder, as it will become difficult for them to go to the washroom. Smoking in concealed places is a difficult high school habit to break.

Board meetings normally begin around 8 pm and are held in the Board Room (upper level of A Bldg.). The public is allowed to speak near the open of the meeting. We would encourage anyone with strong feelings on this matter to come. If you don't act, you have only yourself to blame.

Valentine's Day; in the beginning

Valentine's Day is thought of as a holiday for loved ones and the exchange of candy and flowers.

But what is Valentine's Day? The Valentines Day Massacre in Chicago is often associated with this holiday, but that tragedy happened long after the holiday was established.

Actually, it's St. Valentine's Day which originated as a pagan ritual in Rome. This ritual, Lupercalia, began on February 15.

Priests brought a dog and a goat into an ancient cave where the animals were sacrificed. The hides were then cut into strips, then laid out in the sun to dry.

When dry, the strips were made into whips. Two men were selected to carry the whips into the village and lash the women.

The ritual was performed to keep wolves away from the villages' flocks. It was also said that these whippings increased women's fertility and sex drive.

An old legend says the ritual was used to select marriage partners. The holiday included a lottery in which men and women were randomly mated and then wed.

The festival gradually became associated with Feast Day, February 14.

Two Roman martyrs, both named St. Valentine, performed the Lupercalia ceremonies. The emperor was alarmed at the cruelty both men were inflicting on women and he demanded they stop.

The martyrs refused and were sentenced to beatings and were stoned to the brink of death. Finally they were beheaded on February 14, 269 AD.

After their death, people continued to commemorate the Valentine duo by exchanging hearts, called Valentines. Legend has it that on this day birds choose their mate for life; for love is in the air.

Slew of sequels in store for 1990

By Joe Stachler
Staff Writer

When a movie is released and makes a profit, it is usually a foregone conclusion that there will be more of the same. It's known as a sequel. The 80's were full of them, and a sequel is usually only half as good as the original.

Every possible penny is squeezed out of an original idea that doesn't seem good enough for just one film. Some cases are justified, some are downright baffling, but nonetheless, there are about ten sequels per year. Here are a few that are on their way to the big screen.

ROBOCOP 2

BACK TO THE FUTURE Part 3

The film was made at the same time as Part 2. It continues the adventures of Doc Brown and Marty McFly in a western setting in the 1880's. Michael J. Fox, Christopher Lloyd

THE GODFATHER: THE CONTINUING STORY

Fifteen years ago Part 2 won the same Oscars as the original. Now Francis Ford Coppola brings number three to legitimize his family. If Coppola thinks there should be another one, then there should be another one! said Al Pacino. Also with Diane Keaton, Andy Garcia. Could there be 15 years for Star Wars?

HIGHLANDER 2

Christopher Lambert returns as the long living swordsman who's only means of destruction is the loss of his head.

Sean Connery is supposed to reprise his role as well.

ROCKY 5

In number four the champ gave his belt to his deceased friend Apollo Creed and went to Russia to "avenge" his death. Rocky is getting old and is supposed to train a young fighter with a bad attitude. Sylvester Stallone

DIE HARD 2: DIE HARDER

Surprise! Two predictable jokes. 1. How does this happen to the same guy?

2. Will part 3 be called 'Die Harder 3'? Will it? Bruce Willis, Bonnie Belding

NAKED GUN 2

Another life from 'Police Squad'! Lovable Lt. Frank Drebin is back in America's answer to Inspector Clouseau. A working title of the film was 'The Smell of Fear: From the Files of'

Police Squad!: Leslie Nielsen

EXORCIST: THE NEXT CHAPTER

This is the third one and it would take a real effort to make it worse than number 2. Author William Peter Blatty is directing.

48 HOURS 2

The original was Eddie Murphy's first film, so it will be interesting to see who gets top billing between him and Nick Nolte in this one.

GREMLINS 2

Horror sequels are almost always a pale comparison to their originals. But supposedly the same team is making this one. That means Steven Spielberg.

That's all the films I heard of, but I'm sure we'll see more of Freddy Krueger, Jason Voorhees, and Michael Meyers in the future, as long as someone pays for them.

'Flashback' just a flash in the pan

By Joe Stachler
Staff Writer

In the sixties, something happened to a train carrying Vice President Spiro Agnew. Someone snubbed the last car, where he had made a speech, and the rest of the train took off without him.

The story used in the film 'Flashback' explains why a certain radical, who was once regarded as a hero among the flower children, has been sought after for twenty years to face serious charges for the prank.

The man, Huey Walker, is assigned to facial surgery reworking.

John Buckner, a clean-cut, loyal agent of the F.B.I. is assigned to escort Walker via train to his destiny. Walker makes an obligatory public nuisance of himself, tricks Buckner, and escapes.

Both men get themselves into unexpected trouble before being reunited, and end up depending on each other to survive. Trouble comes in the form of a corrupt and greedy sheriff running for Congress. Help comes from a compassionate flower girl.

The film spends its time presenting its characters as cliché people of their trade, but then begins to reveal their true past as they break down and become friends.

The situations in the film are often similar to those from 'Midnight Run' and the Huey Walker character is portrayed with a human element by Dennis Hopper, instead of being a cheap 'dope head' song going around saying 'wow man'. Keller

Sutherland also does a good job and less the script do most of the work.

The film was written by David Loughery, who also wrote the disappointing 'Star Trek V'. Both he and Director Francis Amara keep the film modest instead of turning it into a shoot-out adventure like 'Beverly Hills Cop'. The result is an adequately funny comedy, which could have been funnier had it not used some time to make political statements and score a good mood. Maybe that's what it wanted to do.

Dance Party

Julian "Jimpin" Perez

Photos by Norm Cohen

Tony "So Bad" Soto

Highlights of the dance party included the amazing 12 year old DJ Tony "So Bad" Soto who impressed even the pros. Julian "Jimpin" Perez wowed the crowd with his mixing ability. All of the DJ's were outstanding and kept the party going non-stop from 8 pm until almost 1 am. The enthusiasm of the dancers impressed Luis Shepherd, one of the last DJ's, so much he didn't feel they wanted a slow song. His feelings and mix were right on.

The sponsors of the event, the Program Board, donated $1 from each ticket to the Keith Baker fund. Over 500 tickets were sold.

MAKE $25,000 SITTING AT HOME!

DON'T LET THIS OPPORTUNITY PASS YOU BY.

Can you picture yourself making at least $5000 dollars a week, every week? If you can, I urge you to read this article, it could be worth thousands of dollars to you!

Hi, my name is Mark Preston. I am 34 years old and I am a self-made millionaire. A few years ago I discovered a money making system that changed my life forever. This is not just another "get rich quick scheme". This is a unique new system that is in demand everywhere, yet few people even know it exists.

Anyone can do it. Trust me. If you want to make money, this system is for you. When I first started this money making program, I was flat broke and at least $30,000 dollars in debt. My family thought I was crazy and said I should be out looking for a "real job". That did not stop me. I was determined to make it with this fantastic money making plan I had discovered. I started at home on the kitchen table with no capital. Within a year I was taking in over $3000 A WEEK... MORE THAN A MILLION DOLLARS A YEAR. You heard me right, OVER A MILLION DOLLARS A YEAR! I went from driving an old beat up Pick-Up to a brand new Lincoln Continental. I paid for it in cash. I bought a new home in a prestigious neighborhood, a waterfront summer cottage, and a beach house in Florida. I do not mean to brag, but these are my results using this amazing money making system. Do not stress me, join me!

THE SECRET REVEALED

I knew then I had discovered a revolutionary new money making program that would continue to make me thousands of dollars a day. It seemed so easy. I asked myself why everybody wasn't rich? Then it dawned on me that not everyone knew about this secret method of making money. You do not need special training or even a college education for this money making system to work for you.

Once you have learned how to use it, your money worries will be over for life. You will have financial security and peace of mind. This money making system is perfectly legal and amazingly simple. It has nothing to do with real estate, the stock market, or gambling of any kind. It does not matter what your financial situation is now. You can start this money making program at home in your spare time with less than $1500. In a few short weeks you will see the cash start to roll in. Once you put this money making system to work for you, the sky's the limit! You will have cash to spend on anything you desire whenever you want it. Think of it! Enough cash to finally put an end to your financial problems.

HERE'S PROOF

I am sure you are somewhat skeptical at this point. That just shows you have good business sense. Read what a few people had to say about my money making program.

Dear Mark,
I ordered your program 3 months ago and started using it the day I got it. It says the limit I can check at is the result. Last month I deposited over $11,000 in my bank account. Thank you so much.
N.L. Stewart Florida

Dear Mark,
When I read your article I had my doubts. I said to myself, I might as well try it at least. I'll be $2500 ahead with your guarantee. Well, your material helped my life from being flat broke to being a profit of a million on December 12. I can do it, anyone can!
J.S. San Diego CA

Dear Mark,
After I read your money making method, I was skeptical, being sitting down to get it done. At 18 years old my father told me, "I can't wait to see you make $14,000 in less than 20 hours of work." I am the owner of my own business. Thanks for a new life!
B. Louisville KY

IT'S UP TO YOU

Your life can change now by taking simple action. Order my money making program today and see for yourself. All you have to do is follow the step by step procedures I provide you with. It will only take you about an hour reading time to master the program. If you take yourself being rich, you will be rich. I make it easy for you. Included in my manual is my unlimited telephone number so you can call anyone you need help. I guarantee that within a week of using my money making method you will see the results that are real. With my money making system, your success is guaranteed.

$2500 CASH BONUS

I am sure that my money making program will work for you. I am going to offer you a guarantee that no one else can. You either save $15,000 using my money making system or I will send you a certified check for $2500. That's right, $2500 just for getting my money making program on honest try. The only reason I can offer you a guarantee like this is because I know you are going to make a lot of money copying my money making system. So much money that I am putting up $2500 to prove it to you. It's that simple. You have nothing to lose and everything to gain. The risk is mine.

ORDER TODAY

It is not too late for you to start making money with my program. Do not be stopped by your fears. The single most limiting emotion in you is the fear of failure. Wrestlers going to Nationals

By John Brinkerhoff
Staff Writer

It took a lot of sweat and tears, but six of Harper's wrestlers are headed to nationals. After watching the long, hard fought wrestling matches at last

Saturday's Regional, even the spectators felt tired and happy. The wrestlers headed for Bemarck, North Dakota on February 19-20 for the Region IV national tournament are: Eric Bakley, Jason Finucane, Walter Sanabria, Rob Malecke, Steve Rokuok and Bill Corbin. Finucane (13-2) beat Lincoln's Robert Young 7-4 for the 142 lbs. crown in a real nail biter.

Then, in the 118 lbs. weight class, Sanabria (13-5) pinned another Lincoln wrestler Trevor Williams with 1:02 left in the match with the score tied at 1-1.

Overall, Lincoln's team ranked fifth, won the most with 79.25. Harper came in a close second with 74.5 points. In other matches, Buker (13-1) won with a technical fall over John Reason. This will be his second straight trip to nationals in the 150 lbs. division.

And in the 190 lbs. and over weight class, Rokuok was inched out in the final seconds by Lake County's Joe Bekker, 4-3, but will also be going the nationals. Head Coach Norm Lovelace said about his team, "Anytime you bring the wrestlers in that we did, and do this well, I'll take it."

Now the Hawks' "Big Six" will be taking a trip to the national tournament.

Sophomore Eric Bakley said, "We've got six groups going to nationals and I think we'll place real high in the meet."

Ladies win

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

Head Coach Tom Teschner and the Lady Hawks are on top of the world after winning 78-44 over Joliet last Thursday and 66-49 over Rock Valley Thursday. Their record is now 18-6 for the year and 8-1 in the NAC.

Previous NAC co-leader Moraine Valley fell out of the top spot by losing at Illinois Valley 71-70 on Tuesday, putting both Moraine Valley and Illinois Valley a game back of the Lady Hawks with three conference games left.

"We're in great shape, but we haven't won it (the conference) yet," Teschner said.

In the Joliet game, the team was never in danger as they cruised to a 48-14 halftime lead against the winless team (0-9, 0-1) behind a balanced attack spearheaded by Amy Kosol (18 pts.), Stephanie Garcia (15 pts.), Jeanne Harwig (14 pts.), and Patty Canchola (13 pts.).

The Lady Hawks gave more of the same to the host Rock Valley Trojans (6-14, 2-5) when a 15-2 run late in the first half put the game away for keeps. Kosol again paced Harper in scoring with 26 points, while Garcia added 16 and Canchola followed with 10.

After a home game with College Of DuPage, the Lady Hawks will settle the NAC race once and for all against two-time defending NAC and Region IV Champion Moraine Valley Saturday afternoon at 1:00 p.m. in Building M.

Hawks' win sets them for challenge

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

The drive to the 1990 NJCAA Region IV Division II play-offs is on. Men's Basketball Head Coach Paul Kautner feels his team, 17-0 overall, 5-4 in NAC play, is in a great position prior to entering post-season play.

The play-off pairings were finalized Sunday at Waubesa. Three nationally ranked teams are coming in Harper within two weeks. College Of DuPage last night, ranked #3 in NJCAA Division II, Moraine Valley Saturday (1 p.m. tip-off), ranked #7 in NJCAA Division II, and Triton February 22, ranked #25 in NJCAA Division I.

"It'll be tough, no question about it," Kautner said. "But, I feel that our players have proven themselves and will be ready for the challenge."

After two big wins this week the Hawks will be leveled up for the challenge.

In a 102-98 win over Joliet Tuesday the Hawks overcame a 46-33 deficit with 4:23 left in the first half thanks in part to an 18-4 run, culminating with an alley-oop from Jason Brooks to Derek Murray before the half ended to put Harper up 51-50.

From there, the Harper lead would peak at 72-60 on a three-pointer from Brooks before the visiting Wolves (10-12, 1-7) made the swarming moments of the game very tense by closing the Hawk lead to 98-96 on a three-pointer with 33 seconds left. But clutch free throw shooting by Brooks and Paul Combs finally sealed it. George Dilles led the way with 33 points. Derek Murray added 16 points of his own.

"It wasn't pretty defensively, but we played enough of it to win," Kautner said.

On Thursday, the Hawks came out to open second half play like gangbusters with an 18-2 run to overcome a 35-24 halftime deficit at 42:39 as Harper held on to defeat Rock Valley 65-59. Highlighting the run were a pair of three-point bombs from Brooks and 8 points from Murray. The Trojans at 45-42 with six unanswered points before a 7-0 spurt, capped off by a three-pointer from Dean Potulak with 9:36 remaining. He put the Hawks on top for good at 49-45. The lead would peak at 60-52 before a 7-2 run brought Rock Valley within 3 at 62-59 before free throws from Murray and Brooks put the win on ice.

Dilles and Murray shared in scoring with 13 points apiece, Brooks followed with 10.

"Our guys knew what they had to do to come back," Kautner said, "I felt that they were unemotional in the first half, and they knew they had to get it back in order to win."

Men's and Women's Track openings

The men's and women's track teams are looking for more members. The men's team needs distance runners and jumpers. The women's team needs people for sprints, the high jump, the long jump and throws. Interested students should call Coach Renee Zellner at ex. 2464.

Speech Team takes fifth place in state

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-Chief

The Harper Speech Team placed fifth among community colleges at the Illinois State Speech Tournament, held on February 16 and 17 at Illinois Central College in Peoria.

The team competed in two divisions; the Community College Division and the Open Division, which included both two and four-year schools. Among the schools attending were College of DuPage, ranked the top community college speech team in the nation, and Bradley University, which has placed first in the nation for several consecutive years on the four-year levels.

Rosemary Langer led the Harper team with a first place award for Informative Speaking in the Open Division.

"It was just great that she took first in the Open Division against the four-year schools," commented Marcia Literna, the team's coach. "There was a lot of really tough competition there."

Langer also placed twice in the Community College Division, with a first place in After Dinner Speaking and a fourth place in Persuasive Speaking.

Harper's Reader's Theatre won the second place Community College trophy for their interpretation of Black Elk Speaks. The cast members are Roger Ileri, Kathy Brandolino, Shan Gilmore, and Michelle Przan.

Kathy Brandolino placed fifth in the Community College Division for Poetry, while Shan Gilmore took the fourth place prize award in the same division.

The team's next tournament will be on March 3, when they will host newer teams from around the state.

Senate approves constitutions

By Laura Lakowski
Staff Writer

The Student Senate held its meeting this past Friday. The meeting ran smoothly. Many things were covered and agreed upon. The constitution of two new organizations, the Muslim Students Association and BACCHUS, were approved by the Senate.

The Environmental Health and Safety Committee will be making a recommendation to the Board of Trustees tonight to ban smoking on campus, and has asked the cafe to replace their vinyloform with glass and china.

Over 100 entries have been received by the Institutional Marketing Committee for the new school theme. The drawing for free Richard Lewis tickets will be held March 1.

The traffic committee has proposed a street light at the Roselle entrance to help reduce traffic at the Algonquin entrance.

This Senate meeting broke a school record. It was a short yet accomplished meeting because of the reconstruction of the agenda.

Senate Vice President Mary Hook states, "Things will really start getting done this semester because of the personnel changes. President John Palfalvi can really benefit the Senate with all of his organizational skills. Although he is very involved with obligations outside of Senate, the students at Harper should know they can depend on him; he will not let them down. I'm proud to serve under him. He's the best man for the job."

Harper College prepares for the future

By Alisa Chisland
Assistant Managing Editor

What forces will shape our future? (Trends) What will arise as a result of these forces? (Needs) How might Harper College respond in order to shape the future? (Preferred Future)

What is our Preferred Future? How can we plan for the 21st century? Over a hundred focus groups met during the past three months to discuss the trends, needs and changes that will affect Harper's Preferred Future.

College employees, students, community members, and people from local organizations got an opportunity to view a videotape, which introduced thoughts about the future from people at Harper and in the community.

Group members evaluated the objectives of Harper by filling out an opinionnaire, and discussed factors which they believe will affect our future.

"Many people indicated a concern about the global economy, internationalism, and issues related to politics," said Preferred Future Coordinating Team Member Pat Malcomre. They are concerned about the high cost of higher education, changing job requirements, lack of housing, and changes due to technology.

"The focus groups oriented toward students had low turnout but many concerns," said Student Trustee Darlene Iverson. "Students were interested in the environment, recycling efforts, transportation problems and student involvement." "The focus groups were very useful," said Iverson. "The future benefits will go toward everyone."

The Preferred Future process will continue with a kick-off

According to the Vehicle Code of the Illinois Revised Statutes, a handicapped person is, "Every natural person who is unable to walk 200 feet or more unassisted by another person or without the aid of a walker, crutches, braces, prosthetic device or a wheelchair or without great difficulty or discomfort due to the following impairments: neurologic, orthopedic, respiratory, cardiac, arthritic disorder, blindness, or the loss of function or absence of a limb or limbs."

breakfast on Friday, February 23. The tentative presentation includes an update of the process, a review of the data, and selection of study group members.

Study groups will meet between February and April to evaluate the data collected by the focus groups. Some of the techniques they will utilize to examine the data are panel discussions, workshops, conferences, on-site visits, speakers and journals.

Contact Annette Smith in C102 if you are interested in joining a study group.

"My hope is that all of you will become involved as the process unfolds," said President Paul Thompson. "Like pebbles which cause big ripples on the water, the addition of your ideas to our 'tutoring' will cause wonderful ripples at Harper."

"Think ahead 15 years, and try to visualize what Harper College will be or could be. What you want to see, you could make happen. With discipline and collaboration we can piece together an exciting mosaic which portrays what we'd prefer for our College in the beginning of the next century. I look forward to working with you in its development."

Blood Drive disappointing

By John Brinckerhoff
Staff Writer

The Harper Blood Drive was somewhat of a disappointment for school nurse Becky Sauter and the Life Source crew last Wednesday.

"Out of 8,000 to 9,500 full-time students, only 85 units were drawn," Sauter said. One unit of blood can save the lives of four patients.

A man underwent a liver transplant in 1987 and used 400 units from a Harper College Blood Drive. In the letter received by Harper, Joe Torral, Blood Program Consultant said, "Without a success like yours, his situation could have grown very critical very quickly."

It is inspiring stories like this one which fuels the blood drives every year.

There is another blood drive April 18 this year. The requirements to give blood are: weight over 110 lbs, between the ages of 17-65 and to not have donated to the past 8 weeks.

Why don't more people volunteer? "They are afraid of the unknown mostly, that it might hurt or that they will get sick," Sauter added. The myth is that it is virtually painless, and along with the cookies and juice afterward, the people are very nice at the blood drives.

There are teachers who give extra credit points to students who give blood.

"There is no such thing as artificial blood," Sauter concluded.

Harper's own 'Candid Camera'

By Alina Chisholm
Assistant Managing Editor

Have you ever wondered who takes the photographs used in the bulletin, student handbook and course schedule? No, it's not the Harbinger.

It's the Photo Lab in F102.

Since the retirement, last December, of Photographic Supervisor Ray White, Photographer John Callahan and Student Aide Gwendolyn Rae-Rodriguez have carried on the heavy workload alone. Callahan works with administrators, staff and faculty to produce quality photographs that the college can be proud of.

Armed with an Olympus OM4 and flash equipment, he starts his day. Assignments vary from day to day. Callahan shoots photos requested by the college such as the LRC display, District 211 bookfairs, board meetings, award ceremonies, and special events.

The Photo Lab also makes slides and does copy-stamped work for instructors.

Rodriguez develops, prints and shoots photos for the lab. "I enjoy working in the Photo Lab," said Rodriguez. "I'm doing work in the field I'm going to college for. This is not just a student aide job. I'm receiving training for my profession as well."

Gwendolyn Rae-Rodriguez prepares to develop prints from negatives.

Harper's continuing education helps students to S.C.O.R.E

By Phyllis Benson
Staff Writer

Part of the American dream is owning your own home. Another is owning your own business. But where can you turn for help when you want to open or improve on a small business?

S.C.O.R.E., Service Corps of Retired Executives, a division of small business administration, offers free counseling for entrepreneurs through Harper's division of continuing education.

Seminars and courses are also available in business preparation and development. These teach practical and proven ways to help businesses grow, and action skills to manage all the roles required as a business owner.

Designed to provide thorough information from a practical "nuts and bolts" approach, seminars include: "How to start your own business," "How to manage your new start-up business," "Ingredients in your first business plan," and "Financing your business."

Seminars for current business owners are also available and include small business management, record keeping, computerizing your business and how to use cash to generate more cash -- and profit. Specialized topics include interior design, franchising, and how to be a consultant. International and professional sales seminars are also available.

S.C.O.R.E. is a national organization of volunteers who provide expert help and counseling at no charge. Each counselor works directly with the college to assist entrepreneurs developing or improving their businesses.

Courses are available throughout the semester. Counseling is available at the North East Center, 1375 S. Wolf Rd., on Tuesdays, every half-hour from 9 am to 11 am and 1 pm to 2 pm. The continuing education office will match interested persons with an expert in their chosen fields.

"Since the January 9 workshop," said Continuing Education Receptionist Betty Benson, "we have been booked solid for the 13th and the 20th. We have four appointments remaining on the 27th and have already begun bookings for March."

For information and to make an appointment for free S.C.O.R.E. counseling, call the Continuing Education Office at 397.3000, ext. 2501 or 2592. To register for seminars, call ext. 2430, 2412 or 2301. AIDS Myths & Misconceptions

AIDS is a frightening disease. But the fear of AIDS is unjustified if it is founded on myth and misconception. The spectacle of police wearing rubber gloves when arresting AIDS marchers, of television technicians refusing to work in the same studio with persons with AIDS, or of parents taking their children out of school because a classmate has AIDS only serves to increase the fear of AIDS. Everyone needs to know the facts about AIDS so that the myths can be dispelled and the fears removed.

What causes AIDS?

AIDS is caused when a virus — called Human Immuno-Deficiency Virus, or HIV — enters the bloodstream and destroys key cells of the immune system. The person with AIDS is left defenseless against infections and cancers that the healthy person can resist.

How is AIDS transmitted?

HIV is transmitted most readily by intimate sexual contact — vaginal or anal intercourse without a condom. The virus can also be passed by sharing by sharing contaminated needles.

AIDS myths

1. AIDS can be transmitted by casual contact — False. No case of AIDS has ever been caused by touching, hugging, or living with a person with HIV. HIV is not transmitted through food or the air.

2. You can get AIDS by donating blood — False. Bloodbanks use sterile needles that are never used twice. You are giving not taking blood.

3. AIDS can be transmitted by insects — False. Although some studies have shown that mosquitoes and other biting insects may harbor HIV in their stomachs after being fed blood that contains the virus, there is no evidence of any kind that the "infected" insect can then transmit the virus to another person.

4. Children should not attend school if a classmate has AIDS — False. HIV is not usually transmitted. There has never been a case where HIV was transmitted by a bite or a scuffle.

5. Only gays and IV-drug users are at risk for AIDS — False. Anyone exposed to HIV in a way that may permit the virus to enter the bloodstream is at risk for AIDS. This includes vaginal intercourse without a condom.

6. People with antibody to the AIDS virus are immune to AIDS — False. Exposure to HIV causes antibodies to be produced but unlike most other diseases, they fail to protect against further infection and damage.

7. Recipients of blood trans-fusions are at great risk for AIDS

— False. Screening procedures now identify and eliminate HIV-infected blood. Cases of AIDS caused by transfusions given prior to 1984 (when screening was first begun) may continue to develop, however. If you or your sexual partner received blood between 1976 and 1984 you may wish to take the AIDS antibody test to be sure that neither of you is infected.

Why procrastinate when you can GO FOR IT!

Harringer photo

Procrastinators beware! The Beeson is on the loose

By Jamie Beeson
Staff Writer

Have you ever looked in your closet only to find a pair of jeans three sizes too small...and they're not small because you gained weight. Maybe you should have retired them eighteen months ago.

Procrastination is the word I'm looking for. The phrase "I'll do it tomorrow" should fully explain the meaning.

It is human nature to procrastinate, especially when you have an abundance of time in which to accomplish your goal. For example, how many times have you waited until the final two weeks to do a term paper when you've known about it for thirteen weeks.

How many times do you speak to an acquaintance, and you both imagine how crazy you could get if you get together. You both know darn well that the chances of your going out are slimmer than Buster Douglas's in a rematch with Mike Tyson.

Purchasing current albums is easy to put off. By the time you get around to buying them, you're sick of half the songs from all the albums.

Cleaning your room. I should be in the procrastinators hall of fame for this one. I don't think I'm the only one who waits until I can write my name in the dirt before I lift a finger.

One thing I don't advise putting off is buying concert tickets, unless you enjoy looking at the rear ends of your favorite band.

Procrastination is a way of life. Everyone is guilty of it, from taking out the trash to starting that crucial diet.

Procrastinators are a unique breed of people. After all, why do it today, if you can mess it up today?

Mark's Menagerie

By Mark James
Staff Writer

I have a question for anyone to answer. I would make a game of it and offer a reward, but I'm going to answer it in a paragraph or two to I am offering any prizes. The question is: what is the purpose of college?

Give up, or are you offering the standard answer "The purpose of college is to learn."? Beccorep? Wrong answer sportfians. If that is what you think is the answer, you are missing the point (or don't really care what the point is).

The purpose of college is to learn how to think. If the only purpose was to learn, then we would not have any extra-curricular activities, instead we do have that other stuff so we can take what we've been taught and learn to make some sound, kind-of-rational decisions.

We do learn. More important, we learn what to do after our mind has acquired this knowledge. We learn that after we have listened to others that we can either keep, alter or completely change our opinion. We learn that when the quarterback drops back and the center and guards are blocking like a run that it is probably a draw. After that, we scream "Draw" at the top of our lungs and then go after the back. We learn about the situation, we think about it, and then we take action.

There is a situation on campus that looks to me like someone is forgetting one of the steps (or they don't think our opinions are important enough to consider). The only way I know of to learn how think (unless someone has come up with something) is to look at both sides and discuss them. Without two sides to an issue, its very hard to really think about it.

So far, we have only heard one opinion from select committees, none of whom I have ever heard of. For example, the Institutional Wellness Committee (who?) and the Environmental Health and Safety Committee (who?) will be suggesting to the board that Harper become smoke-free. I would like to know a few things about these committees: 1) how were they selected and 2) how representative were they (but then again there are many things I would like to know, like the name of the cut girl in my math class). If they were not elected, they have no right to speak for me. If there weren't as many smokers as non-smokers on these committees, then I don't think that smokers' rights could have been discussed very well (yes, we do have some).

How come we never hear of anyone getting together a committee of smokers and non-smokers to look into the situation? Why is it that if a committee is formed on the issue no one ever hears of it (except a select few) until after the committee has published its results? (Why is it I really doubt that my questions will be answered?)

Enough already! This game has gone on long enough. How about somebody using a little common sense? People have been trying to make this happen since its inception. Some non-smokers want the campus to become non-smoking (with some going to the extreme of wanting no smoking allowed even outside). Some smokers want the campus to remain as it is (with some going to the extreme of wanting to smoke inside the classroom). Why don't we get together and work out the best solution possible? All of these committees on campus say that we, as students, are welcome to attend. How can we when we, as students, never hear about them? I don't care who's fault it is that we never heard about them, I just want the situation fixed.

I even offer a solution. If the board can wait two more months to come to a decision (that's still time to implement it in the summer), then we (yes Bunk, you and I) can form a committee. Any one who is interested, contact me here at the Harbinger. (I must sound like a really lonely guy, always asking people to contact me here at the Harbinger.)

This proposal to the board is real. I will form a committee to look into alternatives that are favorable for both sides of the issue, as well as giving the committee plenty of press, if they will give me the time to do it. All it takes is a slightly open mind.

Our modest proposals

Tonight the Board of Trustees will vote on a recommendation to make Harper a "Smoke-free" environment (that's assuming that the administration can afford to pay for 24 hour surveillance of campus bathrooms). This recommendation will be presented by both the Environmental Health and Safety Committee and the Institutional Wellness Committee. Both committees have already begun to implement this action—neither committee contains smokers. They have, however, received a great deal of opposition from the almost-ignored Committee for Fairness to Smokers.

Since the committees are willing to go to such extremes for student health, feasibility obviously doesn't have any play in the decision-making process, the Harbinger has a few suggestions for further changes.

Plastic and styrofoam must be done away with, as they are not biodegradable and will accumulate and pollute our planet for years to come. Cars, busses and other motor vehicles should be banned from campus. Exhaust fumes from these vehicles pollute the air and can cause lung and heart problems. Also, people die from car accidents.

The cafeteria should no longer serve fried meat, deep-fried foods, saccharin or nutrasweet, since all can complicate or create health problems. In fact, the cafeteria in general should be done away with since it usually causes indigestion.

Microwave ovens can be hazardous for people with pacemakers so they also have to go.

All contact sports should be banned. They can cause serious injuries for the players and refs.

Studies have shown that working out decreases immunity so all physical education classes should be stricken from the curriculum.

Computers should also be removed as they emit radiation.

The campus bathrooms should be taken out. They distribute waste, use too much water and spread germs. (Besides, someone might smoke in them.)

The campus must be made into one-level buildings. Climbing stairwells can be physically stressful for out-of-shape students and people could slip and fall down them. Also, elevators could break and fall, or students may fall down an elevator shaft.

Students, faculty and staff can no longer wear perfumes or colognes since some people are allergic to them.

Kniving on campus must be illegalized as it is spreader germs.

Water could be contaminated so it should be removed from campus. A giant plastic bubble should be built over campus, so no outside pollution can get in. This will also cut out inclement weather, which can cause colds and snow, so no slippery steps and falls.

Sexually Transmitted Diseases are a growing concern, so to get rid of them, all male students should be castrated. This will also help control unwanted pregnancies.

Students should not be forced to take classes they don't like. This causes unnecessary stress that can lead to ulcers and drug abuse.

Finally, students should quit breathing. A 1970's study proved that breathing is the number one cause of death. However, there is also a strong opposition to this, who feels there should be a rule against not breathing? Supporters argue that most people who do not breathe turn blue and eventually die anyway.

All keepers interested in their brother's health should contact either of the committees listed above. However, anyone in favor of allowing humans to make their own choices and enjoy their rights in a way that poses no risk to others (like in a well-ventilated smoking area) is welcome to express themselves at the Board of Trustees meeting tonight at 8 pm in the Board Room.

"Working out decreases your immunity by 600%."

Letter to the Editor

Environmental Health Committee singles out the smoker, again

It seems to me and many people I've spoken with that the Environmental Health and Safety Committee is working overtime in trying to achieve. For a beginning, the committee, without warning, removed all cigarette vending machines (without so much as a hint to students or employees). A smoking and non-smoking environment was thusly created, and I would venture to say that most smokers agree with this concept.

Now, the same committee would seek to outlaw smoking in any Harper College building (effective summer, 1990). In an effort to achieve a healthy environment for students (the majority of whom are racial thinking adults), the committee has again singled out the cigarette smoker. What about other health and environmental issues?

1. In an effort to create a healthy and safe Harper environment, what has been done about styrofoam usage on campus (or is the committee not concerned with the depleting ozone layers)?

2. What has been done to ensure asbestos is not being leached by student and employee alike?

3. What has been done to ensure Harper is radon free?

4. What has been done to assure that the food offered in the Dining Hall is healthy (low fat, low sodium, low sugar)? A giant in the food business such as Cantor Corporation must have healthy, good tasting foods available. Are they being offered on campus? Why not? Some of the "light choice/right choice" selections would seem to be questionable, even when they are offered.

It has become obvious that the Environmental Health and Safety Committee has chosen an area in which it feels it can achieve. Personally, I would like to see the same concern and effort with respect to the above-mentioned items.

What is the committee trying to prove? "Overpopulation"? Governor Thompson has already passed legislation with regard to a Clean Air Act with the stipulation that future rulings not be any more severe than those signed into law. Is the committee trying to "one up" the governor with this bill and ensure Harper makes a big time splash in its health and safety goals?

There are obvious areas the committee and Harper people should be concerned with but no smoking indoors is not one of those issues. We already have restricted smoking areas. The committee could better use its time trying to solve any and/or all of other potential problem areas.

State of the Earth

Don't worry, be active

By Fayetta Fabros
Staff Writer

Take a look at the facts. Every year 3.5 billion tons of solid waste are dumped on our land. This includes seven million cars and 100 million tires. A whopping 214 million tons of smoke, soot and fumes are blown into the air. Sewage and industrial wastes are being pumped into our waterways at the rate of 2 million gallons per second. This is all in the United States alone.

Awareness of the pollution problem is not enough. As the Santa Barbara Declaration of Environmental Rights puts it, "We must find the courage to take upon ourselves, responsibility for the welfare of the whole environment, treating our own backyard as if it were the world as if it were our own back yard." The future quality of life on this planet, including the quality of the air we breathe and the water we drink, depends largely on the efforts of individuals such as yourself.

There are many things you can do to help that don't require any money, power or political influence. Here is a small list of the numerous ways you can help save the environment:

1. Don't litter and discourage your friends from littering. There is absolutely no excuse for your garbage to end up anywhere else than in a waste receptacle.

2. Avoid using or buying disposable products, especially plastic. These include drinking straws, plastic bags, throw-away cups, plates, eating utensils, disposable diapers, plastic shavers, plastic finger nail and soft drinks in non-returnable containers.

3. Recycle your paper, glass, and aluminum. Call your city hall to find out what kind of recycling facilities your town has available.

4. Don't use aerosol sprays. These include hairspray, air fresheners, disinfectants, cleaners, paints and deodorants.

5. Don't smoke.

6. Walk, use public transportation or carpool when possible.

7. Buy a fuel-efficient car and maintain it properly. Also, don't let your engine idle unnecessarily, avoid quick starts and stops.

8. Use a shopping bag. To avoid the unnecessary collection of numerous small plastic bags, especially when shopping at malls like Woodfield.

9. Don't use colored paper products and toilet tissue. Dyes harm fish and other aquatic life, and colored paper is not recyclable.

10. Elect and support political candidates that represent conservation reforms.

If you're concerned about the environment and would like to learn more, enroll in BIO 103, Man and Environment next semester. It is a very worthwhile class that examines environmental issues, problems, and solutions.

Bonnie Koloc performs to sold out show

Big city gal relates to college students

By Sandra Stewart
Staff Writer

Although Bonnie Koloc hasn't been a regular performer in the Chicago area for a number of years, she still has loyal fans willing to come out on a cold, snowy night to hear her sing. The full house obviously appreciated Koloc's talent, rewarding her with a standing ovation when she performed at Harper last Friday night.

Her voice remained the same, the clear soprano that was Koloc's vehicle to fame in the 60's and 70's when she was generally recognized as the top folk singer in Chicago's Old Town. She performed songs from her latest Flying Fish album, With You On My Side, as well as some originals. Her band included accompanists Rick Snyder on keyboards, John Bany on bass, Phil Grateau on drums and Steve Eisen on the saxophone. The music ranged from jazz to blues.

After the show, Koloc talked about the changes in her life since she left Chicago. She is proud of her recent graduation from the University of Northern Iowa with a degree in Art and a teacher's certificate. Koloc explained, "teaching is the most important job in the world. It's also the most underpaid, undervalued, and underappreciated." She went on to say that although she is certified to teach, "I don't think I want to teach, but I would really like to be involved as an artist in residence, combining music and art."

Talking about returning to school as an adult student, Koloc said, "I never thought I would ever do it. When I did, it was like it wasn't real. I got the diploma and framed it and hung it on the wall in my little studio. It feels great!" Now she is thinking of going on to get a Masters Degree in Fine Arts. She would also like to combine some of her visual arts with the lyrics from her music into books.

Koloc also has a new marriage and a new home in Nashville, where she moved to be close to the record industry. While she still loves Chicago, she said, "I don't want to live in the big city any more. I'll still come back to do shows but I need to be in the country. I like to be able to get in my car and just drive."

Asked about how she felt about the new directions in her life, Koloc explained, "You only change on the outside. You just know a little more and you get a few wrinkles. Inside, that 20 year old still exists."

Musical Notes

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

All ratings out of 5 stars.

G-Force by Greater Than One

The latest release from Greater Than One is an unfocused collection of computerized noise. Some of the samples and sounds are interesting but that doesn't make any of it worth listening to more than a couple of times. It's not much of an improvement over their last album either, but has the benefit of being only a single album and therefore much shorter. G-Force is not really worth the bother. **

A Hard Day's Knight by aGRUMH...

The record cover has a photo of a CD while the CD cover has a photo of an album as well as the title A Hard Knight's Day. The two Belgian men who are known as aGRUMH... have always had a warped sense of humor which comes across better in their liner notes than their music. Much like the Greater Than One, A Hard Day's Knight is unfocused and meandering, never settling on one strong melody or lyric. It makes it an extremely forgettable album and far inferior to earlier releases from the same artist. **

Games of Love by The Neon Judgement

Hot on the heels of the release of their so-so album, NJ release a 12" EP containing a few new songs plus a special mix of the latest single Games of Love. The A-side is pretty good but there's nothing that really stands out on the EP. Undoubtedly worth a look for Neon Judgement fans but otherwise I'd save my money, or buy a superior NJ 12" like Chaise Black. 1/2

Wreck by Wreck

A new Chicago group produced by Steve Albini, Wreck is more along the lines of a Sub-Pop recording artist than a Wax Trax one. The four songs presented on their debut EP are not too bad. A copy of this record would sit nicely between a Pailhead and a Lard. Wreck could be a lot more interesting if they add a little samples or keyboards. 1/2 aGRUMH...

No Name, No Slogan by Acid Horse

The same song appears on both sides of this new 12" single but they are utterly different. The version on side two was produced by Cabaret Voltaire where as side one was produced by Hypo Laxa and Hermes Pan (aka Alan Jourgensen and Paul Barker of Ministry). Side one is a good dance track. The vocalists sound like the same one from the last Laxa/Pan production (PTP's Rubber Glove Seduction). Side two is worthless, overlong, and boring. ***

Decent by Noise Unit

The best of the bunch, this debut 12" single from Noise Unit is a very good industrial song. Noise Unit is actually Bill Leeb from Front Line Assembly and Mark Verhagen from The Kikab. The Front Line Assembly sound strengthens Decent with its familiar crackling percussion while the B-side Sirius carries Noise Unit away from danceability but not listenability. A Noise Unit album will follow soon and, if this single is any indication, will be worth a look. 1/2

Mike on Movies

By Mike Schweishelmer
Harbinger Movie Critic

If the word overemotional applies to any film, it applies to Stanley and Iris. In the course of a single movie, Director Martin Ritt attempted to deal with adult literacy, teenage pregnancy, the death of a spouse, and the death of a parent. None of these important and timely subjects were covered with the thoroughness they need and deserve.

The main point the film focused on was Stanley (Robert DeNiro). He was a middle-aged man who never learned how to read. He spent his childhood traveling with his father, a salesman, and never stayed in a single school for any length of time. He goes through jobs by the dozens because of his problem, and finally asks for the assistance of Iris (Jane Fonda). With Iris' help, he learns at an obviously unrealistic pace, and becomes almost instantly successful using his talents for inventing.

The shame and difficulty of learning to read late in life was never dealt with. Also, Stanley's "instant" success was a little hard to believe. It seemed the movie wanted to work out perfectly because Stanley learned how to read.

The film did not hesitate to bring in more difficult subjects through Iris. A recent widow, she is coping with her husband's death, and taking care of her family. Iris' problem of allowing herself to be interested in other men was passed off quickly and painlessly because her emotions were never dealt with. One moment she was unwilling to accept her husband's death, and the next she was in love with Stanley. Iris' family, whose characters were never developed beyond what they look like, was another route to bring up complicated issues. Her teenage daughter becomes pregnant.

This was dealt with in only one scene where Iris talks of having an unwanted child. After the baby was born, the issue was dropped and everything was fine.

Of course, the writers couldn't pass up introducing more tragedy. Stanley's father died in a state home for the elderly. Stanley cries when he finds out, but only mentions it again in passing.

For a film with such emotionally charged subjects, it managed to avoid showing any feelings. As a matter of fact, it showed emotion only three times: when Stanley learns of his father's death, in a triumphant scene in a library when Stanley suddenly gets the hang of reading, and when he proposes to Iris. Except for DeNiro's performance (the only redeeming quality), the film had the emotional depth of the average houseplant. In contrast to DeNiro, Fonda's performance was flat and dry.

Besides the tremendous faults in the story, the movie was a failure in the realm of the film media. The durtcut was like stale crackers, boring and lacking flavor. There was about two minutes of pointless screen time spent watching people walk down the street carrying groceries. The film also lacked continuity. For instance, in one scene Iris permits her hair. When we see her again, she is with Stanley, it looks the same, and he comments on it. There were several other incidents where the film became hard to follow.

These aspects, coupled with the unbearably slow-moving story, made Stanley and Iris seem like a bad "made for TV movie." The only reason that I am giving this film one star is for DeNiro's performance in this facet of a film. He managed to express emotion despite the two-dimensional feel of the whole movie.

Ladies may go for the league title

By Lou Nemer
Guest Writer

Head Coach Tom Teschner and the Lady Hawks are close to achieving a Harper first—a 20 win regular season topped off by a NAC Conference Championship. The team's current standing of 19-7 regular, 9-2 NAC play is a tribute to the hard work by all this season. The Hawks hope to peak at the upcoming Region IV Tournament, at which they are seeded #3. "It's in our own hands," stated Coach Teschner.

Last week the results were mixed. The Lady Hawks prevailed over the DuPage Chapparals (5-16, 2-6) in a 61-49 win Tuesday. The Chapparals held a 31-21 lead early in the second half, but the Hawks came back with a 23-2 run to win. Amy Kozal led the scoring with 28 points, followed by Stephanie Garcia with 18.

Against the two-time defending NAC and Region IV champion Moraine Valley Marauders (16-10, 8-2) the Lady Hawks lost 64-52. The Hawks had closed an 18 point deficit to only four points when foul trouble forced Stephanie Garcia, Patty Canchola and Carolyn Crowley out of the game. After that, the Marauders ran up ten unanswered points to put the contest away. Crowley led the way for Harper with 17 points, Kozal followed with 14.

Tonight the Lady Hawks will be hosting Triun, with a tip-off time of 5 pm. Harper needs to win this game in order to gain a share of the title of the league title.

The men sing the basketball blues

By John Brinckerhoff
Staff Writer

The Harper basketball team has been handed two tough losses in the past week. The first one against DuPage, ranked third in the nation, stunned the Hawks 91-66 last Tuesday. However, the Hawks fought Moraine Valley, ranked seventh in the nation, to the finish in a losing cause, 74-67.

To sum up the general feeling afterward, Coach Kastner said, "We struggled offensively."

The Hawks worked the ball well in the first half's opening moments. They looked inside to George Dilles and Derek Murray and kept pace 9-7 with 13:37 left in the half. A lot of the shots just were not falling for the Hawks, and Moraine Valley gradually pulled away for a 13-21 half time lead.

Harper came storming back in the second half to pull within 3 points on a Dilles basket, 37-34, six minutes into the second half. Harper increased its offensive rebounding production during the surge with Murray grabbing 4 for the game.

Harper and Moraine Valley traded baskets during the later stages of the game. Then Harper's Paul Combs and Murray fouled out with less than a minute left. In addition, Dilles had picked up his fourth foul earlier in the contest, so Moraine Valley went on to win.

Coach Kastner said, "I knew that they (Moraine Valley) would come ready to play because we beat them at their gym." Moraine Valley is now 23-5 overall and 6-4 in the conference. The Hawks are 17-11, 5-6 in conference play and have exceeded a lot of people's expectations this season.

Football program being examined

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-Chief
and Lisa Aust
Managing Editor

An internal investigation of Harper's football program is being conducted, despite the school's dropping Juan Taylor's charges.

IV Section Wide Receiver, accused Head Coach John Eliasik of benching him for personal reasons last semester. He was loaned from Eliasik and Mike Henzley, receivers coach. Several players witnessed money exchanging hands.

Taylor resided in an apartment managed by Eliasik and owned by Eliasik's sister, Libby Pearson. Taylor admits to falling behind in rent payments and he moved out without paying.

John Gelch, the Dean of the Physical Education, Athletics and Recreation Division, revealed the investigation to be an outgrowth of the Taylor complaint. According to Gelch, the investigation will clarify some of the issues as the charges cannot be substantiated.

Smoking ban

By Lisa Aust
Managing Editor

Smokers may have to practice their daily habit outside this summer.

The Board of Trustees heard the first reading of the proposed Wellness Committee and the Committee last Thursday. The change would restrict the use of these (smoking) materials to areas outside college buildings and vehicles.

Several petitions were presented to the Board from various departments and groups. The Liberal Arts Department proposed smoking ban, while the Business and Social Science Department presented one in favor of a ban.

Arguments from both sides covered the rights of smokers and non-smokers, the need to present a good image to students and the community and personal preferences.

Board Member Coste suggested the creation of an alternative solution, such as a well ventilated smoking area.

Harbinger places third in national competition

By Alicia Chisholm
Assistant Managing Editor

The Harbinger won a third place award for Front Page News Coverage at the Sixth Annual National Conference for the College Press in San Francisco on February 16. This Best of Show Competition gave the Harbinger a chance to be judged on the quality of its work in the two-year college non-daily division.

Harbinger staff members and Advisor Jon Osman attended a luncheon where guest speaker, Larry Kramer, Managing Editor of the San Francisco Examiner, took an amusing look at newspapers by examining blazer headlines and stories.

"We learned a lot of helpful hints at the journalism sessions were informative, and the things we learned will help us to improve the Harbinger and strengthen our staff."

This April the Harbinger will be competing at state level for Best in State, an award that is only given to the college paper in competition. Points are determined by the number of awards received from individual categories.

Last year the Harbinger placed second, only being outscored by the College of DuPage.

Dolphin; a high price to pay

By Marc Balke
Staff Writer

Despite the pleas of many students and faculty to save the dolphins, tuna remains a popular food item at cafeterias.

Canteen Corporation, which owns and operates Harper's cafeteria, joins the many schools who continue to serve tuna without regard to the thousands of dolphin's lives that are lost when netted with tuna.

Currently Canteen uses Starkist as its main source for tuna. Starkist is one of Greenpeace's main targets in its ongoing battle to reduce the death of dolphins.

Since 1959, the tuna fishing industry has killed an estimated 6.5 million dolphins in the setting nets around dolphin herds to catch schools of tuna swimming underneath. Close to 100,000 dolphins are killed annually in the domestic and foreign purse seine fleets.

Until 1950 tuna were individually caught by small fishing boats. They were caught by hand.

Today the tuna industry uses huge vessels in pursuit of tuna. These vessels are equipped with explosives, helicopters, speedboats and nets up to 4000 feet long. The nets are closed by a draw string, allowing nothing to escape.

Yellowfin tuna, the largest, is the most sought tuna. Frequently these tuna swim with dolphins, making the dolphins by drowning while being caught in the nets.

Harper along with other colleges serves yellowfin tuna. This low quality tuna is inexpensive to purchase and is most often used by schools with cafeteria or lunch programs.

Bridging the international gap

By Alina Chisholm
Assistant Managing Editor

They are like most students. They go to classes, participate in campus activities, and enjoy Harper College. They dress like us and try to speak our language. The only thing setting them apart is that Harper students are not just from foreign countries. They are from all over the world. They are the International Students Club.

Some of the students are already enrolled in education programs designed to teach them the basics of listening, speaking, reading, writing, grammar, vocabulary, pronunciation and American culture. Toward the end of the program, they are encouraged to join other college classes.

"A lot of the students are home-sick," said Hansen. "They left their families to come to the United States. They feel lonely and need something to fill the void in their lives. They need to know that someone cares."

The International Students

Club was created ten years ago by Anshu Karanli to fill that void. Karanli, a native of Turkey, saw the need to establish a club to help foreign students adjust to American life. Students could belong to a non-academic club based on friendship and cultural exchange between people from different countries.

Called the International Students Club, the club's goal is to bridge the gap between the two cultures. "People from any country can come to join. We could use students in experience, American and non-American, to help others.

"We're to plan activities that everyone can enjoy such as movies, dances, parties, roller skating, open air, international dinners, or a day at a museum."

Even though many of the members do not speak English, language does not appear to be an obstacle. "Club members always seem to be able to communicate," said Hansen. They are both verbal and non-verbal communicators and somehow the message gets across.

Three International Students Club members, Marizsa Alvarez (Mexico), Saban Buttani (Turkey), and Raquel Gomezjarama (Ecuador) share their experiences.

"I graduated from high school seven months ago, and came to the United States to learn English," said Alvarez. "I want to open a jewelry agency in Mexico. I have been studying English from books for two years. I don't know how to speak it. I don't know where I would practice my English."

There is a lot of poverty in Mexico. Boys seven years old often sell goods on the street to raise money for their families. People in the United States have more job opportunities. Boys in the United States don't have to beg for money. They have a better life.

It seems to be a big issue here. My friends never hear anything about it in Mexico. I enjoy being in Harper. My classes are helpful and the people are very nice."

"I have been in the United States for three years," said Buttani. "I hope to work in the Turkish government as an International Advisor."

I decided the best way to study Economics and International Politics was to go to another country and study its culture and language.

"In Turkey, most of the students live with their families and don't have to work. Every year, Turkey exports cotton, tobacco, olive oil, nuts, and vegetables to Middle Eastern countries. A typical salary is only $4,000 a year. There are more job opportunities in the United States."

"I feel good about being in the United States. I have learned a lot in my classes. The American people are very nice. I was even chosen to be in last year's 'What's Who Among International Students'."

Gomezjarama, wife of the Consul General of Ecuador, came to the United States in 1988. Her main task is to learn English. Gomezjarama helps keep track of her husband's appointments and obligations. She stands by her husband's side as he protects the rights of fellow citizens, and encourages good relations between countries.

Gomezjarama notes a difference in the educational systems in Ecuador and the United States. "In Ecuador, all students take the same classes," said Gomezjarama. "In the United States, students have many electives to choose from."

"I think it is important for everyone to learn the language of the host country. It is difficult to survive without it."

"The students come from different cultures and backgrounds," said Hansen. "We will reach out and get along like a big family."

"There are a lot of foreigners on this campus trying to speak English," said Buttani. "Please be patient and do not laugh. We all make mistakes. Don't just think we're dumb. Give us a chance."

80,000 PEOPLE GAVE SOMETHING TO THE IRS THIS YEAR, AND THEY CAN'T WAIT TILL NEXT YEAR TO GIVE AGAIN.

They volunteered their skills to people who needed help doing their taxes. And it made them feel great. They weren't necessary accountants. They were people like you and some staff or group members who have a knack for math and a desire to help others.

Volunteer now. And you'll make someone's taxes less taxing later.

Vigorous training leads to success for world-class kayaker

By Janice Benson
Staff Writer

Harper College student Maya Djerek is somewhat of a celebrity in her hometown of Zemun, two miles outside of Belgrade, the capital of Yugoslavia.

Though Belgrade is not as sizeable as population, roughly a million and a half occupies, it is one of the most pleasant and prominent European capitals. The Federal Parliament building has been the scene of many national and international decisions.

Djerek is the first female member of the kayaking team in Yugoslavia. Successful is the best way to describe her experience.

Djerek was ranked seventh in the world on the junior level in 1988. She was also named the best female athlete in all of Belgrade.

Now, Djerek is a full-time ESL student. She lives with her uncle and cousins and finds American schools more appealing. The instructors are supportive and more willing to listen and help.

"I'm here to learn English and see what American schools are like," said Djerek.

The kayak itself is enchanting. The closed deck and variable cockpit make it literally unsteerable, even in the highest waves. Kayaks are typically for single paddling and have no room for extra passengers.

Not just anyone can be a kayaker. One must be in supreme physical condition. A weak or inexperienced paddler may not be able to uphold the pace or handle their boat in turbulent water.

Effective training programs are based on physiologically and psychologically sound principles which aim to gradually improve and eventually maximize the importance of paddling, strength, endurance, stamina and power.

Djerek went through a vigorous training program to prepare for her world competition. A typical day of training included five to ten kilometers of running, 20 km. of rowing and an intense weight-training session. She did this seven days a week.

Now, Djerek is working hard as a student. She would love to become a U.S. citizen some day. Her future plans include finding a club to train for another world competition and possibly the 1992 Olympic Games.

Djerek is adjusting to life in America with ease. She loves eggs, waffles and pizza, so she should fit right in. Masakna and Paula Abdul are her favorite American performers.

"My dream was always to go to an American school, and now I'm here," said Djerek. "I think America is the best country in the world."

Health Corner

March is National Nutrition Month

It's easier than you think to eat sensibly. You need to make small changes like cutting out large amounts of fat and cholesterol from your diet. Be sure to include enough calories and nutrients to ensure good health. The following are some helpful tips.

Stock the pantry with low-fat munchies such as graham crackers, popcorn, low-salt pretzels, fig bars, animal crackers, ginger snaps and vanilla wafers.

Satisfy a sweet tooth with frozen juice and fruit bars, look for varieties that carry no added cream.

Substitute bagels lightly spread with jam for doughnuts.

Substitute freshly ground turkey for ground beef in meat loaf, chili and casseroles.

Look for lean, well-trimmed beef in the meat counter. Cuts from the round and flank steak typically contain less fat.

Remove the skin from chicken and cut key before cooking or at least before eating.

Choose cooking techniques that help keep fat to a minimum, such as baking, broiling, roasting or searing.

Steer clear of snack products that contain highly saturated oils, such as coconut, palm or palm kernel.

Angel food cake has no cholesterol and only trace amounts of fat. Eat it with dried strawberries or peaches.

Mix chopped fruits with low-fat vanilla or lemon yogurt or 1% low-fat cottage cheese for a light meal or snack.

Eat rainbow sherbet, soft-serve ice milk, or frozen yogurt instead of ice cream, which is higher in fat.

Whenever possible, finish off meals the European way — with fresh fruit for dessert. Frozen banana slices or grapes make a refreshing treat.

Zap a baked potato in the microwave for a quick, hot snack. Top potatoes with plain low-fat milk and sprinkle with chives or Parmesan cheese.

Gradually make the transition to lower-fat dairy products: 2% low-fat milk, 1% low-fat, skim milk, low-fat and non-fat yogurt.

Utilize low-fat cheeses. Substituting one ounce of part-skim Mozzarella cheese for one ounce of Cheddar cuts saturated fat by more than three grams and dietary cholesterol by fourteen milligrams.

Eat oatmeal for breakfast on occasion. The soluble fiber in oats can help lower blood cholesterol. Add raisins and cinnamon to dress it up.

In Mexican meals, use beans in place of meat. The amount of protein will remain high, but fat content will drop dramatically.

Opt for pizza with vegetable toppings rather than high-fat meats such as pepperoni and sausage.

Plan to eat more pasta-based meals and grains like rice and barley. Meat doesn't always need to take center stage.

Replace butter with margarine made with polyunsaturated oils like canola, corn or safflower. Look for margarines that boast liquid oil as the first ingredient rather than a partially hydrogenated one.

Go light on processed meats like bologna, salami and hot dogs. Better sandwiches fillings are slices of roast beef, turkey and lean ham.

Remember, eating better can help you live longer!

Mark's Menagerie

By Mark James
Staff Writer

I happen to have a copy of the proposed change to the Board Policy Manual in my hands. Sections I and II look ok, but I have a few questions on section III. They mention the all-powerful, God-fearing, communist-hating survey again. Amen brothers and sisters!

I still have the same questions about the survey. Who was surveyed? Did it take place on this campus or somewhere else? When did it take place?

I could say I took a survey of smokers and non-smokers, but I'm not spiritual enough to say that talking to about 25 people represents the opinions of 25,000. I will say of those I talked to, about 65% were non-smokers, 95% were in favor of leaving things the way they are, and 100% of them agreed on two things: the way this change is happening is wrong and none of them had ever heard of this survey before it had been "completed".

I disagree with the way this change is taking place. I see two committees on campus attempting to speak for me. (Are they also going to take my classes for me?) I am over 21. I have not lost control of my mental faculties and I am in a coma, so quit putting words in my mouth!

Just because I am a student, it doesn't mean I'm a kid. I've been attacked with chains, a knife, shot at and almost blown up (twice) in defense of the freedom of speech. I'm not losing in the Marine Corps and the censoring that goes with it. Do you think I'm going to let someone else speak for me?

Attention committee members: make this decision "for my own good". I am not your child (think Child's Your high and mighty attitude doesn't belong in a college atmosphere. We are here to learn how to think for ourselves and we learn how to think for ourselves as being regarded. There was something else interesting about section III. At the end it stated, "The second reading and adoption of the policy is scheduled for March 22, 1990."

Let's talk about the indicated word. If I were on the board, and a committee brought something to me that had that statement written on the bottom, I would be incensed. Not only do they think the students and faculty are not intelligent or mature enough to make their own decisions, but the members aren't either.

Where I come from, this type of action, and the actions that have come from this faction for the last year, are called railroads. In the Marine Corps, it was a Sergeant coming down and saying "I need volunteers - you, you and you." I've even been in the reserves anymore, so I stuck your railroad somewhere else.

Let's talk finance for a while. How much does Harper receive from the vending machine people? How much does Harper's cafeteria take in daily? How much will they be receiving when students are no longer buying because they have to go off campus to smoke and study at the same time?

Something else should be considered. This issue is hot as far as the courts are concerned. Precedents are being set in other states. Definitions of smokers' rights are still being promoted by RJ Reynolds, Inc. There are some in authority who would like to put Harper on the front pages. I know of some people who may be willing to assist in this endeavor by, oh, asking RJ for a little hand, like legal assistance. If they, or even the ACLU were to get a hold of it, this would give Harper a very high profile, but it would also put a very large burden on the budget. Legal expenses come high for court cases which could easily take a decade.

These are the costs involved with being a trendsetter. There are also things the "do-gooders" don't want to look at. If it's not there, then they won't have to clean up the mess. They can leave it for the next generation of Harper students.

Oh yeah, before I forget. The first meeting of the whatever-we-want-to-call-ourselves committee will meet on Thursday, March 8 at 12:30 in the smoking section of the cafeteria. See you there. I'll be the smart ass with a cigarette in my hand.

Pop quiz:

Is Harper practicing subtle sexism?

This is a pop quiz on morality. Please take a moment to read the statement below and decide if it is true or false.

Women deserve a week just to themselves. They have accomplished many more good things than any man ever has. Plus, by having a week just for women, society (men) attempts to make up for all of the past injustices women have incurred. This week will make women feel special, educate people on the greatness of womanhood and improve women's images in general.

If you've answered no, then thank you for your attention, you've passed the test. You may now move on to the entertainment pages.

If you've answered yes, then please keep reading.

"Women's History Week" should not be observed. It is a farce. The school did not celebrate Black History Month. Do we have a subtle bit of racism here? Why are women considered more important than other minorities? Why does the school, in general, support a great number of women's studies programs, but dropped the black studies program?

We have been to many "women's seminars" and can tell you from personal experience that they are nothing more than a bitch session about men. This is not productive. It separates the sexes by encouraging women to become distinct from men.

It has been a whole generation since Martin Luther King fought for the rights of the oppressed in this country. It's a sad commentary on our society that many of his plans have not yet been carried through. However, the time has come for us to be judged as equals. I understand that this has not happened in the past, but it's time to move on.

Equality means treating everyone the same. It does not mean granting special services or privileges to certain people on the basis of their sex or the color of their skin. These programs, like most well-intended things, only manage to further define the problem. Under the guise of helping the underling, it only manages to further exclude him or her from the equality that society so desperately needs.

Women have to expect to be excluded from things when they exclude themselves. This is America. Supposedly in this country you either make it or break it on the basis of individuality. Freedom means more than the right to succeed. It also means the right to fail as an individual with our regard to race, creed, sex or family. It's time to take a stand for equality.

We should not observe "Women's Week" because it's devastating for us in the long run. The school should also seriously consider dropping the women's studies programs or consider having a men's studies program. Fair is fair.

In the February 22 issue of the Harbinger, the news story "Senate approves constitutional amendment" named "The Environmental Health and Safety Committee" will be making a recommendation to the Board of Trustees to ban smoking on campus. That was inaccurate, as the Environmental Health and Safety Committee had already made the recommendation to the Board of Trustees to ban smoking on campus. The Board had its first meeting of the proposed amendment on February 22.

Tire fires are hazardous

By Favetta Fabron
Staff Writer

For over two weeks now, 14,000,000 tires have been burning at the Tire King Recycling Center in Hagersville, Ontario, Canada as a result of arson. The fire is producing massive amounts of air, ground and water pollution and generating temperatures as high as 2000 degrees. Hundreds of thousands of gallons of oil are one of the results of this fire. Pumping trucks are being used to collect as much of it as possible, but a great deal will seep into the ground, contaminating groundwater and eventually running off into Lake Erie.

Large scale air pollution is another result of this fire. Huge clouds of thick, black, toxic smoke permeate the sky. Citizens of Hagersville, many without homes because of necessary evacuation, are outraged and concerned about the situation and with good reason. Fires of this kind can last for eight months or longer and could have been prevented. Fire control orders imposed on the owner of the recycling center in 1987 called for several smaller stockpiles with fire lanes in between to be formed rather than having one huge pile, but the orders were never carried out.

Unfortunately, tens of thousands of these hazardous stockpiles exist in the U.S. without any regulation. Only 13 states have any fire-prevention legislation regarding these piles. This is a problem especially because the number of tire fires has doubled in the past few years. In 1986 there were 46 fires, in 1989 there were 87 fires.

What is needed is more and quicker recycling. Tires should not accumulate in numbers such as 14,000,000, in a single pile. Tires can be used to make fuel and create better quality roads. Mixed with ground glass and asphalt, tires make roads more flexible and resistant to cracks and potholes. Also, tires can be made to last longer, or old tires can be reused.

If more precautionary measures aren't taken, environmental disasters like these will not only kill our world, but kill us as well.

Letters to the Editor

An open letter to smokers

Three cheers for concerned, fair-minded smokers and non-smokers who spoke with the voice of reason and compassion at the February 22, 1990 meeting of the Harper College Board of Trustees.

The Board appeared considerate and open-minded in listening to our pleas. Their actions indicate a disposition to seek a solution which would prevent smokers being thrown out of doors to smoke, as advocated by some under the false banner of role-modeling.

With this manifest good-will, it is now especially important for all smokers in the Harper Community to show our regard for non-smoking colleagues by observing as strictly as possible the current regulations regarding smoking indoors. It would not do well to offend the Good Samaritans. Let us all work for accommodation in this matter.

Larry Kent

Ad Hoc Committee on Fairness to Smokers

Help reduce source pollution

Dear Editors,

Concerning your proposals for a cleaner, healthier campus: Instead of castrating the male students, why can't we just gag and plug the females? This too would reduce sexually transmitted diseases as well as serve as a source reduction of much pollution.

A. R. Varquez

Smokers have rights too

I have never smoked in my life. I, however, would never deny the rights of others to smoke. Harper College is an institution that promotes rational decision making, and individualism. It is not rational to deny the rights of students and others to smoke on this campus. That is not rationality, it's something else.

Just as I choose not to smoke, others choose to smoke. There is absolutely no justification for non-smokers to ostracize their self-declared "superiority" on those who choose to smoke. Smoking is a right. It is not illegal. I am sick and tired of listening to the horns and haws of the non-smokers who are going to the front breasting passive smoke. Too bad the smokers are so inferior to you! Why don't the non-smokers who are breathing these TOXIC FUMES step outside to breathe? Gee, I wouldn't want to inconvenience you though. You know, we may try to pass a ruling on this.

Those of you on this "sapp smoking on campus" bandwagon might want to get back in touch with just what this institution tries to promote. Then maybe you'll see the light.

Jesus freaks on campus

Dear Mr. Editor,

I have another complaint to add to the grape list of Harper Students. One fine Tuesday afternoon a while back, I was sitting in A Bld. doing some home work when I got some unwanted visitors. We talked a bit, then we left. Well, this last week, one of them returned and bugged the shit out of me. He was one of those religious freaks who have a club here at school.

I'm not against religion, but if I don't want to listen to them, why do I have to? I told him that I don't buy this religion stuff. I told him he was wasting his time. That didn't stop him, he just sat down, whipped out his bible and read it to me. It was almost like a bedtime story, except Snow White is more believable.

He explained to me why "we" call

God "our Father," like I care.

He told me something happens when we accept Jesus into our heart and blood. He didn't tell me what, but I know. We all go blind with stupidity because we think God will fix it all. If that's true, why didn't my parents get remarried when my brother and I prayed for that, or why didn't my Grandfather live to be eighty years old? I mean, what the hell? We prayed our rear off for that man.

If for somebody else wants to repent for our sins, why don't we just go to them instead?

He told me he'd pray for me, like I give a hoot.

I know I don't speak for everyone, but these are my feelings. If he wants to pray for me fine. Pray that I make the school baseball team.

'The Simpsons' hit prime time

By Joe Stachler
Staff Writer

The world of animated entertainment is experiencing a steady comeback. Both Walt Disney's The Little Mermaid and animator Don Bluth's All Dogs Go To Heaven, released in 1989, received highly favorable reviews.

Fox Television has a new weekly cartoon show called The Simpsons. The show started as a mini-show featured on The Tracey Uhlman Show. Producer James L. Brooks apprised cartoonist Matt Groening, best known for his School is Hell book, about creating animated shorts for the show. Together they created the Simpson family, whose first names are connected from Groening's own family.

The mini-shorts were immensely popular, so Groening decided to create a complete series of shows for prime-time slots. Not since the Flintstones or the Jacksons has there been an animated show scheduled in a prime-time slot. The Simpsons air every Sunday evening at 7:30 pm on channel 32. The show can also be seen before several newly released movies at the cinema and at the beginning of several CBS/Fox Video Movies (one of the few things actually worth watching, compared to the usual barrage of commercials and trailers of coming attractions.)

For those just tuning in, the Simpson family consists of the father Homer, who works at the local nuclear power plant; Marge the mild-mannered mother and wife, sporting a three foot tall hairstyle; a son Bart, a smart-talking fourth grade delinquent whose name was inspired by the word "brat"; Lisa, the intelligent and studious second grader who plays a mean saxophone; and Maggie, the adventurous baby whose main purpose in life is to suck continuously on a pacifier. The Simpsons live in the peculiar town of Springfield, among equally strange people.

Electric Phase

By Eric Jason
Staff Writer

Joe Satriani, guitarist whose breakthrough album Surfing With the Alien helped redefine and revive instrumental rock n' roll, has returned with his second studio release called Flying in a Blue Dream.

The new album continues most of the instrumental ideas of the first album, with energetic pieces like One Big Rush and the Merzbow/Psitt-head Groove Thing. Dream also has Satriani experimenting with a more bluesy Like Feeling and Phone Call, and even soul Stranger, which express his wide range of guitar versatility.

The biggest surprise is the addition of vocals, by Satriani himself, into the music. Satriani's singing is not the best, but he pulls it off on Ride and Big Bad Moon.

The only downer song on Dream is Believe which has Satriani singing without feeling or direction.

Dream keeps you entertained mostly by the mood and the off the cuff unpredictability of Satriani's guitar. From the experimental and harmonically weird Headless to the upbeat bar room blues of Phone Call, Dream has a little something for everyone.

Overall, Flying in a Blue Dream is a good follow up to Surfing with the Alien mostly because of the instrumentals. The songs with vocals are acceptable only because of the great guitar riffs written for them. Because Dream is so guitar oriented, it works well to further define the great playing of Satriani.

Harbinger Music Dictionary

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

"Okay, Steve. I liked your review, but I have just one question—what the heck is 'industrial music'?"

If I had a hot ticket last week for every person who asked me that one question, I might have won the grand prize (but I would still be checking my tickets).

It's a fair question, but one that can be adapted to any form of music. What is "punk"? What is "house"? What is "country"? Just what exactly is "rock"? When I discovered that I couldn't collect enough of my thoughts to write a record review this week, I decided to tackle some musical definitions once and for all. Next time a record review mentions a certain style of music you can just check your Harbinger Music Dictionary for a definition. This is presented as a useful public service to the Harper College community.

Metals

There are varying degrees of metal. There is thrash, or speed metal, which is identified by a BPM (beats per minute) count that goes off the scale in addition to highly repetitive power chords from extremely noisy and distorted guitars. A popular example would be Megadeth. There is also a milder form of metal which seems to be all the rage for the high school set these days, typified by such acts as Iron Maiden, Metallica, and Slayer.

Punk

There's really no such thing these days, at least not like it used to be. Today the closest thing is actually a hybrid of many styles, the most prominent being thrash. The term "hardcore" is used when talking about today's punk equivalent.

Rock

The most generic of all, this basically describes anything that involves guitars, bass, drums, and keyboards, or any possible combination of the three. There is hard rock, which is a mild (read: wimpy) form of metal. Examples include Warrant and Guns 'n' Roses. There is also power pop, which is close to hard rock but more sentimental. Even more specific is corporate rock, this subgenre includes artists such as Bon Jovi and Whitesnake. It's basically power pop with a huge profit margin. There's light rock, exemplified by Elton John and others; you get the idea. Of course we can't forget classic rock, which would include such overrated, overplayed, and generally overpaid bands as the Beatles, the Rolling Stones, the Who, and Led Zeppelin. Classic rock radio stations are the worst offenders of musical stagnation, simply recycling the same AOR (Album Oriented Rock) staples over and over again, taking them well beyond a dignified death. I'm not saying that the music wasn't vital in its day, but this is not its day any more.

Jazz

Jazz is a very respectable musical genre. I have no complaints against jazz, just against free-form jazz. A sort of jazz like is new age music, the most boring form of music known to man. New age music is for people who just want something in the background, something to go in one ear and out the other without getting tangled in any synapses...without having to actually listen to it.

Alternative

Once known as new wave, then progressive, and now occasionally as college rock, alternative music embraces a vast number of styles in fresh-sounding hybrids. Major alternative bands are utilizing the mainstream more often these days. Groups like the Smiths, the Cure and U2 are making music with the intellectual substance that college-age people prefer. Some subgenres of music that fall under the alternative banner are industrial and gothic.

Industrial music is typically heavy on keyboards, strong drumbeats, unusual percussion noises (like metal clanking), samples from sources other than music (i.e. movies and television), and often deliberately unintelligible and/or heavily distorted vocals. Popular industrial bands are Front 242, Ministry, Skinny Puppy, and Nitzer Ebb. Gothic music is very bass-heavy, very dark and forbidding, and often depressing. Gothic bands such as the Sisters of Mercy, Fields of the Nephilim, and Missina UK are the mainstays.

Some alternative music is best named by record labels such as Was Trax or Sub-Pop. In other words, these labels have a distinct common sound in their artists. Sub-Pop type music would include Sonic Garden and Mudhoney. (Both heavily influenced by Led Zeppelin and late period punk.) Was Trax music is mostly industrial. A-D music is best described using adjectives like lush, glowing, beautiful, and moody. Some of the best A-D bands are Cocteau Twins, Dead Can Dance, and the Wolfgang Press.

Rap

Big enough these days to warrant a description entirely on its own, rap music is a dramatic, a repetitive and very little else. Rap musicians don't need to have any talent whatsoever because the music is made by machines or sometimes even lifted from other songs, and the lyrics are spoken, not sung. Though the lyrics can sometimes be topical, more often than not they are about sex.

House

House is dance music and nothing else. It's the most boring dance music in existence, featuring not much more than a deep thumping bass drum at 120 BPM. All house music sounds alike, so when mixed together at a dance it's as if you're hearing one song that's four hours long. Most embarrassing of all is that house music seems to have originated in Chicago.

Regional

There are some types of music that are best categorized by their place of origin, such as Irish rock (the Pogues, That Petrol Emotion), Seattle rock (basically the same as Sub-Pop), Athens Georgia rock (R.E.M., Pylon, etc.) and so on.

Classical

You all know what classical music is. Bach, Beethoven, Bartok. Classical music has an advantage over all other styles of music in that it will never ever sound dated. Try listening to WFMT instead of WLUP sometime when you're stuck in a traffic jam. There are actually modern bands that make albums that are deeply rooted in classical music, bands such as In the Nursery and even Laibach could have their most recent releases on display in the classical section of a record store.

Pop

One of the most misunderstood musical genres is pop. The word pop, when used to describe one style of music, encompasses artists such as Liza Minnelli, Barbra Streisand, Neil Diamond, and Tony Bennett. This does not explain the use of the word pop when used in a sentence such as "Song Title is a perfect pop song." In this case, pop takes on its literal meaning, which is simply an abbreviation for popular. In other words, Song Title has all the hallmarks of becoming a hugely popular song.

Swing

The Big Band Sound. Nobody ever did it better than Glen Miller.

Polka

Oh, come on now. You know what a polka is, even if you wish you didn't.

Disco

Disco, contrary to popular belief, never died. It lives on in most modern dance music, particularly house music. Today's version of disco is not nearly as hokey as the late seventies' version. Even respectable bands such as New Order still sound like disco now and again. What did die was the use of the word disco.

Country

Exemplified by the song title "My Baby Left Me But I'm Happy Because I've Got Gu My Beer And My Ford Pickup." Slide guitar and southern accents abound in country music. It's still quite an inescapably popular style of music.

Theme

The music you hear at the end of something. Can you hear it?

Women's History Week celebrated on campus

By Sandra Stewart
Staff Writer

Women's History Week will be celebrated at Harper College during the week of March 5. Since women have traditionally not been included in history, this observance focuses attention on the contributions they have made.

Beth Homer

Sharon Alter, Professor of History and Political Science at Harper, has chaired the Program Committee of the Women's History Week Committee since 1980. She will also be a featured speaker during the week.

Alter described the week as an "attempt to put women into history." She explained that it is not for women only, "since the history of one sex is related to the history of the other sex."

This year's program offers some exciting and controversial topics. The program begins March 5 with a reception and dinner featuring Helen Thomas, United Press International White House Bureau Chief, as keynote speaker. Thomas will discuss "Women, Politics and the Press."

Free seminars begin on Monday with women and the military.

Tuesday will feature women's history as told in song and story followed by an evening program discussing women as heads of nations.

Thursday's program will deal with the anatomy of women with discussions on birth control, abortion and sex as a legal classification.

Some of the week's presenters will include actress Carolyn Stittman, Beth Homer, a folk singer and storyteller, and Linda Rodemaker, who will portray Margaret Sanger.

Noting that in past years most of the people who have attended Women's History Week have been adults from the community, Alter remarked, "my hope is that the topics this year are of interest to students and that many more students come. I hope these programs help people to learn about women's contributions historically as well as the status of women as a group. I hope to open dialogue for further discussion and evaluation."

For more information regarding any of the programs, contact the Harper Women's Program at 397-3800, extension 2560.

Helen Thomas will speak to kick off Women's History Week.

Co op programs give hands-on experience

By Jamie Beeson
Staff Writer

If you are uncertain about a major, a career or even your future, then career cooperative is for you.

The Career Cooperative coordinates career training programs for students in High School Districts 211 and 214, Barrington Community Schools District 230 and Harper College.

By linking education to business and industry throughout the Northwest Suburbs, the Career Cooperative also provides opportunities for job placement, career changes and skill development for career advancement.

"Our main focus is to better meet the needs of business and industry by having better trained workers," said Pamela Block, manager.

All of Harper's career programs are listed in the bulletin, which can be found in the student development center in Building 1.

The only requirement is that students meet the admission requirements. The completed career program is equivalent to an Associate in Applied Science Degree.

For example, you want to get into refrigeration and air conditioning technology. Harper offers a two-year technical program focusing on theory and hands-on philosophy.

Graduates may be employed as engineering laboratory assistants, equipment salespeople, heating and refrigeration servicemen or stationary engineers.

The chief benefit of Harper's career programs is that graduates are better prepared to enter a job at a higher level than someone who has had no training. Local businesses are recognizing this fact, and many look to recruit graduates of such programs.

For more information, contact your counselor or call the Career Cooperative at 397-3300, extension 301.

Regional win for Hawk swimmers

By Sharon Ege and Jeff Smith
Guest Writers

The men's swim team won regionals at College of DuPage this past weekend while the women put forth a great effort and took fourth place.

The pace was set by Todd O'Brien in the first event of the meet. With an amazing time drop, he won the event. O'Brien also won the 200 freestyle and placed fourth in the 100 freestyle.

The pace was continued by Jeff O'Brien who won both the 100 and 200 yard breaststroke. O'Brien received a third in the 200 IM and a best time, while teammate Pete Konar placed second. Konar also placed second in the 100 and 200 yard backstroke.

Brian Brown did very well, placing third in both the 200 breaststroke and the 400 IM. Brown placed second in the 100 fly, just touching out teammate Tom McAvoy, who also placed third in the 200 fly and fourth in the 50 free.

In the freestyle events, Jim Pardon and Phil Yurtis were neck and neck. Yurtis touched out Pardon in the 1650 and the 500, however, Pardon touched out Yurtis in the 200 free.

Great swimmers were also put forth by Josh Ranieri. Ranieri placed well in the 50 free and in the 200 free, while getting a best time in the 100 free.

Another awesome Hawk swimmer is Ron Paulick. Paulick received fifth place and two best times in the 100 back and the 200 back. Paulick also swam the 50 free, where he placed seventh.

Last but not least, Mike Cadell added the finishing touches to the guys' victory. Cadell placed eighth in the 100 breaststroke, eleventh in the 500 free, and a whopping sixth in the 1650.

The men showed no mercy in the relays. The 800 free relay consisting of Yurtis, Smith, Pardon, and O'Brien was victorious along with the 400 medley relay of Konar, Smith, McAvoy, and O'Brien. McAvoy, Pardon, Konar, and O'Brien topped off the meet by winning the 400 free relay by a hair.

Despite the lack of swimmers, the women's team scored some major points. Sharon Ege had the point scoring machine by placing second in the 400 IM and 1650, plus an amazing third in the 200 back.

The next biggest scorer was Yamilie Reith. Reith placed fifth in the 200 IM, seventh in the 1650, and eleventh in the 200 free.

Erica Miranda, a strong force, swam the 200 free and placed ninth. She also swam the 50 and the 100 free and placed eighth in both. Cindy Hubble also swam the 50 free in which she placed tenth.

Hubble placed fifth in the 100 back, place sixth in the 200 back, and received all best times. Laurie Fredrickson placed tenth in the 100 free and contributed to the fourth place 400 free relay, with Sharon Ege, Cindy Hubble, and Erica Miranda. The 800 free relay and the 400 medley relay consisted of Reith, Miranda, Hubble, and Ege.

Nationals will be held March 7-10 in Grand Rapids, Michigan and the following are representing Harper: Smith, O'Brien, Pardon, Brown, McAvoy, Konar, and Ege.

Wrestlers fare well at nationals

Results of tournament 'no disgrace' for Harper's team

By John Reinkerhoff
Staff Writer

It was "One of the best and one of the toughest tournaments," according to Harper wrestling coach, Norm Lovelace. They were a host of All-Americans at the Region IV National tournament in Bismarck, North Dakota. Three of them were from Harper: Jason Finucane, Eric Bakley and Walter Sanabria.

"People don't understand how difficult it is to make nationals with non-scholarship athletes. It is hard to get a place winner for 2-3 years straight," Lovelace added. The top fifteen schools at the tournament were all providing scholarships for their athletes. In addition, there were 64 teams coming out of eight regions and 52 of the teams qualified for nationals. Lovelace said, "In terms of returning All-Americans, this was this was the best tournament I have been to in all my years of coaching. The level of competition was incredible!"

The officiating left something to be desired, particularly in two of the Hawk's matches. First of all, sophomore Jason Finucane, wrestling in the 142 pound weight class, got called for a stalling penalty with two seconds left on the clock. That turned a 4-3 Finucane win into a 4-4 tie and an eventual loss in overtime to Carl Zamora of Big Bend, Washington.

Lovelace commented that, "if Finucane's match was watched, we would have gotten sixth [in the national tournament as a team]." After talking with Finucane himself, there was definitely a feeling of frustration with the call. "We got biased," he bluntly put it. "Even the other officials agreed that it was a bad call," Lovelace concluded.

However, Finucane didn't hang his head. "All in all it was a fun year," he said. Several four year colleges have offered him scholarships and he plans on transferring next year.

The other disputable call was on sophomore Steve Rikusack, 190 pounds and over, who "got hammered" on a call in Lovelace's words.

With 12 seconds left, Rikusack was called for a penalty to break a 1-1 tie and denied him the chance to compete in the All-American round. Rikusack took it in stride. "All the guys I wrestled placed and were All-Americans."

When asked about the year in general, Lovelace said nothing except positive and I don't think there will be another team like this one for a long time." He will possibly be back next year for another season.

"Despite all of the adversity, we did a super job as a team, I thought," Lovelace said to sum up his feelings after contemplating the poor officiating.

Sophomore Eric Bakley, 158 pounds, took seventh at the national meet and lost to the eventual national champ, Michael Shost of North Idaho College. Coach Bakley deflected Shannon Peters of Colby, Kansas to obtain his All-American status.

Freshman Walter Sanabria, 118 pounds, who will be returning next year, placed the highest of the three Harper Hawks All-Americans, fifth. He pinned Jeff Still in only 1:47 to grab All-American honors, then lost to the eventual runner-up from Rocky College in Idaho. Sanabria remained very humble about his achievements when interviewed and gave most of the credit to his teammates and coaches. He said, "I felt good about the season and the team. In four years of high school, I never made it to the state finals, so I am pleased."

The first two matches were tough ones for me because I felt that I could have tried harder, but after that I felt I wrestled well."

He added, "Both of my coaches helped me out a lot and made me believe in myself. They are the reason why I did so well. Individually, Jason Finucane and Eric Bakley gave it all they had and did very well. The team really gave it their hardest shot. This was a great year."

Sophomore Rob Maleck, 134 pounds, won four matches and was one match away from the All-American round when native Randy Ellis of Bismarck, North Dakota snatched out Maleck 9-8.

Five of the six Hawk's wrestlers lost by one point. Reverse those scores and the Hawks would have placed fifth at the national tournament. As it turned out, they wound up at tenth "and that's no disgrace," Lovelace added. "Tenth out of 64 teams, that's a far cry from disgrace!"

Sophomore Bill Cordts, 150 pounds, won three matches. He lost in the All-American round to Tim Hopkins of Trien College, 17-11. Then, Hopkins proceeded to place fifth overall. Cordts commented, "It's getting tougher every year. It was a lot more intense this year than last year." He agreed about the officiating. "We weren't getting many calls," he said.

None of the Hawk's had a losing record. Out of the six tournaments the Hawks were in this year, they finished either first or second in all of them. The kids who were sophomores this year lost only one dual meet," Lovelace said. Assistant coach Dan Lopprino, a

Harper wrestling alumni, knows what it's like to be in the sport. "It's tough cutting weight. These guys did a heck of a job this year. They came together as a team." It was his first year coaching, and in the aftermath of the season Lopprino jokingly said, "Best year I've ever had coaching." Lovelace was quick to give recognition to his devoted assistant by saying, "He was a tremendous asset to the team."

It was a "tremendous year, overall; a very good year. It was a very exciting year. All of the kids contributed," Lovelace said. In other words, one can't say enough about the Harper Hawks wrestling team this year. They were awesome!

Eliasik denies allegations of wrong-doing

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-chief
and Lisa Aust
Managing Editor

The investigation of Harper's football program continues. Vice President of Student Affairs Bonnie Henry, who is conducting the investigation, could make little comment on its progress. She stated, "We're looking very seriously at it (the investigation) and are talking to as many people as we will talk to."

She also said, contrary to what was said in last week's story, the charges made by Juan

Taylor were not dropped. The Taylor investigation was completed, and the charges made were found to be unsubstantiated.

"They thoroughly checked both sides and found that what Juan said was completely unsubstantiated, and what I said was completely substantiated," commented Football Coach John Eliasik.

Eliasik said Taylor quit the team, he wasn't asked to leave. According to Eliasik, Taylor was benched for one game for disciplinary reasons. Afterwards, he never resumed to practice.

Eliasik stated only one loan was made to Taylor from Receivers Coach Mike Henley. He said this Taylor's request to repay the loan played no part whatsoever in the decision to bench Taylor.

Eliasik also clarified that a meeting between himself, Taylor, Henley, and Offensive Coordinator Bob Ferguson did take place. At the meeting, Taylor was told that he would not be starting in the next game. Eliasik claims it was not until later that they decided to keep Juan from playing in the game.

According to Eliasik, Taylor did receive notification that the investigation was concluded via a letter, which contradicts Taylor's comment that he was never notified. Eliasik does not know who sent the letter or when it was sent.

According to Henry, the letter was sent by certified mail last semester to Taylor's in-district address.

Eliasik also denied all allegations of racism and steroid use against the team. He claims he has no knowledge of any football player using steroids, and there is no racism on the team. Eliasik commented, "It [racism] doesn't exist. If anyone were [racist], they wouldn't belong here. It has no place in our program, whether it be a player or a coach."

Eliasik is aware the current investigation is taking place. He could not comment as to the exact nature of the facts would be revealed when the investigation is over.

According to Henry, the investigation should be concluded in two to three weeks.

Former Senate President Kathleen Munson became the first Harper student to be elected Lieutenant Governor of Illinois last Saturday. She was elected to serve on Model Illinois Government (MIG), Munson's term will last one full year.

Munson traveled with the Political Science Club to Springfield last week to participate in the government simulation. There were 11 other students from Harper who joined in.

MIG was designed to give students a working hands-on knowledge of the representative system. It parallels the real state government as closely as possible.

The participants were able to take on the role of state leaders, to representatives, senators, lobbyists, lawyers, judges, journalists and other elected officials.

As members of either the House or Senate, the students were able to hold committees. In committee they debated bills and resolutions. They also were able to come up with original legislation.

On the floor, participants debated, amended and passed or defeated bills forwarded by the committees.

Harper finished stronger than it ever has. The delegation had two Whips, John Fallabone and Lisa Aust, and two unofficial Leaders, Matt London and Mark James.

Dan Pitzerek and Anthony Garcia teamed up as lawyers to argue a case involving reverse discrimination. They placed an unprecedented third.

Tari Vaughn participated as a journalist for the paper, the MIG Journal.

Jim Cabal and Aust were house democrats.

James, Munson and Kevin O'Connell were house republicans.

London, Mary Hook and Pitzerek were senate republicans.

Women's Week Starts

Helen Thomas, United Press International (UPI) White House Bureau Chief, gave an enlightening address concerning "Women, Politics and the Press" on Monday, March 5, at 8 pm in the Building A dining hall. She spoke about the role of women journalists, equality and membership into the press club.

Since joining the UPI in 1943 to write radio news, Thomas has reported on numerous U.S. governmental issues. She began covering presidential candidates in 1960. Thomas has reported on the presidencies of Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, Ford, Carter, Reagan and Bush.

She was the first woman member of the White House Correspondents. Journalists have come a long way through Thomas's guidance. She was the first woman admitted to the National Press Club and elected as an officer after a 90-year all male reign.

She has gained the respect of her peers and politicians. At press conferences, Thomas has the privilege of asking one of the first two questions.

Among her many honors and awards, Thomas won the 1985 Fourth Estate Award from the National Press Club and was named "1988 Newspaper Woman of Washington" by the American Newspaper Woman's Club.

How much is that doggie in the window? Adopting a new Best Friend

Looking for a loving home.

Every year, millions of animals are lost or abandoned in the United States. Many of these castaways die in alleyways and on highways. About 15 to 20 million animals are turned over to pounds each year, and less than 10 percent are reclaimed.

Save-A-Pet is one of three no-kill animal shelters in the northern Illinois area. A no-kill animal shelter does not destroy unwanted or unwanted pets; it seeks adoptive homes for all the animals it takes in.

The shelter has a waiting list for "must give up" pets that cannot be kept by their families because of a move, divorce, death in the family, or allergies.

Save-A-Pet takes in and cares for injured animals immediately and has agreements with a few communities to take in their strays.

Save-A-Pet is a very safe place for an animal needing a family and home of its own. Volunteers come in every day of the week to help clean and disinfect the cat room and to socialize with the cats and puppies. One gentleman volunteer visits three days a week as a cat therapist. He works with the more difficult and frightened cats, making their little characters more sociable and adoptable.

Dogs and puppies have their own volunteers who walk, handle, pet and talk to each animal every day. This extra attention helps socialize and civilize the puppies and keeps adult dogs "in touch" with furry critter. Loving, friendly cats (on harness, of course) are great ice breakers at any gathering.

The majority of the animals brought into the shelter find new homes quickly. Some aren't so lucky and have been at the shelter for over a year. Most are elderly dogs and cats, or animals with treatable but continuing medical conditions. Occasionally some loving and generous family does adopt one of the hard-to-place animals. They hope to give the "no longer youngster" a bit of comfort in its last years. People who adopt animals with a medical condition are given medication for the lifetime of the pet.

Save-A-Pet also has a Community Education Program. Volunteers and staff travel in the shelter's van to speak to children's groups and at schools on the responsibilities of pet care and ownership, giving their material to the age group.

Part of the Education Program includes visits to the elderly and the physically and developmentally disabled. Animals have proven to be wonderfully therapeutic for the residents of nursing homes. Sometimes, unresponsive people feel more comfortable sharing their thoughts and memories with a warm and furry critter. Loving, friendly cats (on harness, of course) are great ice breakers at any gathering.

The major portion of their funding comes from contributions and adoption donations. Along with income from the Save-A-Pet's Thrift and Gift Shop in Skokie, fund raising projects such as the Pet-Athalon, the Dinner/Auction on Saturday, March 10, keeps the shelter financially sound.

Save-A-Pet is holding a Benefit Concert for their Building Fund on May 20. Nine members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra will perform chamber music at Baris College Theater in Lake Forest. "Volunteers of all ages and levels of education come to help," says Mary Alice Weinberg, Director of Community Affairs. "Not just with the animals, but on our fund raising projects, too."

Save-A-Pet is open six days a week, from 1-5 pm, closed on Tuesdays. It is located at 2019 N. Rand Road in Palatine. For more information on adoption, volunteer work, or the upcoming Dinner/Auction at Chevy Chase Country Club, call the shelter at 934-7788.

Hey Bunky, how 's doin' This week we have a special surprise for you. This week we ain't gonna talk about a situation which shall remain sacrosanct as I've been talking about it for 2 weeks.

Don't worry, we will be talking about stupidity, but this stupidity ain't on campus. This is even worse. This stupidity concerns the Palisades (every time I hear of it, for some reason I think of Parasites), a construction project going on down that near St. Louis.

It seems that a certain Scott Adams, CEO of Adams Development Corporation, doesn't think his PR people have enough to worry about, so he created a nightmare. He decided to create a theme park (I guess 6 Flags wasn't big enough for him), but just any theme park, this one would have a water park (there are only two major ones in the area now), a motel hotel (in this area, it would be the same as putting up condos in DeKalb).

All of this is enough to give a PR person an ulcer cuz it ain't gonna sell after the newscast wears off. It can only operate during the summer months and they are going to try to sell it, at least the water park idea, to the college students (yep, I know lots of college students who say "gee, if I only had a water park to go to I wouldn't have to go to Florida or California or home to visit my parents").

I would hate to work PR for this project already, but it gets even worse. Seems Adams ain't happy trying to make his name Dimesy. He has to do it his way and if a sanctuary for eagles is in the way, well that's too bad. It's not his fault if it's the only eagles sanctuary in the state.

Of course if we ain't gonna worry about the eagles, then a Chautauque Indian Burial Ground is nothing to worry about either. It can be moved (I wonder how Adams would feel if it was his grandmother's grave was to be moved?). All in the name of progress.

If this is progress, call me old-fashioned. It wouldn't be so bad if the damage from the construction of the Parasites (sorry, typo) could be repaired once it flups, but once the eagles are gone they won't come back.

This Parasites (the keyboard just won't do what I want it to) thing really bothers me. I want to do something about it (not the keyboard, the Parasites thing). Some might ask why I want to do something about it. For one, I would like someday to be able to show my kids what an eagle looks like, and not from a book. Another reason is the thought of someone moving the grave of someone else. That really bothers me.

For those who would like another reason to help, think of the last time you caught your teacher in a mistake, or when you were able to say that the answers in the back of the book were wrong. This is the same thing, except we'd be telling the General Assembly in Springfield that they made a mistake by allowing this to happen.

Get off your butt, people (or stay on them if a phone is close enough) and start calling people, such as your State Representatives and Senators, newspapers, U.S. Representatives and Senators, anyone and everyone you can think of. Get your friends, relatives, parents and any other people you can think of to pick up the phone too. We may be able to accomplish something worthwhile.

An open letter of apology to our readers

A large part of the learning process is making mistakes. When you make a mistake, with any luck, you learn real fast not to make it again. We made a mistake last week, and fortunately, we've learned from it.

Some of the views expressed in last week's editorial were blatantly wrong. Unfortunately, this realization was arrived at after the papers hit the news stand.

We still stand by the main ideas of the editorial, which was, simply put, this: In times when people are doing all possible to promote equality, we should focus on equality instead of superiority. Also, if we are going to celebrate special events for one group, we should celebrate them for all groups.

This is probably, word for word, exactly what should have been printed last week. However, in the journalistic style of emphasizing and giving examples, these points were lost under examples laden with, to put it bluntly, bullshit.

The article made a strong statement about women's seminars. When writing these lines, we considered only the few seminars that we have attended (many of which were not given by Harper College). We did not, however, consider seminars for abused women and other serious topics. Fortunately, we have never had to attend these seminars, and unfortunately, we were much too hasty to generalize.

Perhaps, after we have attended some of this week's programs, we can sit down and write something that more accurately explains our views and takes into consideration everything that was not considered last week.

Also, the overall tone of the editorial was rather sarcastic. While sarcasm can be an effective way to make a statement, it was way out of line in this instance.

This editorial was not thought out and was extremely insensitive. We also should emphasize that last week's views did not represent the feelings of the Harbinger staff as a whole. We, personally, take full credit for it.

We sincerely apologize to all of our readers. We also apologize to the Women's Program and other women who were hurt and deeply offended by this article. If there was a way to undo what has been done, we surely would. Unfortunately, we can't. We can only ask now that our readers help us out. Please find your copy of last week's paper, rip out the editorial entitled Pop quiz: is Harper practicing subtle sexism?, and put it in its proper place, the garbage can.

Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-Chief

Editor's note:

This editorial is dedicated to Maria Jozwiak and Sandra Stewart. We apologize to you the most. You were not only hurt by what was written, but were betrayed by the people you work for. We are deeply sorry.

Overheard... More fairness needed

"You can whip it out as fast as you like, I'm not going to do anything with it."

"Did you know that you can get AIDS from plastic?"

LENIN FINALLY GETS HIS FUNERAL AFTER 25 YEARS.

Perhaps the headline of last week's editorial should have been Pop quiz: is Harper practicing subtle RACISM? It should have emphasized the point that Harper did not celebrate Black History Month, which was an entire month! Women's history "week" is only three days, yet the college has seen fit to go all out for the occasion.

This college has an important duty to all of its minority students, not just the largest one. By having a women's program that is so ridiculously large (compared to the nonexistent Black studies program) it is easy to assume that women have taken a stance of superiority. While there are many women who need the help offered by the college, there are many others who need help also, they should not be lost in the shadow of Harper's women's programs. I speak not of just nonwomen. I have heard a story of a woman being turned away because she still lives with her husband. Never mind the fact that they are separated, nor that she had not worked in the "real" world, nor that she had a child to care for.

If Harper is going to support such a large program then it should look at ways of being more fair.

Guest Opinion

Women's history as subject

Dear Tari and Lisa,

This letter is written in response to your editorial, Is Harper Practicing Subtle Sexism? which suggested that Harper should not observe Women's History Week. I'm glad you wrote the editorial because it indicates your interest in the subject and perhaps it stimulated more students to attend the outstanding programs offered.

Your editorial, however, revealed your lack of understanding of the purpose and content of Women's History Week at Harper College.

Women's history is a legitimate academic subject which was neglected until about 25 years ago. Since then, much scholarly research has been done to document the role which women (who are not a minority, but are half of the human race) have played throughout history. Women's History Week, and women's studies programs, offer an opportunity to explore the subject in more depth than is possible in a general history curriculum. This is no more discriminatory than to offer a specialized course in American, European or Civil War history.

The seminars presented during Women's History Week are not therapy sessions, self-esteem workshops or male-bashing orgies. They are thoughtful and well documented presentations on women's experience during different periods of time. While history does reveal that some men have been abusers, oppressors and exploiters of women, it also describes the many men who have been supportive husbands and lovers, fathers and brothers and educators, employers and strong advocates of women's rights.

The study of women's history also provides the opportunity to learn more about our "roots" as women. Women are different from men and their life experience is and always will be different. This does not mean that we should not strive for equal opportunity in the workplace and in public affairs. It does mean that we need to recognize, study and learn from the experience of the women who lived before us. As the English essayist Matthew Arnold has said, "He who knows not his own history is doomed forever to repeat the mistakes of the past."

It is important for women to know the history of the struggle for the right to vote, the previous efforts of women in the peace and environmental movements, the changing influence of fashion and social attitudes on women's roles. Issues tend to reemerge. Women were active in the temperance crusade. Today we have Mothers Against Drunk Drivers. The study of women's history also enriches our appreciation of our mothers and grandmothers. For me it has been fascinating to read the recently published books drawn from the journals of women who were part of the great westward migration, because my great grandmother crossed the plains in a covered wagon and homesteaded in Oregon. She bore 12 children on the frontier. No man did that!

As a graduate of Northwestern University's Medill School of Journalism, I was taught to research a subject thoroughly before expressing an editorial opinion. Unfortunately, neither of you interviewed me, Professor Sharon Alter who teaches the Women's History course at Harper, Rena Trevor, Director of the Women's Program or (to my knowledge) any of the many women from the community who make up the Women's History Week Committee and can attest to its value.

I hope you found time to attend some of the seminars during Women's History Week. You have a lot to learn!

Sincerely,

Kris Howard, Chairman
Women's History Week
Member, Harper College Board of Trustees

State of the Earth

By Fayetta Fabres

One of the most important wetland areas in the Midwest, the Lake Calumet area in southeast Chicago, stands threatened by Chicago Mayor Richard Daley's proposal for a new airport 20% larger than O'Hare.

Wetlands are the habitat of waterfowl such as ducks, geese, herons, cranes and egrets. They are vital to the continued survival of these birds, yet they've been destroyed at the rate of about 100,000 acres a year by farming, industrialization and urbanization.

The proposed airport would require the filling or drainage of 217 acres of important wetlands. These wetlands are frequented by 20 species of birds on the Illinois list of threatened or endangered species, 9 of which actually nest there, such as the black crowned night heron and the great egret.

A feasibility study done on the project contends that conditions would be overall improved since the passage of the "no net loss" policy by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). It calls for 1 to 3 acres of new or restored wetland to be supplied for every acre of wetland drained or filled. This means the city could be required to create 526 acres of nearby wetlands to replace the 217 acres destroyed.

Personally, I don't believe this would work. Do you think these birds will automatically accept new homes next to a huge airport spewing air and noise pollution?

Hopefully this project will face enough opposition to put a stop to it. A permit to fill the wetlands can be denied by the EPA or the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. As James Landing, director of the Lake Calumet Study Commission states, "You can replace a wetland, you can create an artificial wetland, but you can't force an organism into it."

Letters to the Editor

Answer "yes" to pop quiz

Dear Editors

I answered "yes" to your "POP QUIZ" (March 1, 1990 Harbinger Editorial). I believe that Women's History Week was initiated by women who wished to establish their sex's place in history, a form of self-promotion. Women, though they represent 51% of the world's population, have been disproportionately underrepresented in history. At nearly two thirds of Harper's student population are women it only stands to reason that some would take the necessary channels to utilize Harper's facilities for seminars and lectures on women's history. These seminars are open to anyone who wishes to attend. If women don't promote themselves, who will?

Black History Month was established for much of the same reasons. I don't think that Harper would have blocked the effort of black students and faculty to use Harper's facilities in the observation of Black History Month. It would indeed be scandalous if that were to occur. Maybe it did and we just don't know about it.

When women and minorities are treated with socio-economic equity perhaps they will have less need for compensated efforts to establish self-pride. But just two weeks ago it was revealed that a large New York employment agency was screening applicants based on sex, race, ethnicity, and physical condition. It used special codes at the request of corporate employers.

This is occurring all over the country. Until this changes, affirmative action and inspirational rallying through examination of histories is a good and perhaps necessary thing.

A. R. Varquez

Serious lack of information

You should consider attending the programs being offered during Women's History Week. There is a possibility that you might be able to gain some insight and education. Judging from your editorial of March 1, you suffer from a serious lack of both the information and the sensitivity needed to make reasonable judgments.

The Hunt for Red October Cold war suspense

By Michael Schweishelmer
Harbinger Movie Critic

We've had World War I movies, and World War II movies. We've also had movies about the war in Vietnam, and even films about World War III. Well, now that the world political climate has changed it looks like we are in for another type of war film, the Cold War movie. The first indicator of this new trend in the film industry has already arrived. It was the highly publicized March 2nd release of The Hunt for Red October. It's no longer army against army in this underwater action/suspense thriller, now it's intelligence agency against intelligence agency, complicated by delicate political maneuvering.

The Hunt is based on the Tom Clancy novel of the same name. The story occurs in pre-Gorbachev 1984, as stated in the beginning of the film. Instead of just showing political action, the film draws the audience in with the development of Sean Connery's character of Russian submarine Captain Marko Ramius, and Alec Baldwin's portrayal of CIA analyst, Jack Ryan, who finds himself in life threatening situations in the middle of the ocean because of his knowledge of Ramius and his hunch that he has not gone mad but is defecting.

Ramius is the captain of the Red October on its maiden voyage. The Red October is a new submarine equipped with the ability to travel undetected by sonar. The sub would be able to penetrate all detecting devices and launch missiles on America from right off of its coast. It is clearly a first strike weapon and Ramius knows this. He wants to lead his officers to defect to the United States, sub and all. The development of the two characters is accomplished through the combination of hearing Ryan speak of Ramius and showing the two in action. Both risking their lives for what they believe in. It is very satisfying when the two finally meet and it is like they already know each other.

The film has many technical

Red Lorry Yellow Lorry Say good-bye to the dark side

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

The latest offering from England's Red Lorry Yellow Lorry is Blow, a pleasing collection of surprisingly upbeat songs. Setting aside the old sound of Red Lorry Yellow Lorry, vocalist Chris Reed and his bandmates have entered the brightly colored world of semi-happiness. Previous RLYL releases were dark, brooding, depressing chunks of gothic noise. The songs on Blow leave that style behind.

The album begins with "Happy To See Me", a simple song that never delivers the cruel twist of the knife that seems to lurk just around the corner. Following in perfect continuity from that track is the current single "Temptation". The two songs make a perfect pair that should not be separated.

"Shine A Light" and "Too Many Cakes", with their clever drum fills and grunge-guitar noises continue the pace and sound that the first two songs set. The next track "Heaven" slows the pace a bit as Reed tries desperately to stretch his voice out to a melancholy drawl, succeeding at least partially.

Reed's voice is woefully inadequate but somehow fits the mood of most of the songs, particularly "You Are Everything". That song is perhaps the first true ballad that RLYL have ever created, and Reod's voice sounds to earnest that it pulls it off without embarrassment.

The title track is a mostly instrumental musical romp that displays the previously hidden sense of humor that the guys from RLYL have. The final track on the CD is an acoustic version of "Heaven" that, due to the music's stark simplicity, makes Reod's voice sound even more gut-wrenchingly heartbreak.

The blindingly colorful album cover is a reflection of the colorful music on Blow. Some bands that change styles learn quickly that they have made a mistake. Red Lorry Yellow Lorry haven't made a mistake by changing their style...in fact, it should help them gain the recognition and popularity that their new style deserves. Rating out of

Harbinger Music Shoppers Guide The best and worst record stores in the Chicagoland area

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

Any record collector can tell you the good places and bad places to go shopping. The problem is, if you don't know any record collectors, you'll be going to Flip Side for the rest of your life and missing out on a lot of good music. As yet another public service to the Harbinger community, the Harbinger presents the Music Shopper's Guide.

Cocoonals

Second only to Musicland as the worst record store, their selection is horribly limited and their prices only average. They do have sales that are worth watching for, however, and are the second closest record store to Harper (the Golf & Roselle locations). (Many locations)

The Flip Side

A chain store with a lot of local outlets. For a chain, Flip Side is not bad at all. Looking through the stock in any local Flip Side tells me that the buyers know their stuff. They are also the closest record store to Harper (the Plum Grove and Euclid stores). There's very little vinyl stock left in Flip Side, which is true for most chain stores. Of all the local Flip Side stores, I would consider the Palatine Plaza location on Northwest Highway the best, especially for CD singles and music videos. (Many locations)

Hit Cat Records

Hit Cat is proud to specialize in Pink Floyd. Everything you could ever want even remotely related to Pink Floyd is found here. They still get a lot of vinyl including a fairly large selection of 7" singles. They've got an excellent selection of CD singles and rental videos as well. Hit Cat is frequented by the heavy metal crowd, so their stock of HM must be good. (10th W Dunder Road in Wheeling)

Musiland

The worst place to buy music unless you can't find it anywhere else. Their prices are outrageously high and their stock is extensive but poorly managed. Musiland is better for pre-recorded videotapes than for music. Like Flip Side, they've got little to no vinyl left in the store. (Many locations)

Reckless Records

Absolutely the best used record store in Chicago, specializing in alternative music but still covering all the bases. You can find just about anything at Reckless, but it's best to get there frequently to keep up on the new arrivals. It takes at least two hours to go through just the regular 4" section of records. Then there's CDs, cassettes, new records, and more. They've also got plenty of time to expand. (At 3157 Broadway just south of Belmont - in Chicago)

Record City

Possibly the best place to find the CD you're looking for. They seem to carry more titles than any other store. They've got a huge cassette section as well, and a fair imported vinyl collection. Their prices range wildly from some rock bottom bargains to a fortune for some import CDs that can be found much cheaper elsewhere (I've seen some of Record City's $23.99 CDs going for $18.99 at the Turntable). Definitely worth a stop. (Several locations including Skokie)

Rose Records

The Schumann Rose Records store is the best one I've seen, with a very knowledgeable and helpful staff and a very wide-ranging CD collection. Other outlets, such as the Vernon Hills store, are not as impressive. They still carry vinyl but have abandoned 7" singles in favor of cassette singles exclusively. (Many locations)

Sound Warehouse

Sometimes the lowest prices can be found at your local Sound Warehouse. The stock is quite impressive and if you really search you can often find things you wouldn't expect to find. I've noticed a frequent problem in mislabeling; in other words, if you were looking for the CD Reclassification by Blue Blue Blue, you wouldn't find it unless you looked in the "R" area for "reclassification" instead of in the "B" area for the group's name. This seems to happen a lot, particularly at the Buffalo Grove store. Every once in a while, however, they redeem themselves. Early last year when the new album by He Said was released, they not only put a couple of copies under He Said but they also put a few under Graham Lewis' name.

See Shoppers Guide, page 8

Shoppers Guide

Sound Warehouse is the place to go for singles of all kinds. They still stock 7" and 12" singles in addition to cassette and CD singles. Actually, if you're not looking for anything extra-special, Sound Warehouse is the place to go. One drawback to Sound Warehouse is the length of time it seems to take them to restock their sold-out items.

The Turntable

The third-closest record store to Harper and unquestionably the best source for imports, alternative music, and heavy metal. Most of their stock is vinyl, separated into different sections. They are THE source for CD singles. Everything you can think of is here: posters, buttons, jewelry, picture discs, t-shirts, videos, 10" singles, box sets, magazines, books, and numerous hard-to-find items. Most of the import-only releases that I've reviewed here can be found at the Turntable. Their only drawback is that they don't have enough room to put everything. (Golf Point shopping center in the triangle bordered by Golf, Roselle, and Higgins)

Vintage Vinyl

A small store with a lot to offer for the collector. Dealing mostly in alternative music, Vintage Vinyl is another source for hard-to-find 7" singles (quickly becoming the most collectible musical item) and albums. There are certain artists they seem to be particularly well-stocked in, like Shriekback, Sad Lovers And Giants, Wire, and The The, just to name a few. (Evanston)

Was Trax

Obviously Was Trax is going to specialize in Was Trax records. They also carry LOTS of vinyl (with a good balance between import and domestic releases) and a decent CD selection in addition to an excellent 7" single collection. There's a lot of good stuff to find if you have the time to look.

Red October

The film has many technical qualities which make it unique and effective. John McTiernan has already shown his skill at directing action/adventure thrillers as the director of Die Hard. The special effects are entirely believable save the last shot which is a superimposition of Baldwin and Connelly atop the coming tower as the sub is being taken down a river in America. This shot was obviously a superimposition and did affect the emotionality of the scene.

The production techniques used in the film gave the sense of being aboard a real submarine. It did miss giving the feeling of lack of space as compared to the perfect submarine film, "Das Boot." The underwater shots of the subs navigating blindly around rock and each other gave a wonderful sense of the size and power of these war vessels. The Lucas Film THX sound added a wonderful element to the film, filling the theater with the sounds of submersion under the depths of the ocean. Not all theaters offer this advancement in motion picture technology so it is definitely worth finding a theater which does have the capability when going to see "The Hunt."

Overall, it has to be said that "The Hunt for Red October" is a good film. The acting was quite effective, the story was interesting and suspenseful, and the production techniques brought all of the elements together into a smoothly moving exciting film. The difference between this film and a four star work is that the subject material is not that meaningful and the film does not have the lasting affect of some of the classic suspense action films. Rating: 3 stars out of 5

Men's b-ball

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

Harper's near brilliant campaign ended Saturday night in Glen Ellyn when the College of DuPage Chipparels stopped the Hawks 101-80 in second round action to finish the season at 19-12.

"We lost to a better team," said first-year Head Coach Paul Kauter.

They advanced to second round by defeating Rock Valley 77-64 last Thursday night to win their first-ever playoff game since the NJCAA broke Division I (scholarship) and Division II (Non-Scholarship) format prior to the 1985-86 season.

The Hawks led from the start against Rock Valley, opening a margin as high as 11 points in the first half. But the visiting Trojans (18-12) went on a run to go up 45-41. A lay-up by Chuck Whitman and two free throws by George Diles tied the game at 45-45. Paul Combs hit a 3-point shot and followed with a pair of free throws. Whitman landed another 3-pointer and the Hawks went up by eight at 55-47.

"I knew it was going to be hard fought and it was," Kauter said. "I thought we played super defense, it took them out of some of the things they were trying to do. Our guards controlled things very well."

In the DuPage game, the hosts (26-5) led start to finish. Jason Brooks, who will complete his Harper career by playing in the Region IV All-Star game tip-off, along with Diles, shared scoring honors with 20 points each.

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

The last time the Lady Hawks defeated Moraine Valley in Women's Basketball was January 29, 1987. Since then, Harper has dropped six straight to the Marauders. Including two losses this season which cost them a NAAC championship and allowed Moraine Valley and Illinois Valley to earn the championship with Harper.

With this in mind, Friday's NJCAA Region IV Quarterfinal game at Kankakee (6 pm tip-off) between the #3-seeded Lady Hawks (22-7) and the #6-seeded Marauders (19-10) figures to be a very interesting game.

"I just hope we don't screw up," Head Coach Tom Teschner said. "This one's in our hands, it's ours to win or lose."

In reaching the quarterfinal round, the Lady Hawks disposed of visiting Blackhawk College 76-67 in second round competition Thursday. Freshman guard Stephanie Garcia led the way for Harper with a career high 25 points.

Harper with a career high 25 points. Sophomore forward Amy Kozul put in 22 more as Harper overcame a seven-point deficit in the first half by going on a 14-8 run to take a 37-32 lead at the half in a Patty Carkhale steal and lay-up before the buzzer.

second round. Blackhawk (15-15) claimed their final lead of the game at 47-45 before a 9-2 run, keyed by six points from Garcia, gave Harper the lead for good at 54-45.

"Stephania played within herself," Teschner said. "If she can continue to do that, we'll be O.K."

Teschner also hopes for his team's shooting to improve Friday night against Moraine Valley.

"In our first loss (January 24th), we shot 17 for 67 (25%), the second time we lost to them (February 17th) we shot 18 for 67 (26%), if we had shot better

"This one's in our hands, it's ours to win or lose," Tom Teschner those two games, we'd have won both of them and been undefeated at conference. If we want to win, we'll have to shoot better than we did," said Teschner.

In other quarterfinal round games Friday, #1 Kankakee (31-0) faces #6 Sauk Valley (20-11) at 1 pm, #4 Illinois Valley (23-6) faces #5 Elgin (19-7) at 3 pm and #2 McHenry (28-3), coached by former Harper Men's Coach Bill Probst, will face #10 Carl Sandburg (16-11) at 8 pm with the winner to face the winner of the Harper-Moraine Valley game. The Semi-Finals are set for Saturday at 1 and 3 pm with the title game slated for Sunday at 2:30 pm. The winner will then qualify for the NJCAA National Tournament, which commences next Monday in Tyler, Texas.

Safe sex program

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-Chief

The Program Board is sponsoring Hot, Sexy and Safer Sex on April 9 at noon in the Building A Lounge. The program is intended to help promote AIDS and "safer sex" awareness. The presentation is described as "A provocative, sexy celebration of safer sex" and stars Sari Landolph.

Between 1981 and December 31, 1989, 126 cases of AIDS (Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome) were reported in suburban Cook County residents. Of these cases, 79 were reported since January 1, 1989. A total of 82 cases were reported in 1988.

These figures only reflect the number of STDs (sexually transmitted diseases) which, although a larger group of people are infected with Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV). HIV is the AIDS virus, but carriers do not show any symptoms. Of 128 suburban Cook County communities, 95 have reported at least one case of AIDS, AIDS related complex, or HIV infection.

While AIDS was the most prevalent Sexually Transmitted Disease (STD) of the 1980's, other diseases such as gonorrhea, syphilis, herpes and chlamydia are growing in number.

According to Dr. Ralph Cordell, Director of the Cook County Department of Public Health's Communicable Disease cases has increased by 20% while the number of syphilis and gonorrhea cases has increased by 50% in suburban Cook County residents.

There is action you can take against STD's. They can affect anyone and are spread through sexual contact. If you are a sexually active male, wear a condom. If you are a sexually active female, have your partner abstain. The only sure method of preventing STD's is condom (can decrease the risk of infection). Also, know your partner and his or her sexual history before becoming sexually involved.

The Cook County Department of Public Health has several STD clinics in the Northwest Suburbs. These clinics offer free and confidential STD testing, counseling and treatment. These services are offered regardless of financial status. For information on local clinics, call (708) 818-2601.

For more information about STD's, condom use, or safer sex, contact Health Services in room A162, extension 2268.

Early reports indicate more tuition hikes are in store

Increases will force some students out; 'Education shouldn't be such a financial burden'

(CPS) One by one, college administrations are announcing tuition hikes for next school year that, once again, promise to make the price of education rise faster than prices for any other kind of good or service.

While the general inflation rate hovers around 4.5 percent, officials at the many universities announced in February they were raising tuitions by 5.5 to 11 percent last year.

Two-year college students don't seem much better off. Southeast Community College in Lincoln, Nebraska, for example, will raise prices in 1990-91. Though it's still too early to compute a national average for 1990-91 increases, most students can expect jumps ranging from five to nine percent if the trends established in February continue.

Tuition has risen faster than the inflation rate during each of the past nine years.

For 1989-90, tuition at four-year public campuses rose seven percent, to an average $1,694 per term, the College Board reports. It rose by nine percent, to an average $K,737, at four-year private campuses.

Students at public two-year schools fared a little better. Their tuition increased an average of five percent, to $K42, by seven percent for the 1989-90 year.

Community and junior colleges "try real hard to stay at or below the rate of inflation," said Judy Tomczak of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges.

Many students, however, complain the price has gone up too far, too fast.

By the time she graduates, first-year Wesleyan University student Susan Chun said she is now for tuition, room and board, books and personal expenses.

Chun now pays about $20,000. If rates continue increasing by seven percent every year, she will probably need $25,000 for her senior year in 1993.

"That's a hell of a lot of money," Chun said. "An education shouldn't be such a financial burden."

To protest $1,000 tuition hikes for out-of-staters, Arizona State University (ASU) students took over the Student Services building for 55 hours February 21 through 23.

In-state tuition at ASU, the University of Arizona and Northern Arizona University will go up $116.

"We aren't getting our money's worth," said John Kierman of ASU's student government, where in-state students now pay $1,644 and out-of-staters fork over $3,485 annually.

Despite tuition increases, the 45,000-student campus in Tempe suffers from overcrowded classes, underpaid faculty and too many graduate students teaching.

"I'm having to take actions that I didn't plan on," added Andy Mozingo, a Northern Arizona student whose tuition will increase by $900, or by 18.5 percent next year.

Lewis

Lewis is unique in that he entertains by complaining. He consistently talked about the perils of turning forty.

Some particularly amusing moments were when Lewis touched on various horrors in his life. The humorist of traveling, the drawbacks of being a Jewish comedian and the problems with his sex life.

Lewis, however, disappointed at the lack of energy. Lewis is known to be rather neurotic and sometimes hyper. He just didn't seem as wacky as I've seen him in the past.

Part of the problem was the opening act. Fred Simon, a terrific, serious pianist, kept the crowd entertained for half an hour. He did, however, make the crowd hungry for Lewis. Apparently he must have made the two hungry.

Lewis' career has catapulted over the last few years. He's a regular guest on Late Night with David Letterman, and has recently released a videotape entitled I'm Exhausted.

Lewis has also had specials on HBO, and he can often be heard on the Steve and Gary Show on WLUP AM 1300 in the afternoon.

Steel drums bring tropical sounds to Harper

By Phyllis Benson
Staff Writer

The sounds of the Caribbean islands come to Harper through calypso and reggae music performed by Harper's Steel Drum Band.

Stephen Sweigart directs the band and teaches three class sections every Thursday.

Ten students per section play five positions: bass, cello, double seconds, double tenors and single tenor or lead.

Sweigart was introduced to steel drums at Northern Illinois University in 1978. "I had never heard it before," he said, "and I enjoyed it quite a bit."

Sweigart started teaching classes at Waubesa Community College in 1982 and in 1986 began classes at Harper at the invitation of Music Department Chairman Dr. Robert Tilloson.

Originally Sweigart taught at both Waubesa and Harper and also performed in his own trio, "Stainless Steel." "I try to cover as many areas as possible," he said.

Sweigart also keeps a studio in Aurora where he teaches private lessons and, as a percussion specialist, is principal percussion with the Fox Valley Symphony Orchestra. "I also work with junior high and high schools," Sweigart said, "and certain bands give me a call when they need help."

Penelope Skrzymski, who plays all the instruments except double seconds, but primarily cello, got into the band much the way Sweigart did, by hearing the music performed.

"I had a night class in the art department," she said, "and there was a concert in the lounge. I thought it was so neat that I was a half hour late for class. The next time I was available for the class I signed up."

The instruments themselves are a key part of the steel band's unique sound. The steel drum is native to the islands of Trinidad and Tobago. Each one is handmade and must be tuned by its creator. "You can't just take it to any music store," said Sweigart. Music is arranged especially for the instruments by Sweigart and the students and ranges from orchestral arrangements to traditional, calypso, reggae, pop, jazz and classical.

The Steel Band is always recruiting new members, even those lacking previous musical experience. Drum set players are also welcome. Students can perform with the band after two semesters of classes. "They know enough," said Sweigart, "to go on a job and perform for an hour."

The Steel Band recently sold out two shows at the Mt. Prospect Public Library, with 85 people remaining on the waiting list, said Skrzymski. Upcoming shows are March 29 at 2 pm at the Kirk South School in Hoffman Estates, April 5 at 1:30 pm and 2:30 pm at Blackwell School in Schaumburg, and May 5 at 3:30 pm at Lakeview School in Hoffman Estates. Two concerts will be held at Harper on May 10 at 12:15 pm in Building A and 8 pm in 1143.

"It's a lot of fun," said Skrzymski, "and it's great that you get college credit for having so much fun."

Rock concert know-how The insider's guide

By Jamie Pearson
Staff Writer

Rock concerts seem to be a favorite hobby of today's youth, myself included. I've seen them all, from Huey Lewis and the News to Metallica, and have found that there are certain ways to behave at these events.

After experiencing ways NOT to behave at concerts, I've come up with behavior. So here's some bad advice, or badvice, from yours truly.

First of all be LOUD - as loud as is humanly possible. If you don't talk like Froggy the following day, then you didn't do it right.

Another rule of thumb is NEVER sit down, not even during one of those mushy romantic ballads. Whenever I am asked to sit down, I borrow a line from Nancy Reagan. I just say "no."

One thing you don't want to do is call somebody nasty names because they are sitting down. I did, and I found him to be much taller and much meaner when he was standing.

When possible, go topless if your gender permits. If you're doing it right, then you should be working up a healthy sweat.

I also have a checklist for the necessities you should bring to a concert: your worst pair of jeans, $20 for a tee shirt, at least four lighters, and depending on who you see, bring cotton balls and a can of mace.

Most concerts are a wonderful experience. Between the cost of the tickets and a tee shirt, we deserve to be crazy and get our money's worth.

International studies broaden awareness

By Alisa Chisland
Assistant Managing Editor

You're a Harper student with study and travel on your mind. You would love to leave the Palatine campus for a few months and study abroad. Unfortunately, you're at a community college. Foreign study programs are generally created for juniors at four-year institutions. Don't fret, Harper can help.

For many years students at community colleges have been denied the opportunity to study abroad," said Martin Ryan, dean Harper after their sophomore year. They adjust to their new college and requirements during their junior year. They don't have time to go abroad. Harper offers students two opportunities per semester to study abroad. Students may attend Christ Church College in Canterbury, England, or Salzburg College in Salzburg, Austria. Students with at least a 2.75 G.P.A. and successful completion of fifteen credit hours have the chance to enroll in one of these programs.

Students live with families in Canterbury and Salzburg. They must enroll in at least twelve credit hours of classes in areas such as art, history, literature, culture and society, religion, and languages. Each program has its own requirements.

The program costs for fall 1989 and spring 1991 are $1540 for Canterbury, England and $5754 for Salzburg, Austria.

Students also have a chance to see the sights of Europe at their own expense. They can visit Mozart's birthplace, see Shakespeare's home, or trek to the Louvre in Paris.

"Studying abroad changes your life," said Ryan. "Once you look at another culture, you never look at the world the same way again. You look at things through their culture and perspective. You have knowledge of the world and see your own culture more critically. You learn to appreciate what you have. You have a more global understanding of the world and its many cultures."

"I couldn't be happier with the programs," said Ryan.

Don't miss the opportunity to study abroad; contact Martin Ryan in F113, extension 2584 or Janet Wenney in I117, extension 2522.

Todd Farrington A juggler's life

By Alisa Chisland
Assistant Managing Editor

It's a juggler's life according to Harper student Todd Farrington. He constantly juggles his classes, activities and bowling pins. Farrington juggles pins for his act as a circus performer for Illinois State University's Gamma Phi Circus.

Gamma Phi Circus was founded in 1929 as a men's gymnastics troupe to perform during half time at sporting events.

Through the years, it has expanded to include women and a variety of acts such as juggling, fire eating, unicycling, tight wire and acrobatics.

Farrington spent last year with the circus. He performed in the juggling, unicycling and fire eating acts. This semester, he took time away from circus life to be a student at Harper College.

Even though Farrington is not a student at ISU this semester, he will perform his juggling act as an alumni member this April.

Farrington has juggled everything from pins to fire. "I juggle three sticks in the air, one flaming and two non-flaming," said Farrington. "You can feel the warmth of the lit stick. It's easy to juggle but hard to bow out."

Farrington is not sure what the future holds for him. "I haven't chosen a major," said Farrington. "I don't think I want to be a professional circus performer. I enjoy performing. It's fun to perform with friends in front of an audience. I'm glad I did it."

State of the Earth

By Fayette Fabros
Staff Writer

For the remaining issues of the Harbinger this semester, I will promote environmental awareness and involvement through a series of articles covering major concerns, providing background information on the problem and how you can help. Future topics will include toxic waste, air and water pollution, acid rain, and threatened wildlife. This week's subject: The Ozone Layer.

WHAT IS THE OZONE LAYER?

A very thin blanket of gas located 10 to 30 miles above the earth's surface that protects us from dangerous ultraviolet rays.

THE PROBLEM

The ozone layer is being depleted because of the use of CFC's (chlorofluorocarbons), halons, and other synthetic chemicals. CFC's are the worst problem. They're used as a propellant gas for aerosols, in the production of polystyrene foam (styrofoam) and in air conditioners in the form of foam. Manufacturers favor the use of CFC's because they are stable, non-toxic, non-flammable, and don't decompose easily. They can last up to 150 years.

However, when CFC reaches the stratosphere, it breaks down, freeing atoms that destroy ozone.

Halons are another destroyer of ozone. They are used as a propellant in some fire extinguishers. Even when these gaseous substances are not in use, halon gases slowly leak out.

Since the ozone layer is the only filter screening out dangerous amounts of ultraviolet (UV) radiation, UV rays cause skin cancer, cataracts, weakened immune systems in people, smaller crop yields and reduce fish populations.

WHAT YOU CAN DO

1. Avoid styrofoam products. These include styrofoam coolers, packing materials, containers, cups, plates and carry-out containers. Not only are CFC's released during manufacture of these products, but also when breaking or crumbling of the material occurs.

2. Don't use aerosols containing CFC's. In 1978 a law was passed banning its use in most cases, but it is still used in products such as canned deodorant like Sally String, Dettol Offenders, and some asthma medications.

3. Get any leaks in your auto air conditioner repaired promptly and immediately.

4. Don't buy fire extinguishers that use halon.

For more information you can send for a pamphlet entitled "Saving the Ozone Layer: A Citizen Action Guide." It comes with a Stratospheric Defense Card to carry with you. It lists ingredients to avoid when buying certain products. Write the Natural Resources Defense Council, 40 W. 20th St., New York, NY 10011.

Letters to the Editor

Dolphins face cruel death

Letter to the Editor.

Harbinger staff writer Marc Balke did an excellent job in explaining the plight of dolphins in his March 1 front page article. It forced me to think about a 20/20 television news segment that I would rather not remember, but nevertheless feel compelled to describe.

In addition to being trapped in tuna fishing nets and slowly drowned, some of these poor creatures are even less fortunate! Many dolphins are entangled in the ropes leading to the ships' mast-mounted pulley system. Although the mechanism is motor driven and could be stopped, it's more time efficient to just let it run. It thereby slowly crushes the crying dolphins in the boat's black and white assembly.

In trying a make sense out of directed against animals, I've come up with the following theory: People are cruel due to either ignorance, greed, or personality defect.

Marc's article helped make us aware of an injustice that has not received much press until now. Since he suggested that we try "Nepuna" rather than actual tuna, Marc has also addressed the greed aspect of this issue.

Everyone who stops purchasing tuna, and ordering it in the cafeteria makes a personal statement. We may even be saving at least one dolphin in the long run. If enough consumers take the same action, it can redirect an industry that certainly needs to reverse a strong message from us.

This tactic does work! It has been used by women in order to boycott cosmetic companies that treated animals in mindless and unscientific product safety tests.

Although some "research labs" and cosmetic companies are lobbying the federal government for protection against disclosure of their test methods, and spending millions on positive image ad campaigns, in time, lack of profit will be their greatest motivation for change.

Perhaps increased faculty and students could form an organization in order to promote animal welfare and environmental issues at Harper and in the community. After all, the question of animal rights has never been answered to everyone's satisfaction. However, since non-human animals do have the ability to feel pain and to feel fear just as we do, more people are needed to lessen their suffering, and to act as their voice.

Bob Zittman

History should be important

Dear Editor,

I am in complete agreement with the major premise of the recent editorial in the Harbinger entitled "Pop Quiz: Is Harper Praising 'Noble' Sexism?" There should be no discrimination. However, I must dissent from the minor premise that Women's History Week is a form of discrimination.

First let me speak to the importance of history. The value of history is in the insights which it helps us achieve. We live and act by the images we have of who we are and where we are going. These images are profoundly shaped by where we think we have come from. History helps us deepen and to correct our images of who we are and where we could go. The insights of history helps us from being prisoners of our own experience and open up visions of alternative futures. One might say that patterns of inequality can last for generations and are not abolished by saying "it's time to move on."

The lack of a Black History celebration at Harper may be thought of as a form of racism, unacknowledged but real. But to acknowledge this is to recognize to eliminate Women's History Week.

None of the seasons of Women's History Week that I have attended at Harper have been such sessions. To point to gender prejudice and structural discrimination is an unpleasant task. None of us is guilty because of what our forebears have done. What we are responsible for is how we shape our future and the thoughts of the past are relevant to that.

All history is selective. We need to recover that part of the past which has been buried. There is much that America must recover from its own past, the past of its new citizens, and the global past.

To eliminate Women's History Week would not restore equality. There is precious little study of history today. To eliminate it would help to perpetuate our gender amnesia. Women's History Week is not a form of discrimination. It is a badly needed form of retrieval.

Hill's top 21 alternative list

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

Now that the dreaded end-of-the-eighties articles, specials and surveys are over with, the Harbinger happily clobbers you with one more list. In selecting what I believe to be the best alternative albums of the eighties, I managed to narrow the list down to twenty-one but could not easily push it down to a round twenty. That's why, instead of the usual twenty, you get the alternative twenty-one, presented in alphabetical order.

1) Hounds of Love by KATE BUSH (1985)

Absolutely the best offering from Kate Bush. The two sides of the album are thematically divided and separately titled. Side two, also known as The Ninth Wave, is one of the most brilliant pieces of music ever recorded.

2) Treasure by COCTEAU TWINS (1984)

The Cocteau Twins have always been one of the most indecipherable groups in music. Elizabeth Fraser's voice adds one more instrument to the guitar and drums. Treasure is the most satisfying of all Cocteau Twins albums. For a better sampler, try The Pink Opaque, a de facto greatest hits collection.

3) Faith (1981) and Disintegration 4) (1989) by THE CURE

The most original of the near-mainstream alternative bands, the Cure recorded their best album last year. Taking full advantage of the extended length of the CD format, the songs were stretched out for their best effect. Much of Disintegration can be traced back to their 1981 release Faith, the best of the early Cure albums.

Faith by THE CURE

5) Within the Realm of a Dying Sun by DEAD CAN DANCE (1987)

With the highest tinges of classical and opera with the heaviest orchestration this side of Wagner, Within the Realm of a Dying Sun is the pinnacle of the career of Lisa Gerrard and Brendan Perry. The material by Perry is easier to digest than Gerrard's but the two styles provide a pleasant mix. Not to have a copy of this album should be a crime.

6) Blue Sunshine by THE GLOVE (1983)

When Sinusxix and Reddie of Sinusxix and the Banshees went off to record the first Creatures album, Steve Severn and Robert Smith decided to do their own thing as well. Recruiting Severn's girlfriend Lindsey to do most of the vocals, they recorded the most hallucinogenic album of the eighties. Someday they just might put it out on CD.

7) The Seventh Dream of Teenage Heaven by LOVE AND ROCKETS (1986)

The first and best album by Love and Rockets, recorded shortly after the breakup of Badlands. It has its fully, but less of them than subsequent L&R albums.

8) The Land of Rape and Honey (1987) and 9) The Mind is a Terrible Thing to Taste (1989) by MINISTRY

Two of the best industrial noise albums, they both continue to grow on you after every listen. For every disappointing track on each album there is one track that fully makes up for it. Not for the faint-hearted.

10) Viva Hate by MORRISSEY (1988)

This is the only solo album by the Smiths' frontman to date, and it showcases his ever-increasing maturity as a songwriter.

11) Low-life by NEW ORDER (1985)

Generally considered to be the best New Order offering, Low-life includes the least pretentious and least disco-like music of all New Order albums. Technique (1989) is just about on the same level.

Low Life by NEW ORDER

12) Total Age by NITZER EBB (1987)

A ground-breaking and exhilarating album. Total Age doesn't want to stop once it starts. Described on Nitzer Ebb's packaging as 'the new funk brutality', the beat is fast and heavy and the songs served as a launching ground for industrial dance bands of today.

13) Oil and Gold by SHRIEKBACK (1985)

Never has an album found such extremes between the fast songs and the slow songs. The hectic bass lines and non-stop vocals of songs like Malaria sound even better when contrasted by the moody keyboards of songs like Faded Flowers or Coldheart. The lyrics are a special treat.

Meet the Murder by THE SMITHS

14) Meat Is Murder (1985) and 15) The Queen Is Dead (1986) by THE SMITHS

Just on the basis of classic songs alone, these two Smiths albums stand out among other albums by any artist. The Queen Is Dead made "number one album" on the eighties survey conducted by SPIN magazine.

16) Bubble by THAT PETROL EMOTION (1987)

It's not easy to choose a favorite album by That Petrol Emotion, but this one is the closest to reaching "classic" status. Who says outspoken political views don't mix well with rock music? The vocals by Steve Mack are outstanding.

17) Soul Mining (1985) 18) Infected (1986) and 19) Mind Bomb (1987) by THE THE

The ultimate musical trilogy of the eighties, courtesy of musical wizard Matt Johnson. Covering every possible topic from birth to death, Johnson's views are there for provocation, to provoke anger, empathy, or happiness, as long as some emotions are affected, Johnson is one of the most gifted songwriters of our day.

20) Pilgrimage & Shadow by THIS MORTAL COIL (1987)

A perfect companion to Within the Realm of a Dying Sun by Dead Can Dance, this double album shares musical styles with all other JAD artists mainly because it's basically a collaboration between all of these artists and more. There is no pervasion of any kind for almost the entire first half of the album. This is mood music at its best.

Soul Mining by THE THE

21) Bird Wood Cage by THE WOLFGANG PRESS (1988)

One of the more unusual JAD bands, The Wolfgang Press have made huge strides in the direction of musical perfection since their earliest works. This album represents the culmination of their years of experience working with various people such as Robin Guthrie and Elizabeth Fraser of Cocteau Twins. They can only move forward from this.

Every human being has his or her own opinions, and I am fortunate enough to be able to express them to a large audience. I'm sure my selections will meet agreement as well as anger. What I would like is a little feedback. If you wish to express your opinions, please do by writing to the Harbinger.

Steps for success

Is attendance important? Test your knowledge with this quiz

- By Susan Farmer and Nimi Jonadous
- T F Students with poor attendance in high school probably were frequently absent in elementary school.
 - T F Arriving late to class or leaving early has little effect on classroom performance.
 - T F "A" students and "C" students miss about the same number of classes.
 - T F Absenteeism in a single class during a semester can affect current GPA as well as future GPA.
 - T F Harper College allows 3 unexcused absences per class each semester.
 - T F Results from a study conducted in the Canadian public school system show that patterns of absenteeism established in elementary grades continue through high school.
 - F A L S E Important information such as assignments, test dates, and quiz content is often given to students at the very beginning and the very end of each class.
 - F A L S E According to an Arizona State study of 800 students, "A" students miss fewer than one class per semester, while "C" students miss more than four classes.
 - T R U E Studies from Northern Virginia Community College suggest that absenteeism can become a way of life despite students' convictions that each absence is unavoidable (e.g. "I was sick").
 - F A L S E Harper College has no formal attendance policy. Be aware of the attendance requirements for each class.
 - R E M E M B E R Being absent affects your grades. Survive for zero absences. Be there!

Lady Hawks finish basketball season

By Lou Vanez
Guest Writer

The Lady Hawks near-magical 1989-90 campaign came to an end with a 69-67 loss to Carl Sandburg in the Semi-Final round of the Region IV Tournament at Kankakee Saturday. Harper finished his season at 23-8.

In advancing to the Semi-Finals, the Lady Hawks got some well-earned revenge by knocking Moraine Valley 68-58 Friday.

"I'm awful proud of our kids because they played so hard," Head coach Tom Teschner said. "They met each one of our goals that we had set at the beginning of the season. I couldn't have been more pleased."

In Friday's quarterfinal game, the previous defending Region IV champion Marauders (19-11), to put it simply, couldn't touch Harper with a ten-foot pole. Thanks in part to a 21-5 run in the final 10 minutes of the first half which made the score 19-15 with 2:35 to go, the Hawks all but guaranteed the first win over Moraine since January 29, 1987.

Guard Amy Kozel became a one woman wracking crew with a career-high 36 points, 20 in the first half.

"We played very well as a team," Teschner said after the game. "Anytime you can force a team into 41 turnovers, you're off to a good start."

Against Carl Sandburg, the Lady Hawks found themselves in trouble when the Chargers (19-11) went on a 12-6 run at the end of the first half to take a 38-34 lead at halftime. In addition to that, guard Stephanie Garcia went out of the contest with an eye injury with 4:41 left in the half when a Carl Sandburg player hit her while pursuing a loose ball out of bounds.

"That was tough for us to lose her (Garcia), because she runs the show, but our team responded. They played like they were possessed," Teschner said.

Unfortunately, after Carl Sandburg lost the ball out-of-bounds, the Hawks blew their chance at a victory when they were called for a double-dribble violation with 16 seconds left. The Chargers then picked up a foul shot ten seconds later to hold on for the win.

Kozel led the way for the Hawks with 26 points. It marked the first time that Harper had lost a game when Kozel had scored 20 points or more. Carolyn Cowley added 22 to the losing cause.

On Sunday, five Hawks were honored with NAC all-conference honors with Kozel and Garcia named to the first team, Cowley and Patty Canchola named to the third team, and Harwig, receiving honorable mention, Kozel (first team) and Garcia (second team) were also named to the Region IV All-Tourney Team.

Swim team places thirteenth in nation

By Christine Ege
Guest Writer

The Harper swim team returned from the NCAAA Swimming and Diving Championships with a total of 31 points. Both the women's and the men's teams placed thirteenth in the nation with many personal bests.

For the women, Sharon Ege scored all of the 11 points. Ege had best times in the 400 yard IM, placing ninth and in the 200-yard backstroke, she set a new school record and placed tenth. She also swam the 1650 yard freestyle, placing ninth. In short, her contributions to the team got only helped her, but her fellow swimmers as well.

The high aspirations of the men's team were dashed after the scratch of the 800 Yard Free Relay. If it had not been for this unforeseen development, they might have placed eighth or better. The tides turned as Jeff Smith boldly stepped up onto the block. All competitors set and achieved different goals, and Smith is no exception. He placed eleventh in both the 100 and 200 breaststroke, and also swam the breaststroke leg of the 400 medley relay, which placed eighth. The other swimmers in the relay were: Pete Konar, Brian Brown, and Todd O'Brien. All the members of the medley relay swam excellent and dropped the overall relay time by over two seconds. The 400 Yard Free Relay of Tom McAvoy, Jim "Huge"

Pardun, Pete Konar, and Todd O'Brien placed ninth. The individual splits were outstandingly quick and topped off a great swim effort.

In summary, the season was a very successful one in the eyes of many. There were great swimmers by everyone, the men won regional, and Coach Kearns received the Coach of the Year Award. Despite the great successes, the main goal, which we achieved, was to have fun!!!

Brian Brown comes up for air as he practices for the team.

Badvice for the stressed out

By Jamie Beeson
Staff Writer

"I'm so tired and stressed out." How many times do you hear those words in a week? Stress is common among college students, just look at your classmates at lunch. From experience, I'd say it's because of the jam-packed schedules we tend to maintain.

I hate to start complaining how exhausted I am, but going to school full-time, working, and maintaining an acceptable social life can be hellish.

Some stress can be good, like waiting for that darn letter of acceptance from your college of choice. My best stress is before a big rock concert. I usually pace the floor like a dog in heat. Call me the stress alleviator.

I have some wonderful ideas on how to ease your tensions in the comforts of your own home. So here's some very bad advice, or badvice, from yours truly.

Scream therapy is good. Just look in the mirror and let out a Sam Kinison-like scream and if possible make an uglier face.

The best scream therapy is it later. But don't just tell your job to shove it, tell everything to SHOVE IT!!

I practice my favorite stress reducer while driving, when somebody does something really stupid, don't just honk and give the bird. Hang your head out the window and bellow the obscenity of your choice. It really does make you feel better.

If you feel yourself slipping away when you're doing homework, stop everything, put your pen down, put on some good music and CRANK IT UP.

Remember, stress isn't difficult to deal with, just take a good look around the house and you'll find something to ease your tension.

Think big.

Health Corner

"Wellness" is an active lifestyle in which the individual strives to achieve a state of optimal physical, mental and social well-being. You, the individual, are the key ingredient in wellness. With you in mind, Harper College has scheduled a variety of workshops on the various aspects of wellness during Wellness Week April 3, 4 and 5.

Inter and intra-personal relationships will be explored in a number of presentations. At the breakfast seminar on April 3, Frank Buccaro will identify basic personality types and demonstrate how to communicate effectively with each type. A $4 pre-paid registration is required.

Healthy relationships with parents and children will be the focus of "How to Say No to Your Child and Survive" and "Don't Believe Everything Your Mother Ever Told You". Addictive relationships, destructive relationships and the effects of human sexuality on relationships will be discussed by experts in each field.

In presentations such as "Getting in Touch with Your Inner Child", "The Walking Wounded", "Healing a Broken Heart", "How Faith Affects Self-Esteem" and "To Sleep, Perchance to Dream" you will have the opportunity to achieve greater self-awareness. Assistance with the stresses and strains of relationships will be offered in the "Practical Stress Management", "Single Again" and "Toughlove" seminars. Exercises of physical wellness such as massage therapy, nutrition, diabetes control, menopause, cosmetic surgery, phobias, weight loss, back injury prevention and the psychological impact of heart disease will be discussed during the three days of Wellness Week. Attendees during Wellness Week will have the opportunity to participate in low impact aerobics, aquatics, walking and Tai Chi Chuan exercises.

In addition to the seminars and activities, Wellness Week features a Health Fair on Wednesday, April 4 from 9 am to 3 pm in the Building A lounge. Over 60 community agencies will provide information, materials, samples and free health screenings. Finger-stick cholesterol screenings will be conducted for $5. Northwest Community Hospital staff will be available from 7 am to 11 am to do a Chem Screen 23. This blood test which screens 23 different aspects includes a complete blood count and cardiac risk testing (cholesterol, HDL, LDL, triglycerides) for $20. To make an appointment call 397-3000, extension 2206.

Plan to attend any or all of these fine presentations during the day or evening. All Wellness Week activities are open to the public and all of the sessions/services except those detailed above are free. For additional information or a copy of the complete Wellness Week offerings, stop at the Information Booth in Building A, the Health Service in A362 or call 397-3000, extension 2206.

State of the Earth

Some dangers to marine life

By Fayette Fabris
Staff Writer

What do plastic six-pack rings, styrofoam, and driftnets have in common? They're all deadly to marine life.

SIX-PACK RINGS The plastic holders used for canned soups, drinks and beer get into the ocean via beach littering, ocean dumping, and erosion of oceanic landfills; there they kill gulls, pelicans, seals, and other marine life.

Birds fishing for food get one ring caught around their neck and another ring caught on something else, resulting in drowning or strangulation.

Baby seals and sea lions also get the rings caught around their necks, causing suffocation as the animals grow larger, if they don't drown or strangle first.

Pelicans get them stuck on their bills when diving for fish, resulting in starvation.

In 1988, a 3 hour beach cleanup on 300 miles of Texas coast turned up 15,000 plastic six-pack rings.

What you can do to help cut each ring with scissors before throwing away any of these plastic holders. Also, pick up any you find on the beach and cut them in the same way before throwing away.

STYROFOAM Styrofoam gets into the ocean the same way plastic six-pack rings do. It breaks up into little pieces that look like food, floating on the water, waiting to be eaten by a variety of marine life.

Sea turtles, for example, get their systems clogged by the stuff and can't dive because of the material's buoyancy. This leads to starvation.

To help: Don't buy or use styrofoam products.

DRIFTNETS These are 10 mile long fishing nets used by Japan, Taiwan, and South Korea to catch squid, tuna, and salmon. They float invisibly in the ocean acting as a "wall of death" not only for the intended catch but also dolphins, porpoises, sharks, sea turtles, whales, seals and any other unfortunate creature that happens to get caught in it.

To help support Greenpeace, they are taking direct action to stop this "strip mining of the sea." The Greenpeace ship Rainbow Warrior carries crewmembers to driftnet sites where they take nonviolent action to stop fishing. They also collect information on environmental damage to support the fight for a global ban on driftnetting.

You can send contributions to Greenpeace USA, 1436 U Street N.W., Washington, DC 20005. Don't forget to include your name and address; for a donation of $20 or more you will receive the bimonthly Greenpeace magazine.

BASIC President speaks for club

Dear Ms. Editor,

Because of recent questioning concerning the presence of BASIC (Brothers and Sisters in Christ) in the Harbinger, I'd like to share with your readers our purpose on campus.

I've been involved with BASIC for three years, and for the last two years I have been president of the club. We realize that during the college years, students are searching for answers in their social, academic, and spiritual lives. As a club we can meet two of these needs.

First, we provide monthly social activities which give students an opportunity to get more involved at Harper beyond classes. Second, and more importantly, we can provide an opportunity for spiritual growth for students. This is accomplished through offering three weekly bible discussions and providing information tables. Two of our major goals are to raise money for world hunger and summer missions.

I challenge you to look at BASIC. It could be just what you're looking for! For more information about BASIC, or if you have any questions, call extension 2252 and ask for Paula Taber.

Overnight custodians do work

What exactly does the overnight custodial staff do, you asked. We believe this is the chance we have to let everyone know exactly what our job is. For instance we: mop, sweep, wax, and buff floors; vacuum and shampoo carpets; furniture, and runners; clean and sanitize washrooms; refill toilet tissue and paper towel holders; refill soap dispensers; wash walls; polish stainless steel fixtures; furniture, and railings; sweep and wet mop stairs and stairwells; empty wastepaper and garbage cans and replace plastic liners; empty ash trays; dust furniture, file cabinets, and book shelves; clean blackboards and chalk rail; re-position chairs in lounge area and in hallways; and move supplies from warehouse to all custodial closets. Every once in a while we must make or take down a set up such as one in the cafeteria for a dinner group.

This is usually done before the custodians go to their own areas to begin their evening's work in their respective buildings.

Some of the custodians play cards on their breaks and also on their lunch time. A few of the things that we do not do are: install paper towel holders, install shelves, install ceiling tiles or install marker boards. All of the above are under the jurisdiction of the maintenance department. So we hope you don't want any longer for a custodian to do those things you asked for a year ago.

We hope this will help everyone to understand just what it is the overnight custodial staff does. At least these things are the major portion of what we do; however it is not a complete list of all the jobs performed.

Mark's Menagerie

By Mark James
Staff Writer

Maybe its just me, but it seems to have been a long month in the last week. Lots of things going on with the promise of more to come. Crunch time is upon us and the Crunch-Man is waiting to take us away.

I saw a friend of mine today and she seemed to be in the same type of mood I was in. I saw the scars in her eyes, and so this column this week is dedicated to her, to me and to anyone else who feels that the pressure of school, life, everything and anything and nothing is getting to them.

When things start to get to you here are some helpful hints on things to remember.

Remember to put one foot in front of the other. That's all it takes, just one foot in front of the other. When it gets too hard to lift your feet anymore, then look around for a friend and lean on them until you can go on again.

If you think you don't have any friends you can trust to lean on, think of someone who you would let you lean and turn to them.

Remember when things are not going the way you want them, (when you have on two different color socks, or you can't find a pair that matches), remember you are human. I don't know about you, but I can't find anyone who isn't a "2" on their chest, and this ain't Metropolis.

Superman may not be allowed to make a mistake, but we are. We do the best we can with what we have and then we move on.

Remember the goal that you have in mind, and do the next right thing to get there. If the pressure is so bad that you can't get your mind to do the next right thing, go back to the part about putting one foot in front of the other.

I don't know about you, but there are times when I think that I am more important than I really am. I become a legend in my own mind. At times like that, it's easy to forget that I ain't that big a deal. What I think is important now, about 95% of the things I work on, won't even be a memory by next week, let alone next year.

Remember to keep things simple.

Break things down. If you can't handle everything life is throwing at you, handle one day at a time. If you can't handle that, handle one class at a time, or one hour at a time. If you have to break it down to one minute at a time, well, you wouldn't be the first.

Remember when you are in a rush that things tend to get messed up. Don't beat on yourself too much, unless you screw something up so bad that they don't have a name for it. If they have a name for what you have done, then someone else has done it before.

Remember to keep things in perspective. Keep your priorities straight. Remember to keep your cool for as long as you can and when you can't any longer, lean on a friend.

Guest Opinion
Trust and representation

It may be a sure bet that former Student Senate President Kathleen Munson will succeed in her bid to become the 1990-1991 Harper College Student Trustee. But when it comes to winning trust, Ms. Munson falls considerably short.

Although trust is difficult to articulate, we all covet it daily. It's the ingredient necessary for successful marriages, relationships, and friendships. Business couldn't be conducted without it and international relations are shaped by it. According to Sally Squires of the Washington Post, "Trust allows a person to have an unquestioning belief in the integrity, ability, and strength of another."

Student leadership makes trust more significant. There's an absence of long-term commitment inherent in relations between countries, as well as a legal, economic, and social commitment in marriages. Just as in business, trust on the student representative level must be built more carefully. Once it has been established, trust must be guarded. A trusting relationship with people is a very strong asset.

Readers of the Harbinger may recall the heated race for president of the Student Senate. It was the story of two equally qualified candidates, eager to lead in the direction of accomplishment, splitting the senate's vote. However in the days prior to a run-off election, an "opportunity" entered the race as a candidate of reconciliation.

This situation led one presidential aspirant to withdrawal from the campaign upon seeing his opponent being the benefactor. This subsequently paved the way for the opportunist's victory. That individual was Kathleen Munson.

The senators, in addition to a crowded room of interested students, believed and found credible Ms. Munson's pre-election speech regarding the three A's of leadership: ability, action, and attitude. We heard her state, "...my ambition shows what I will do in the future. I have time to devote to students here," she continued, "I am an example of the three A's of leadership."

Unfortunately, Kathleen Munson's rhetoric was greater than her ability, action, and attitude. Ms. Munson abruptly stepped down January 26 for reasons still unclear to senators and students. This "opportunity" left many in disbelief, feeling betrayed and conned. The trust that she had so carefully cultivated was damaged.

The administration recognizes student interest waxes and wanes; that participation in extracurricular activities is a transient builder. However, there are certain positions of student leadership in which trust must be explicit. Student trustee is one of those positions.

Trust allows student representatives to function. Ms. Munson doesn't realize that, as Psychologist Robert Leffon said, "It is consistency and predictability. It's really being able to count on someone in the way they behave, not so much their intentions, but their actions." Kathleen Munson lacks the trust inherent in representation. Her election as student trustee would not serve the students best interest.

Nitzer Ebb continues good tradition

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

Nitzer Ebb will receive no awards for lyric writing, but their music can run rings around current radio fodder. With help from Flood, one of the greatest producers in the music business, the third Nitzer Ebb album gets a nod as one of the best sounding productions for some time.

The first Nitzer Ebb album, 1987's That Trial Age, featured a constant, fast and relentless beat that made perfect dance floor material. The second album was a bit more varied in tempo, with the songs succeeding slightly better in dance clubs after they were remixed. For much of the material on Showtime, the latest offering from Nitzer Ebb, remixing will be almost necessary for the songs to be readily danceable.

Fortunately dancing is not exactly something you need to do to the songs served up here. It's quite satisfying just to listen to the album, but it's not easy to keep yourself from moving from some of the songs, especially Getting Closer and Fan To Be Had (which are expected to be the next two singles).

Getting Closer is one of the best songs Nitzer Ebb have ever created, with Doug McCarthy's usually raw vocals sounding more desperate that ever before. Closer is the track that follows, called Nobody Knows. It is one of the few genuinely slow songs to appear on a Nitzer Ebb release but it is unquestionably not a ballad; it's more along the lines of a Minnie the Mawcher slow-burner than a torch song.

As a matter of fact, the overall feel of the album is something akin to Nitzer Ebb meets Glenn Miller. There is a jazzy, big-band feel to the first single Lightning Man, while Nobody Knows and One Man's forties music in them.

My Heart, the fifth track on the album, is entertaining at first but becomes a bit too repetitive by the end. The beginning portion of Fan To Be Had is mumbled fairly by Doug, but once the beat starts partner Von Harris sings the rest (Harris previously sang Let Beauty Loose on the first Nitzer Ebb album).

Showtime is a good third effort from a band that delights in taking aggression and turning it into music, and with the music appealing to the darker side of all of us, who needs to worry about making statements or philosophizing with their lyrics? Rating out of 5: 3 1/2.

Mike on Movies

By Mike Schweinsheimer
Harbinger Movie Critic

As a film critic, my job is always easier when I am reviewing a film that is exciting and stimulating. Well, with the film Bad Influence, my work was a piece of cake.

When I went to see the film, I asked myself why I was going. I wanted to know what Rob Lowe would choose to do after the devastating blow to his career from a videotape sex scandal. James Spader's involvement also intrigued me, because of his performance in last year's sleeper hit Sex, Lies and Videotape.

The story introduces us to the successful yuppie Spader. He is engaged to be married and set for a promotion as senior analyst. He meets his bad influence in a bar where Lowe defends him against a bully. When they meet again, Lowe starts drawing Spader into games of lying, drinking, sex, armed robbery and, eventually, cold blooded murder. The film pulled me into this action and suspense that open ended, climax kept me constantly in suspense, always with my eyes on the screen.

The directing and photography of the movie made it hard to do anything but watch. Curtis Hanson, the director, did a stunning job in tying all of the elements to make this a visually stunning picture with a very modern look and feel. He avoided the urban decay so many films depict, and focused on the wealth and opulence that allowed the scandalous action in the picture to occur. He also moved in a very erotic feel. The lighting and use of sexy actors emphasized the lustful feelings felt by all. A pair of breasts in the first shot set that mood for the rest of the film.

All of the sex without feelings and crime without reason, mentally, drew me into Lowe's schemes with Spader. Finally, in the film's climax, the theme of the picture was bluntly stated. Lowe says that all people are not as innocent as they pretend, and that Spader, and therefore the rest of us with him, were drawn into this truth by participating in his crimes and lies.

Many questions remain unanswered, and we are left to dwell on them. I must admit, I was aware of my own potential for evildoing as I left the theater. Hats off to David Keppel, the writer of the film, and to everyone else involved in making it.

Pump

Since their comeback album, Deceit With Mirrors in 1985, Aereonith has been getting better with each new album. Pump, the newest from Aereonith, is a complete about-face from the very commercial Permanent Vacation of 1987, and more of a return to the pat-level sound that they had in the seventies. Tunes Young Lust, FINE, and Love in an Elevator all revive this clearly, street-rock sound which has been the trademark of Aereonith for so long.

Along with the more aggressive tracks on Pump, there are some well-done ballads. Most notably, Juste's Got A Gun, which takes a serious stab at the issue of incest as well as the love song. What It Takes to give Pump a good balance. Balance is a good word to use for this album, because it ranges from quiet blues tunes, Don't Get Mad Get Even, to more commercially acceptable songs like Mr. Girl and The Other Side. The more commercial-sounding songs, even though layered with horns, don't take any of the spontaneous feel away from the album as a whole, and actually lives it up a little more.

Pump seems to give the indication that Aereonith has stayed the same and not "sold out" as Permanent Vacation may have led us to believe. Pump is easily the best Aereonith album in over ten years, with Fry and Tyler taking on the majority of the songwriting chores, as well as stealing most of the attention. Pump will be welcome to old-time fans, as well as everyone else. Out of five, ***

Practice what you Preach

The new Testament album, Practice what you Preach, is an example of an album with good potential turning out weak. It's not that the songs Perdous Nation, Nightmare, or Blessed in Contempt are bad; they are just mediocre with no punch.

Practice what you Preach is not wholly devoid of great ideas: Greenhouse Effects and the anti-nuclear song, Sins of Omission, stress serious issues. These songs are musically more thought-out than some of those on the album. Practice the best song on the album has to be Ballad. Its slow passages change the mood of the album and give meaning to their playing on the whole. Instrumental Confusion Favon is a great cut centered around the rhythms of bassist Greg Christian's thick riffs which help to give the song good identity.

The album closes out with the title track which has a solid sound and some semblance of melody as well as some fairly interesting changes. Practice What You Preach suffers from lack of surprise, but it still has the elements of a good thrash album, namely good playing all around. Even though predictable in a lot of places, it seems that Testament can still hold your interest all the way through. But if you have thrash, then this is one to stay away from. But since I don't, well, out of 5, ***

The Cure Pictures Of You

The latest import single from the Cure is an edited version of Pictures Of You that is about half as long as the original album version and therefore inferior. The other tracks are live versions of Last Dance and Fascination Street recorded at Wembley last July.

It's not really worth getting for the remix of the A-side, though.
Rating: 2 1/2

Depeche Mode Enjoy The Silence

Depeche Mode's second single from the just-released Violator LP is the usual Depeche fare: mildly boring in an enjoyable way. It's far inferior to the previous Personal Jesus, but the B-sides that are available on Enjoy the Silence are magnificent. Sibeling is a heart-wrenching piano piece while Memphis is along similar lines.

Rating: 2 1/2

Nitzer Ebb Lightning Man

Depeche Mode's UK labelmates Nitzer Ebb create another interesting song in the form of Lightning Man. The original version sounds a bit like Glen Miller on acid while the Industry vs. The Ebb remix is a full-blown reworking of the song, more suited to dance than the original.

Tears For Fears Advice For The Young At Heart

By Roland Orzabal and Curt Smith had heard music like this back in 1962 when they released The Hurting they probably would have run screaming from the room. For some inexplicable reason, the record company picked the worst song on the album as a single. Advice For The Young At Heart is a horrid conceit that recalls some of the sappiest Partridge Family recordings.

Rating: 1

That Petrol Emotion Abandon

The 12" mix of Abandon is a frightening song. Frightening because it sounds nothing like That Petrol Emotion, incorporating a house beat and other bits that are very un-Petrol-like. Fortunately you can breathe a sigh of relief when you hear the two songs on the B-side, which are slightly above-average TPE songs. The original version of Abandon, from the forthcoming LP, Chemistry, is far superior to the remix.
Rating: 3, mainly for the B-sides

The Teatime Of Youth

To rekindle interest in the first The Teatime, which was postponed last year due to the death of Matt Johnson's brother Eugene, the band recorded a brand new song, Johnny Marr has said Jealous Of Youth contains his best guitar work since he recorded How Soon Is Now? with the Smiths. The song itself is vaguely reminiscent of Twilight Of A Champion (from 1986's Infected) and gets my vote for best single of the year so far.

IT'S YOUR TURN TO GET RICH!

DON'T LET THIS OPPORTUNITY PASS YOU BY.

Can you picture yourself making at least $500 a week, every week? If you can, I urge you to read this article. It could be worth thousands of dollars to you! My name is Mark Preston. I am 32 years old and a self-made millionaire. A few years ago I discovered a money making method that changed my life forever. This is not just another "get rich quick" scheme. This is a unique new system that is in demand everywhere, yet few people even know it exists.

Anyone can do it. True, it is not easy to make money, this system is far from simple. I was flat broke and at least $10,000 in debt. My family thought I was crazy and said I should be out looking for a "real job." That did not stop me. I was determined to make it with this system. Money making plan I had discovered. I started at home on the kitchen table with no capital. Within a year I was taking in over $100,000 A YEAR. MORE THAN A MILLION DOLLARS A YEAR! I went from driving an old beat up Pick-Up to a Brand New Lincoln Continental. I paid for it all in cash. I bought a new house in a prestigious neighborhood, a waterfront summer cottage and a beach house in Florida. I do not mean to brag, but these are my results using this amazing money making system. Do not envy me, join me!

THE SECRET REVEALED

I know that I had discovered a revolutionary new money making program that would continue to make me thousands of dollars a day. It seemed so easy. I asked myself why everybody wasn't rich? Then it dawned on me that not everyone knew about this secret method of making money. You do not need special training, even a college education for this money making system to work for you. Once you have learned how to use it, your money worries will be over for life. You will have financial security and peace of mind. This money making system is perfectly legal and amazingly simple. It has nothing to do with real estate, the stock market, or gambling of any kind. It does not matter what your financial situation is now. You can start this money making program at home in your spare time with less than $10.00. In a few short weeks you will see the cash start to roll in. Once you put this money making system to work for you, the sky is the limit! You will have cash to spend on whatever you want, whenever you want it. Think of it. Enough cash to finally put an end to economic nightmares forever!

HERE'S PROOF

I am sure you are somewhat skeptical at this point. That just shows you have good business sense. Read what a few people had to say about my money making program.

Dear Mark,
I ordered your program 3 months ago and started using it the day I got it. In just the last 1 month I have shined at the results. Last month I deposited over $11,000 in my bank account. Thank you so much.
N.C. Stuart Florida

Dear Mark,
When I first saw your article I had my doubts. I said to myself I might as well try it. I said I'd be $25.00 ahead with your program. Well, your material changed my life from being flat broke in July to practically a millionaire in December. I can do it, anyone can.
J.S. San Diego CA

Dear Mark,
Before I ordered your money making method I was saving money cutting taxes for $4.00 an hour. At 19 years old my future looked bleak. Last week I made over $10,000 in less than 20 hours of work. I am the envy of all my friends. Thanks for a new life!
J.B. Loudonville NY

IT'S UP TO YOU

Now life can change now by taking simple action. Order my money making program today and see for yourself! All you have to do is follow the step-by-step procedures I provide you with. It will only take you about an hour's reading time to master the program. If you can see yourself being rich, you will be rich! I make it easy for you. Included in my manual is my unlisted telephone number for you to call anytime you need help. I guarantee that within a week of using my money making method you will see the cash start to roll in. With my money making system, your success is guaranteed!

$2500 CASH BONUS

I am so sure that my money making program will work for you, I am going to offer you a guarantee that no one else can. You either raise $15,000 using my money making system, or I will send you a certified check for $2,500. That's right, $2,500 just for giving my money making program an honest try. The only reason I can offer you a guarantee like this is because I know you are going to make a lot of money copying my money making system. So much money that I am putting up $2,500 to prove it to you. It's that simple. You have nothing to lose and everything to gain. The risk is mine.

Women's and men's track get ready

By Lou Nunez
Geoff Witter

For Women's Track & Field Coach Renee Zeltner, the 1990 season will give her a chance to accomplish something that even Governor Thompson won't do - go for five - a drive for a fifth consecutive Region IV Championship. In addition, Zeltner will also be coaching the defending Region IV Champion Men's Team, due to the departure of former coach John Johnson. He formally resigned in February to take a front-office job with the Green Bay Packers.

Women's Track

"We are really not as strong in numbers," said the coach. "But the people we have are really great." Zeltner returns three solid performers. Region IV champion and national qualifier Michelle Maxwell leads the returnees. The sophomore from Prospect made the trip to Odessa, Texas last summer by qualifying in the heptathlon, placing ninth. In the heptathlon, people compete in seven different events over two days: 100 meter hurdles, high jump, shot put, 200 meter dash, javelin, long jump, and 800 meter run.

Another national qualifier, Pam Winder, returns after a tenth place finish in the 1500 meters at the meet. Sprinter Carla Stanger also returns for Zeltner.

"She will be a strong asset in the 4 X 400 meter relay," the coach said.

Among the newcomers are Rachel Lyons, Ann Walsh, and Rosalinda Sueda. Lyons is a long distance runner from Hoffman Estates who qualified for the IHSAA Class AA State Meet last May. Together, the trio will be looked to in the 800/1500 meter races.

Another newcomer, Jackie Szykowsky, is a long-distance specialist who will run the 5,000/10,000 meter races. Zeltner's latest sprinter, Robin Moore, is strong in multi-events: heptathlon, javelin and shot put. Unfortunately, she is sidelined for the next four to six weeks with an ankle injury. In the meantime, the coach will depend on Lee Ann Camps, a field events person who specializes in shot put and javelin.

Men's Track

With the largest men's track team (16 members) in ten years, the Hawks fortunes could be looking up this spring. "It's the strongest overall team we've ever had," Zeltner said. "We should have a dynamic 400 meter relay team. We should have several people contending for nationals. It's also a hard working team." With this big squad, the coach has enlisted two assistant coaches, John Brady for distance events and John Nellesen for sprints and jumps.

Zeltner has only two returning athletes from last year's team. Jerome Taylor should be a part of Zeltner's dynamic 400 meter relay. Tom Ions, a long distance runner who also qualified for the NIAA National Cross Country Meet in the fall of 1986 for Harper, returns in the 800 and 1500 meter races. "He looks tough, real strong," Zeltner said.

The freshmen are led by All-NAC and Region IV football star Livorno Butler. He may be the fastest sprinter on the team. Zeltner added all the boys from Beach, Florida product. "He wants the school record in the 100 meters," Butler will work along with Cedrick Gaston. "He's learning what it means to work out," she said of Gaston. "He's working hard now." Mike Theodorakis is solid in the high hurdles and relay races. Mike Cadell, a jumper looks good in the 400 meter low hurdles and sprints. Mike Hynek and Bradford Jones, another football crossover, will also compete in these events.

Heading the distance runners are Jon Gwynn and Chris Swartzthinskia. Gwynn was a member of back-to-back IHSAA Class AA State Cross Country Champion teams at Schaumburg High School, coached by former Harper star Jim Mander. Swartzthinskia competes in the steeplechase, a 3,000 meter run with hurdles over water.

Field events should be strong with four more football players leading the way. Scott Melzer is expected to compete in the shot put and discus. "He's an excellent technical athlete," Zeltner said. "He spins on both events, which is fun to watch." Steve Rokusack qualified for the NIAAA National Wrestling Tourney for Harper. He and Brent Harbold will compete in the shot put and the hammer throw. Chris Steadman will compete in the hammer throw and the javelin.

Harper's hopes in the decathlon will fall on the shoulders of Jamie Burnette. The decathlon is a series of ten events run over two days: 100 meter dash, 110 meter high hurdles, long jump, discus, javelin, pole vault, 400 meter run, high jump, 1500 meter run, and shot put. Wayne DeLoecker and Kurt Stinger will compete in the pole vault.

Both teams will open the season by hosting the Harper Invite, Saturday at 10:00 am.

B-ball team has magical season

By Lou Nunez
Geoff Witter

The predictions were out early for the 1989-90 Hawks basketball team. Four maybe five victories, the prognosticators confidently stated. Anything over that would be a definite accomplishment.

Evidently, rookie coach Paul Kastner did not take the position at Harper to put together another losing season. Kastner and his assistant Duane Sell molded a team without height (only one player over 6'5") and without big-name players into a scrappy defense-minded team that did the little things right.

Harper's magical season included victories over NIAAA Division II National four-man qualifier Menominee Valley, Region IV-Division I Runner-Up Triton, and Division II regional Semi-Finalist Triton.

The season ended March 3 with a 101-89 loss to eventual Region IV Division II Runner-Up Du Page in the second round of the playoffs. The Hawks finished the season 10-12, compared to two previous 11 wins (5-22 last season and 6-23 the year before).

Freshman George Dillies became a serious scoring threat in Kastner's offense. The St. Vrain grad had six games of 30 or more points and peaked with a school-record 49 points against Triton in a 103-90 double overtime win December 12. Dillies received second team All-NAC honors and earned All-Tournament honors at the Harper Thanksgiving Tournament and the Highland Christmas Classic.

Another freshman, Derek Murray, an NAC Honorable Mention selection and

All-Harper Tourney selection, proved to be a reliable player along with fellow NAC Honorable Mention recipient Paul Belton, a transfer from Winona State in Minnesota.

Sophomore Jason Brooks, an NAC second team selection along with Dillies, matured at his second year and became a team leader. His backcourt mate Paul Combs turned into a deadly 3-point shooter.

Combs, a third team NAC honor, had a career-high 29 points in a 102-88 win over Triton February 22.

Chuck Whitman and Dean Petrulakis were 3-point threats combining for over 80 of the team's 158 three-pointers during the season. The two combined for Kastner's first win as a college coach against Waukegan Tech November 22. Whitman nailed a school-record six 3-point baskets as part of his game-high 22 points. Petrulakis hit the game winner this third on the night with 1:30 to go culminating a second-half comeback.

Jay Kaminski developed a nice touch from outside and chipped in a 20-point effort during the campaign in a 93-75 win at Joliet, January 13.

John Toussaint saw plenty of action, scoring a key basket in a come-from-behind 82-79 win over Sauk Valley to behind third place at the Highland Classic. Herb Williams contributed in the Sauk Valley game with a crucial basket and had another key score in the Triton win.

The Hawks finished 6-6 in league play tied for fourth place and placed second at the Harper Tourney. Pardon the prognosticators; after all they had never heard of Paul Kastner. Next season, they should be wiser.

Resumes help open the corporate door

By Alisa Chinlund

Most job seekers these days spend numerous hours creating resumes. It's a tedious process for some and a routine for others. Does the resume help the employee get the job?

Employment experts disagree. Some believe resumes aren't worth the paper they're printed on. Others feel resumes are essential to securing the job.

A job search is like a campaign," said Chris Kranz, placement specialist. The best strategy is to successfully market yourself to an employer.

The resume is like a circular catalog, said Kranz. "It brings the customer into the show room."

A resume is a beneficial marketing tool when used effectively. It provides the prospective employer with a quick reference to your educational background, work experience, interests and achievements.

"Employers use resumes to analyze past performance and judge future success," said Kranz. "Resumes hit the hot buttons of an employer," said

"A job search is like a campaign"

Kranz. "They cannot guarantee you a job, but they may get you to interview."

There is no way to guarantee the resume will end up in an interview. Rather than a garbage can, a carefully prepared resume can open the door for an interview," said Kranz.

"Employers look for accomplishments and achievements on a resume," said Kranz. "They're not interested in a complete job description of past responsibilities. Focus on what makes you unique."

"Employers generally don't know anything about the person submitting the resume," said Kranz. "The information in the resume is used as a screening tool. The applicant has about 30 seconds to sell himself to an employer."

Interview tips

By Alisa Chinlund

You're nervous about an upcoming job interview. Your palms are sweaty and you're sick to your stomach. You're a wreck. What do you do?

Placement specialist Chris Kranz offers Harper students helpful interviewing advice:

- Research the company by calling for annual reports or other information. Look at newspapers or talk to people.
- Demonstrate confidence. Develop a list of questions that might be asked in an interview setting. Spend ten minutes in a mock interview. Do this at least four times.
- Arrive at the interview early. Dress appropriately.
- Firmly shake the interviewer's hand, maintain eye contact during the interview. Sit erect.
- Ask intelligent questions.
- Thank the employer for his or her time.
- Ask for permission to contact the employer for future information and job progress.

Resume

"Resumes should be no more than two pages long," said Kranz. "Longer resumes may state too much and negatively affect the applicant's chance of getting the job."

The resume should be neatly typed on high quality white or cream paper. Watch for typos and misspellings. Employers pay attention to its content, its appearance and the overall layout of the resume.

Target your resume to a particular job or company," said Kranz. "It's hard to develop an effective generic resume."

"Truthfully relate information in your resume," said Kranz. "You can explain gaps in the interview."

The resume is a stepping stone. It can pave the way for an interview or end in the trash. An effective resume can help show the employer that you are the best person for the job.

Drug screening and your career

By Marc J. Balke

Drug and alcohol screening is now a normal business practice when it comes to hiring new employees. Employers are concerned about the effect drugs can have on their workers.

According to a Career Development Center survey at the California State University, 47 percent of 315 national employers of college graduates screened job applicants for drug use. Nine percent of those surveyed not testing, planned on implementing the test within the next two years.

Drug screening in general is done by large companies because of the expenses involved when administering the tests. But today smaller companies are considering the advantages of finding out about a person's drug problem before they're hired. Testing occurs in all job areas, whether it is part time, full time, summer or temporary; no job is excluded.

These tests are given in different ways including: polygraph tests, urinalysis, blood screening or even hair samples. All testing is generally done by an outside agency at a local treatment facility.

The length of time that a substance is retained in the body can be detected in the urine. Drug amounts will vary with the individual's metabolism. Retention time for marijuana, for example, can be from five days for a moderate user, up to several weeks for the chronic user (see chart for how long drugs stay in the urine).

Applicants should understand that drug testing should not be taken lightly. Your use or non use of a drug could decide whether you get the job. Employers do not have to tell you why you were not hired. You can ask to be tested again if you think there was a mistake, although most requests are denied.

Laboratory results are not always accurate. The growth of testing is overloading laboratories and creating demand for new facilities that may not have established standards for accuracy.

Some tests will detect the use of prescription drugs. Make sure the employers knows that they might find in the results.

When asked, "Did you ever use drugs?", answer honestly; most people have experimented with drugs. Feel open to tell them what you have tried - honesty will win them over.

If you are tested for drugs, make sure you get the answers to your questions beforehand. Asking afterwards can only get you into trouble. If you know the facts, you can be screened with a healthy conscience.

Parts of this article were based on a student handout on drug screening written by Diana Regier, formerly Assistant Director of the Career Services Office at Arizona State University.

How long drugs stay in the urine

Job outlook in the year 2000

By Jamie Beeson

As a college student, did you ever wonder where the new jobs will be in the future, and, equally as important, what they will pay? For those entering college, the uncertainty of not knowing what you want to do in life can be frustrating. Not only is it important to recognize the occupations with the most growth, but the fastest-growing jobs should also be considered.

Paralegal professionals top the list of jobs with the largest percentage increase, with a growth rate of 103.7% having an average salary of $45,000. All predictions are for the year 2000. Why? Because we live in a nation where people love to sue each other. As the number and complexity of lawsuits increases, so will the need for these workers. Most new jobs will be in private firms.

The largest growing market is the medical field, from assistants to record technicians. Medical assistants have a projected growth rate of 90.4% at an average salary of $20,000-$32,000 for the year 2000. Physical therapists have an expected growth rate of 85.5% at an average salary of $53,000. Great demands for these workers are due to the fast-growing number of older Americans seeking medical care. As the population ages, more physical therapists will be needed to plan and administer treatment.

Retail salespeople top the list of occupations with the most new jobs. By the year 2000, there will be 1,201,000 new jobs with salaries averaging $23,000. Increased demand and high turnover will make these jobs easy to get, but competition for higher paying positions will be intense.

Waiter and waitresses will see 752,000 new jobs and an average salary of $18,000. These food servers will be needed as restaurants continue to succeed.

What the future holds for anyone depends on the career decisions being made today.

Placement Office offers job opportunities

A variety of services helping students learn to find the job they want

By Phyllis Benson

The Placement Office offers a variety of services to help teach students and alumni the tools necessary to find a job. Using a computerized job matching system, they match a student's interests and education to a job listing. "The function of the whole office is to establish contact between the employer and the student," said Director of Placement Russ Mills.

Career counselors are available to help students decide "what they would like to do." The identification of skills and interests helps in three areas: helps the student decide what they want to do, match them with a job, and establish contacts.

Once skills are identified and a job listing is found, a student can receive the job listing in the mail. If a contact is not found within 45 days, then a student can sign up again for a nominal $5 charge for another mailing in the same semester. "It depends on how serious you are," said Mills. "For serious job seekers, 45 days is a good amount of time to make a contact. If they're not so serious, then it's not so easy."

Mills emphasizes that the Placement Office does not find students jobs, but rather teaches students how to find a job. "We teach the tools to help you find the job you want; we won't find one for you," he said. "We teach through job support and services."

The Placement Office averages 1,085 job listings each month with peak periods from March to May and October to November. Last year over 4,325 new employers utilized the services. Employers fill out a form which identifies five areas of interest to students:

the career area, education required, experience required, geographic location and type of employment, full-time, part-time or seasonal. The same information is asked of the student and then all the information is coded and computer matched. Two times each week matches are made. The decision to call the contact is left up to the student.

"We teach and help students to respond to the contact," said Mills. "If they used the service then they have learned something and are ready to do a job search. After three months our office of research and planning calls every student to see if they found a job and if they're happy."

Russ Mills

Mills finds it interesting that 18% of those who have found new jobs have a bachelor's degree. More than 40% are employed in fields unrelated to their area of study in college. "The average person changes jobs

TIPS FOR WORKING PARENTS

☐ If your children are to be in charge of themselves at home, talk about activities they can do and the routines they are to follow. Discuss family policies on entertaining and visiting friends and what to do when the phone or door bell rings.

☐ Have children — teens too — check in with you at work or with a neighbor when they come home from school. Be sure they memorize your work phone number and give this number to a neighbor too. Put it next to the phone, along with numbers for a neighbor, police, and fire department. Let your kids know when you will be home.

☐ Check out babysitters and day care centers carefully. Ask for references and call them!

☐ Instruct children and babysitters not to give out any information about who is at home, who is out, and for how long.

☐ Get together with your neighbors, PTA, Boys' Club/Girls' Club, and schools to provide after-school activities as an alternative to leaving a child at home alone.

☐ Talk to your employer about employer-sponsored child care options. These can range from an on-site day care center to summer day camps, information and referral services, and financial assistance.

☐ Establish a block parent program to keep kids safe as they walk to and from school. Rely on elderly residents, housekeepers, and mothers at home with young children and reward them with parties, a home-cooked meal, or babysitting vouchers.

☐ Encourage schools to offer survival skills training where children learn safety measures such as fire safety, accident prevention, and first aid, as well as personal safety and sexual abuse prevention tips.

☐ Work with the PTA, youth clubs, local Y, or churches to establish a warm line that latch-key children can call if they're scared or lonely.

☐ See if churches or other community groups offer "rap" sessions for teenagers.

☐ Take time to listen to your kids — what they're doing, what's going on with their friends and school, their highs and lows points.

six times," said Mills. The Placement Office also offers a library and employer literature file so students can research a company and find previous listings with the college. KiNexus, a nationwide job listing, and Resumes by Ralph are also available.

"We offer a disk that you can use at home or in the computer lab," said Mills. "Follow the guidelines to make your own resumes, and then bring it in to the office, and we will print it on the laser printer."

Seminars and workshops are held throughout the semester to help students develop the skills to find a job. Included are Career Interest Testing Workshops, Career Transitions, Interviewing Techniques, Job Search Techniques, and Resume Writing. Most are held in the evening.

The office is also sponsoring an Employment Fair on Tuesday, April 3 from 10 am to 2 pm in Building M. Employers from the community will be on hand to answer questions and take resumes. "It's an excellent opportunity for students to speak to different employers and see what's available."

The Placement Office offers its services free to Harper students, alumni and high school students in the district. Pamphlets and handbooks are available on the job search and interviewing, as well as applications for the computerized matching service. The Career Planning and Placement Office is located in A-347. Writing a resume with KiNexus

By Jamie Beeson

How would you feel about entering your resume information into a computer, in your own style, and companies across the nation contacting you for available positions? If this sounds like your cup of tea, then KiNexus is for you.

KiNexus is an easy-to-use, candidate information service that allows employers to discover your distinctive qualifications.

When you register (by means of an IBM compatible personal computer), your computerized profile is added to a nationwide database shared by national and local employers.

The potential benefits of this service are numerous. Primarily, it gives your career center information on you. "KiNexus allows a student to be accessed by a large number of corporate recruiters," said Chris Kranz, Placement Specialist.

It takes roughly 45 minutes of your time to view a tutorial and answer questions: about yourself, what you want to do, when you want it, and what you have to offer an employer. "Competition [for jobs] is heavy," said Kranz. "But KiNexus allows you to at least be considered for an opportunity, and it could

An Equal Opportunity Employer

Building yourself a better resume

By Phyllis Benson

Employment for the 1990's will show a slower growth trend than the previous decade, according to the Monthly Labor Review put out by the U.S. Department of Labor. The United States is projected to add 18 million jobs by the year 2000, a rate of 1.5 million, or 1.2% per year. Total job growth from 1976 to 1988 was 2.3 million, or 2.3% per year.

It is into this slower growing work arena that the graduates of 1990 will enter. How can a graduate stand out in the diminishing job market? What is it that employers are looking for?

"The biggest complaint that employers have now about prospective employees," said Russ Mills, Director of Placement at Harper, "is that candidates are not well-versed in communication skills. It is not so much expertise, or training. Employers believe candidates are being well-trained."

"That's why employers come to Harper to recruit," he said. They can assume that candidates have the skills.

Getting your foot in the door is the first step. An excellent resume can go a long way in opening doors and distinguishing a candidate from the pack. "If responding to an ad," said Senior Staffing Specialist of Motorola, Inc., Mary Schaeffer, "the resume is very important. At a job site, appearance is important, but the resume is also because it remains after the fact. For many it is the only contact."

Bill Johnson, personnel manager for McDonald's Corp. agrees. "The resume becomes the key," he said. A good one should reflect who you are and be accompanied by a good cover letter. If it's not very interesting, then chances are the resume isn't either. It should be geared toward intrigue and raising questions in my mind - 'Who is this person?'

Another vital area where an applicant can make a difference is the personal interview. "Personality can make or break a candidate," said Mills. "Employers put as much stock in that during interviews as they do in all the training and education. The first five minutes are critical. If a bad first impression is made, then a lot of time is spent making up for it. Decisions are made by evaluating you and your personality and how you will fit in the department or company. All of that is sorted out in the interview."

Schaeffer agrees. While good work experience and education are important, "when it comes down to a good candidate, he has to be able to adapt to different work environments and cultures at Motorola. Some times candidates don't really know what they want," she said. "If goals are set it is much more helpful. Goals need to be firm and expressed ahead of time, and a candidate needs to try to achieve them instead of just wanting any job."

Johnson looks for several things when interviewing a candidate. "In our business, at the restaurant management level there are typically several dimensions involved. Decision making,

One important aspect of choosing a position is understanding yourself. Self evaluation can help you analyze what is important to you in the kind of work you will do and the kind of organization in which you will work.

The following are some of the things you should consider in your own self evaluation. Your answers should be honest. They are meant to help you and should not represent a "good" or "bad" value judgment.

initiative, energy and communication skills, both oral and written are important. Adaptability is key, and being able to handle rapidly changing situations. Intuitiveness and enthusiasm are looked for. In our business you have to be very enthusiastic. We watch for these things very, very closely.

First 10 Seconds the Key

What you do and say during the first 10 seconds of an interview may determine whether you are hired, according to Robert Half, president of Robert Half International. "If the first impression an interviewer has of a job candidate's attitude, personality, or appearance is negative, that person runs the risk of being eliminated from any further consideration for the position," Half said. "The fact is that interviewers, like the rest of us, are very likely to judge a book by its cover." He advised job seekers to "make that cover as attractive as possible."

Some prime examples of initial interview behavior that could result in a candidate's rejection:

-A weak or half-hearted handshake
-Failure to maintain eye contact, indicating a lack of self-confidence

-Slouching in the chair or looking either uninterested or intimidated
-Lack of enthusiasm or responsiveness
-Poor grooming or inappropriate dress
-Smoking
-A hostile or abrasive attitude
-Boastfulness, egotism, or being overly aggressive
-Acting as if the candidate is doing the interviewer a favor by being there
-Treating the secretary or receptionist in a cavalier, or condescending manner

"Serious job candidates take the job search seriously," stressed Half. "They know that the first impression they make on the interviewer is almost always going to be the lasting impression."

Eliasik investigation complete

Football recruitment guidelines tightened

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-chief

The results of an internal investigation of Harper's football program were released Tuesday. As a result of the investigation, several actions are or will be taken, beginning with the 1990-91 school year.

Harper's football program first went under examination at the end of the fall 1989 semester, when ex-Harper football player Juan Taylor accused Head Coach John Eliasik of benching him because of failure to repay a loan.

At that time, investigations were conducted by John Telsch, the Dean of the Physical Education, Athletics and Recreation Division, and Vice President of Student Affairs Dr. Bonnie Henry. Neither fellow football players nor other coaches could substantiate Taylor's accusations.

That investigation led Henry to conduct a complete review of the football program.

During the most recent investigation, it was found that two loans were made by two assistant coaches to two different athletes, only one of which was repaid. However, with the exception of these loans, no money has been exchanged between coaches and athletes.

The report also confirmed that Eliasik is managing apartments owned by his sister and rented by some Harper student athletes.

The investigation discovered that for at least the last two years, two-thirds of the football team has consisted of students from outside Harper's district.

Many of these students come to Harper with lower academic standing than in-district students, and some of these out-of-district

Students and community members question the employers who participated in this year's fair.

Employment Success

By Marc J. Balke
Staff Writer

Representatives from more than 100 major companies offered students, employees and the general public an opportunity to save a lot of leg work in obtaining career information and potential jobs at the third annual Employment Fair in Building M Tuesday.

More than 1000 people attended the event, which included free seminars about "Direct Consumer Sales", "Jobs, Success, Happiness" and "Projecting a Professional Image".

For students it provided an early start to finding that summer job. For many the fair made it possible to talk to more than one employer. Job seekers were given a chance to talk to representatives from large companies in the community such as ADP, Allstate, Motorola and Xerox and small companies without the hassle and pressure of an interview or the inconvenience of losing more than a day of work.

Overall, the fair was a success and plans are being made for next year. If you were unable to attend the fair and want information concerning job opportunities visit the Career Planning Office in A347.

Marsalis; All that jazz

Jazz filled the air last Friday when Branford Marsalis took the stage.

Albert Vazquez
Guest Writer

After he and his fellow jazz cats finished a rather lively and mischievous number, Branford Marsalis stepped up to the microphone, chuckled, and said "You have no idea what goes on up here." What was behind the smiling raised eyebrows, exchanged knowing looks and sarcastic postures? This collective framing of minds and moods created the notes and phrases that filled the air Friday night March 30 in 1143.

Marsalis (alto & soprano saxophone), Kenny Kirkland (piano) Robert Hard (upright bass) and Jeff Tain Watts (drums) flew in that afternoon from the east coast to do a 7-10 pm and a 10-10 pm show before heading to New Orleans the next day. Their flights were delayed a couple of hours and Watts' trap kit and snare were on American Airlines freight until at least 5 pm. Program Board drivers had to weave through rush hour traffic at duelling speeds in order to assure a 7-30 pm start.

The equipment survived and the Marsalis Quartet walked on the stage on time, though Watts had to continue setting up his cymbals. During this time Marsalis gave a loud back introduction of the players and explained the freight delay. The audience was cheerfully understanding. Marsalis started

Nine out of ten students admit to plagiarism

(CPS) -- As many as nine out of 10 students have plagiarized a paper sometime during their college careers.

Miami University of Ohio Prof. Jerrold Hale and two colleagues surveyed 234 students and found that 91.2 percent of the students admitted to having committed at least one of four academically dishonest practices in connection with written assignments.

Of those, 74.2 percent failed to cite a reference for paraphrased or quoted material, 44.2 percent passed off another student's work for their own, 40.6 percent failed to use a word-for-word quote as a direct quotation, and 19.9 percent used misleading references to hide plagiarism.

The results echo a survey released by Harvard University's Institute for Educational Management in early March that found about 30 percent of the nation's college students have cheated on term papers or exams.

In addition, 43 percent of 5,000 professors told the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching that today's undergraduates are more willing than their predecessors to cheat to get good grades.

The root of the problem, Maitre's Halc says, is the intense pressure placed upon students to achieve academically.

"If the overall goal is to succeed in college, you'd think students wouldn't cheat," said Paige Foster, a student at the University of Kentucky. "Our student handbook is pretty clear about what is plagiarism."

"Pressure to get good grades is no excuse to cheat," added Bonnie Wiese of Keene State College in New Hampshire.

Professor brings Mongolian culture to campus

By Alisa Chisland
Assistant Managing Editor

Inner Mongolia University Professor Bingjun Xu learned English 33 years ago in Beijing. He hoped to practice the language and teach it to his students. Unfortunately, Russian was chosen over English so Xu had little opportunity to speak or teach it. About ten years ago, English was added to the Inner Mongolia University curriculum. Xu loved teaching English and American Drama to students. "I especially enjoyed teaching the work of Arthur Miller and Walt Whitman," said Xu.

Xu went to the United States and Japan in May of 1985 to sign culture exchange agreements with the University of Idaho and four other universities.

This semester, through Harper Educational Foundation sponsorship, Xu will be on campus to teach individuals or groups about Inner Mongolia and the People's Republic of China. Xu is available to discuss topics including Chinese geography, history, ethnic groups, lifestyles, cultures, languages, social customs, etiquette, urban centers, manufacturing or teach a Mongolian song.

"The Inner Mongolia Autonomous Region is the oldest of China's five minority nationally autonomous regions," said Xu. "It is in the northern frontier of China and covers an area of 1.18 million square kilometers with a population of about two million people. The people who live there represent many different nationalities including Han Mongolian, Manchu, Hui, Daur and Ewenki."

"Some of the men and women in the grassland wear Mongolian tunics to work and protect them from the sun and wind," said Xu.

"The Mongolians are nomadic people," said Xu. "Some of them live in Mongolian Yurts (transportable houses) during the warm months and brick houses in the winter."

"The Mongolians are very open, honest, frank and courteous," said Xu. "They will welcome you to their Yurt and feed you to your heart's content."

"They are natural born singers and dancers," said Xu. "They excel in horse racing, archery and wrestling."

"The people do not enjoy a full material life or competition as Americans do," said Xu. "Americans are given a chance to enjoy material things and work hard to get ahead."

"It's a difficult life in China," said Xu. "People work hard and get paid very little. It would be good if the standard of living and educational literacy were raised."

"I'm very impressed with the Harper campus," said Xu. "I'm impressed with the facility, teaching, research, and the devotion, harmony and cooperative spirit of teachers, staff and students."

Video exhibition starts at Harper

By Alicia C. Hinlund
Assistant Managing Editor

It's one down and two to go in the Tournament of Power. Phase one was held at Harper College on March 23 through March 25. Thousands of people flocked to Harper's gym to test their skills in competitive and play more than 700 state-of-the-art video, arcade and hand-held electronic games in the nation's first Tournament of Power. The tournament is the brainchild of former boxer Brian Bennett.

industry-wide competition which pits players of all ages against the country's most popular games.

Harper's participants had the opportunity to pay one price for a day or purchase a "power pass" for admission for the whole weekend. They had the chance to enter or watch the competition, enjoy free play of the games, or soak up the atmosphere.

"Tournament of Power provides a fun way for kids of all ages to find out what's in the market and play games to their heart's content," said Director Gary Silbar.

"Parents and kids have a chance to learn about Atari, Sega, 'NFC' and Nintendo," said Silbar. "They can compare systems and games to make educated purchasing decisions."

"Tournament of Power provides a fun upbeat atmosphere filled with games, music, videos, laser light shows, clowns, and caricatures," said Silbar. "There's something for everyone."

In the '90s, I feel confident that the video industry will see a new generation of competitors who will make a living while enjoying their favorite pastime - video games," said Bennett.

At Harper's Tournament of Power, kids and adults waited in line to compete for prizes in the 12 and younger, under 18, or over 18 categories. Finalists were guided to a 30-foot custom-designed jockey ship featuring arcade stalls, television monitors for viewing by proud parents, friends and spectators plus electronic scoreboards. More than $51,000 in cash, merchandise and scholarships was awarded during the tournament.

"Tournament of Power was a tremendous event," said Michael Neyman, coordinator of student activities. "It was great to see the kids' eyes light up when they saw the big playground of electronic equipment."

"I'm proud of the Harper students who were involved in the tournament," said

Neyman. "They worked hard and met the challenge."

"Tournament of Power started at Harper College," said Neyman. "It was really exciting to help get it off the ground."

DePaul Alumni Hall, Belden and Sheffield, and Phoenix/Chicago Expo Center, 17040 S. Halsted, Harvey will host Tournament of Power respectively on April 6 through 8, and April 19 through 21. Tickets are available through Ticketmaster at (312) 559-1212 or at the drive.

Is Harper a real college?

By Mark James
Staff Writer

I've heard some things that have brought back some memories. I overheard some people saying things like "Harper isn't a real college." Things like that make me wonder about things, like what makes a college "real?"

Maybe I'm wrong, but I heard a rumor that most 4 year institutions will take Harper credits. This is as yet unverified in my life, but for one friend of mine that got accepted to the Art Institute (way to go L), it's verified for her.

Another rumor I've heard is that Harper has some pretty good sports teams. Anyone who wants to dispute this can talk to a friend of mine who just received a scholarship from a "real school" for his football playing at Harper. I'd dispute it, but I have a rule. It's a very simple rule, but very effective. It goes along the lines of never piss off someone who is bigger than my car.

Funny, but I also heard that Harper had about the same number of people registered as Northern. If of this tends to make me think that maybe Harper is a "real" college.

For some people here, this is the only college they will ever know or need. They don't need a Bachelor's to tell them their life has meaning.

The point I am trying to get at is that Harper is a "real" college for those that put in "real" time. If you are only here for a good time, to give you breathing space before going on to a "real" college where you "will definitely do better, when it counts", you may find yourself in deep trouble.

There was a time in my life when I was always waiting around for the right moment to apply myself. Funny thing, but the right time never showed itself, at least until I realized that the right time is right now.

This is the only time we will ever have. I was told once that if you have one leg in yesterday (dreaming of my past "glory's") and one foot in tomorrow (dreaming of what great things I'll do) I'm in a great place to press on today.

I've been here for two years and my time is almost at an end. I've lived every minute of it (that's right, it is okay to enjoy college). You will get out of Harper exactly what you put into it. No more and no less.

State of the earth

By Fayette Fabres
Staff Writer

Rain forests are tropical forests which receive 4 to 8 meters of rain each year and are located in Asia, Central and South America and near the African equator. To illustrate the rain forest, here is what you would find in a typical patch of four square miles: 750 species of trees, 1500 kinds of flowering plants, 125 species of mammals, 400 kinds of birds, 100 species of reptiles, 60 kinds of amphibians, 150 species of butterflies and other insects too numerous to count.

Rain forests are being destroyed at the rate of 50 acres per minute, which adds up to 27 million acres per year. 80% of all deforestation has occurred within the last ten years. The destruction includes the conversion of rain forests to pastures for cattle grazing, harvesting of tropical hardwoods such as mahogany and teak, population resettlement and the building of power plants.

Cattle are important for Central America. 90% of the beef produced is exported to the U.S. for use in fast food restaurants and pet foods (15 square feet of rain forest is required to make enough beef for a quarter-pounder hamburger).

Rain forest soil is not rich, only the top two inches contain nutrients, so the area is grazed out within two years, forcing ranchers to create new pastures elsewhere. This, of course, leads to very rapid depletion of rain forests. By the year 2000, 80% of them could be gone forever.

Rain forests are very important as a habitat for wildlife, to the field of medicine, to the production of oxygen and the consumption of carbon dioxide. Only 1% of the earth's surface is covered by rain forests yet over half of the world's plant, animal and insect species live in them. One of four medical drugs come from tropical rain forest plants. These include tranquillizers, anesthetics, and narcotics for cancer, leukemia, Hodgkin disease, and schizophrenia. This is amazing considering only a minuscule 1% of all species in rain forests have ever been studied! We know what could be lost there? A cure for cancer? A cure for AIDS?

Rain forests are also important in the production of oxygen and the absorption of CO₂. The Amazon region alone produces about 40% of the earth's oxygen. CO₂ emissions are bad for the environment as they contribute to global warming. As trees grow they absorb CO₂. Unfortunately, many of these trees are burned away or harvested releasing large amounts of CO₂ back into the atmosphere.

WHAT YOU CAN DO TO HELP

1. Don't buy tropical hardwood furniture, lumber or plywood. A list of substitutes can be obtained from the Rain Forest Action Network.

2. Support organizations that work to conserve rain forests.

3. Exchange fast food restaurants and dog food companies not to purchase beef from Central America.

4. Don't use a financial institution that funds deforestation. Hundreds of large national banks such as Bank of America and Citicorp are the source of loans for destructive projects such as mining, dams and roads which cause large sums of money are needed. Take your money to a small, local bank, where your dollars won't help these projects.

5. Snack on Brazil nuts and cashews instead of junk food. If you can find it, choose Rain Forest Crunch as your candybar. Created by Ben Cohen of Ben and Jerry's Homemade Ice Cream, it's a brittle containing Brazil nuts and cashews. The candy helps give the residents of rain forest areas an economic reason to save the forests. Cohen's company purchases 50,000 pounds of nuts each year and 40% of the profits are donated to rain forest conservation organizations.

6. Write to the Rain Forest Action Network, 301 Broadway, Suite A, San Francisco, CA 94133, or the Rain Forest Alliance, 270 Lafayette Street, Suite 512, New York, NY 10012 to find out more about rain forests and what you can do to help.

Editorial Bits and Pieces

We think Idaho should be rocketed to the moon for its outrageous anti-abortion stand.

We can't wait until the first year of Bush's presidency is over. Once the opinion polls come in, maybe he'll do something.

We're glad to see that the administration is taking some action on the out-of-district recruiting by the football team. It's an issue that could have, too easily, been swept under the proverbial rug.

So who cares about broccoli? If Bush can ban broccoli from Air Force 1, can we ban guacamole and coconut from Harper's cafeteria? (How about homework from classes?)

There needs to be a visitor parking area for non Harper students who come to utilize the library.

There needs to be more visitor parking in general.

Do we really need so much administrative parking?

We wish we would have been selected to go on a "fact finding mission" to explore other schools' Liberal Arts Buildings. (We've heard that five administrators have gone to different states to get ideas for our new Liberal Arts Building, the building that is fourth in priority for the reconstruction plans. It will be four to five years before they are supposed to begin building. We need a vacation, too.)

The cafeteria recently sent out handy little reference guide pointing out that styrofoam is better for the environment than either glass or paper products. Granted, glass takes a lot of energy to clean and granted the paper will have to be treated to be used for food service, but styrofoam, whether it's produced with chlorofluorocarbons, halons or hydrochlorofluorocarbons, is still toxic. All of the chemicals that can currently be used to produce styrofoam contribute to the greenhouse effect, destruction of the ozone layer and air pollution. Also, they do not break down in landfills (the styrofoam cup you threw away today will still be around in 600 years). Even though styrofoam is recyclable, there's not a plant to do so for hundreds of miles, and one is not anticipated for at least a few years. We wish the cafeteria would do at least some good for the environment and save the trees their propaganda is printed on.

Have you ever wondered why "College Republicans" are on most every campus but you never hear of "College Democrats"? This is really scary. Are republicans so intimidated by life they feel the need to move in packs?

We're glad to see Harper doing something about Earth Day this year. There are too many students who roll their eyes when they hear that. It's not that far to the nearest recycling can. Your arm won't break.

Marsalis hooks Harper on Jazz

the first number as Watts was replacing the wing nut on his high hat. After a few moments of musical adjustment they synched up and plunged in.

The first half of the first show seemed to have a lot to do with the releasing of the day's frustrations. Marsalis' tunes were accented with growls and snarls. Kirkland punctuated his playing with little chopping chord patterns. Hunt's first solo was a slow succession of diminished chords, which he played with some-too-subtle diddams. Watt's first solo sounded like a pum-pum-brat kicking through a pile of buckets and tin cans. All this nastiness seemed to make the audience somewhat tentative at first. The players finally settled in, however, and played a super first show which was sold out.

The audience for the second show, though slightly smaller, was much more enthusiastic when the musicians hit the stage. Branford and his mates responded in kind. As in the first show they played mainly original compositions, mostly written by Kirkland. It was in these pieces the players' artistry pulsed most strongly. Revelation was particularly memorable with its tempo and meter changes that snuck up on the listener so that he found himself going in a different direction without having felt the point of change.

Watts would acrobatically reach back and grab the last down beat when it seemed that he had passed it and was going for the next. Hunt hooked in the key manipulations to the ever-changing rhythms. Kirkland and Marsalis traded monologues and dialogue while the audience listened as if it were crucial information. I guess you had to be there. Too bad if you weren't.

During the ballads that were played the etiquette of clapping after each solo was forgone during especially sweet passages and transitions. The musicians had gained control early on and never let go. The end of the show was met with fervent applause and shouts for more. Marsalis returned, however, only with Hunt to do a fun little rendition of Makin' Whoopee.

Yet this seemed an appropriate close for they appeared as two originals taking time after normal on-hours duties to explore music's possibilities.

Electric Phase

By Eric Jacon
Staff Writer

Robert Plant, who is celebrating his twenty-second year as a rock performer, continues to satisfy fans. The young band that Plant gathered together for 1988's New and Zen have outdone themselves with the follow-up Manic Nirvana. What is good about Nirvana is its loose, relaxed atmosphere, which results in some of Plant's best singing and writing since Zeppelin's In Through the Out Door.

The first side opens with Hurting Kind (I've got my eye on you) which rocks hard and is very catchy. Big Love continues the pace of Hurting Kind with the drums of Chris Blackwell leading the way in this song about aerial bus. SS&O is an interesting mix of guitar rock with Prince style funk and the results work very good.

Guitarist Doug Boyle's frantic riffs and Plant's great vocal range interact well, making it the best of the first side. I Cried slows things down a bit. The mix of acoustic guitar and moody vocals give a dreamy feeling to this song, which deals with obsession. The side closes with Nirvana and She Said, allowing Plant and his band to let out all the sleep-musically.

The second side opens with Tar Duet on the Highway, which has some Zeppelin touches to it. The guitar and Plant's Kammie-like vocals highlight this tribute to Woodstock. The keyboard drone of Anniversary is nice, and is somewhat weak except for Boyle's guitar and Blackwell's martial beat.

The boredom of Anniversary is quickly relieved by the acoustic number Liar's Dance, an excellent tribute to Zeppelin, with Boyle and Plant playing, unaccompanied by any electric. The album closes with Watching You, with the multiple overdrives of guitar and drums adding to the powerful atmosphere of a very excellent closing song.

Manic Nirvana represents a homecoming to the sound that Robert Plant said he would never return to after the demise of Zeppelin. Though it echoes Led Zeppelin slightly, there are enough new ideas to give Plant's band a sense of identity and direction to his music. Manic Nirvana is a lot more open and aggressive than the preceding New and Zen and is much better because of this. It should satisfy fans who have been waiting for a true rock album from Robert Plant.

Paulos on innumeracy

By Lisa Aust
Managing Editor

John Allen Paulos, the author of Innumeracy, came to Harper to speak on math illiteracy and its harmful consequences to our society last Monday.

Innumeracy is the mathematical equivalent of illiteracy. Paulos maintains that far more people are innumerate than illiterate. Innumeracy is more than just not being able to compute numbers, but also not being able to grasp their broad applications and trends.

He noted that a person who spent his entire life diagramming sentences probably wouldn't be able to win Pulitzer Prize winning work. At the same time it is not fair to expect school children to become physicians when their education consists of doing calculation busy work rather than looking at mathematics in an applied sense.

Paulos told a humorous story to illustrate innumeracy: "A misguided local weatherman reported there was a 50% chance of rain on Saturday and a 50% chance of rain on Sunday, and so, he concluded, 'It looks like a 100% chance of rain this weekend.'"

He also walked the audience through a number of scams based on the expectations of the victim's lack of common sense.

Con men are not the only ones who prey on the public's innumeracy. Many ad campaigns state outrageous or confusing statistics such as, Paulos said, "The new toothpaste which reduces cavities by 200% is presumably capable of removing all of one's cavities twice over.

John Allen Paulos speaks on innumeracy, the mathematical equivalent of literacy.

These ads also tend to quote statistics out of context and frequently don't give the necessary background information to interpret the statistic.

Most people however are unaware of these subtleties. Paulos says it is our misunderstanding of mathematics which leads to our downfall.

'Diviners' to open at Harper

Harper College will present The Diviners, a drama set in a rural Indiana town, on April 27 and 28 and May 4 and 5 at 8 pm and on April 29 at 2:30 pm. The play will be staged in the Building 2 Theatre.

The play focuses on the relationship between a disturbed young boy and a disillusioned preacher who befriends him and attempts to free him of his fears.

"I was intrigued by the emotional power of this play," said Director Todd Ballanwyne, a speech and theatre instructor at Harper.

"This play's characters are well-rounded, multi-dimensional characters who leave room for study and exploration for the students who are acting the roles," he added. "This play says a lot about human life and how we struggle to meet challenges and get caught up in fear."

General admission is $5, and admission for Harper students and staff is $3.

A special dinner/theatre package is available on Saturday, April 28. Dinner will be served from 6-7:15 pm in the College Dining Room followed by the play at 8 pm.

Tickets for the dinner/theatre package must be purchased in advance. The cost is $17.95 for the public and $15.95 for Harper students and staff.

For tickets or more information, contact the Harper Box Office at ext. 2547.

He has also appeared on the MTV Comedy Hour and has worked with comedians Yakov Smirnoff and Sam Kinison.

His appearance at Harper is free of charge and open to the public. It will be held in the Building A Lounge. For more information, call the Harper Box Office at ext. 2547.

Winning streak over at N4C opener

Men's baseball team works to improve pitching techniques

By Lou Nuzzi
Guest Writer

Rookie Head Coach Matt Royer may have the ball club he was looking for. "We are looking to be a scrappy team," said Royer. "We are not going to hit 3-run homers. We are going to be hustling, stealing and using the hit and run. That's just keeps coming at you. We have a lot of impressive first-year guys."

In addition to his first-year men, Royer returns five members from last year's squad. Dan Koss coached the 88-89 team to a 19-20 season, finishing fourth in N4C play with a 6-8 mark. Koss resigned last summer to take a teaching post at Schaumburg Township School District 54.

The Hawks will have a very young but solid infield. Second baseman Kevin Gucwa, an All-Area selection at Fremd, starred on the State Champion Palatine Blue Jays American Legion Club. Gucwa is expected to be Royer's leadoff man. Two more Legion stars, Sean McHenry (a member of a 10-2 team at Camel that was rated the number one team in the Chicago/Idaho Area) and Ron LaValle (an All-Area selection from Conant) will split time at shortstop.

Ryan Broadwell, an All-Area, All-State recipient from Hoffman Estates, will provide a strong bat at third. Broadwell will be replacing time at third with sophomore Marty Cruzan, who brings good glove work to the hot corner. Darrin Hoeger and Jeff Rodin have impressed Royer with their fundamentals and both will see time at a number of infield positions. Mike Pierce, a transfer from last year's Region IV Runner-Up DuPage, should see action at first. The coach has plenty of help behind the plate with Dan Reed, Tom Legg, and Tony Pignataro, one of three returnees who earned N4C Honorable Mention recognition.

"We don't have a lot of outfielders," Royer said. That problem was further complicated by Tim Longmore losing his sophomore hardship status, thereby declaring him a junior. Royer's lineup: Tim Longmore, the son of Longmore, an N4C All-Conference and Second Team All-Region IV selection. Royer is left with five players to join fellow sophomores and N4C Honorable Mention recipient Angelo Torello in the outfield. La Valle and Paul Scaglione will split time in left. Pierce should also see action in right.

"Our biggest concern is pitching," Royer said. "But I'm seeing improvement." Dave Miller, Harper's third return, is N4C Honorable Mention Selection, was 4-4 for the 1989 Hawks and is the lone returning pitcher.

Jeff Holt, also from the Blue Jays Legion team, is another possible starter he can overcome arm problems. Justin Yakimsky, Mike Fisher, Brian Levitsch, Reed and Legg will also see action.

"We could do well," Royer said. "We want to finish strong."

Coach Royer comes to Harper from University of Arizona. He was an assistant coach under Jerry Kindall, outstanding Minnesota Twins player and American

The Hawks began the season by going 1-3 on two-day trips through Southern Illinois. The team got swept by Rend Lake on the first day and split a pair with Lewis and Clark on the next day, taking the second game. The team then traveled to Chicago's Northeast Side where they swept Truman 8-5 and 11-2. They also invoked Makolm N last Wednesday in their home opener by counts of 10-3 and 14-0, to give Harper a five-game win streak.

That streak ended Saturday when Illinois Valley came to town and took a pair of close games, 4-2 and 2-1, in their N4C conference opener, leaving them 5-5 on the season 11-5 in N4C play.

After scheduled games at Joliet on Tuesday (April 1st) and a home contest with Lake County yesterday, Harper will play host to McHenry this afternoon at 1:40 pm. They also will be at Rock Valley Saturday at 1:00.

report to Henry by December 15, 1989.

Contrary to players' allegations in the Harbinger, no evidence of sexual use or racist attitudes was found.

At the time this story was written, Eliasik had not yet received a copy of the investigation results, so he was not prepared to comment.

He did, however, deny allegations made in a previous Harbinger editorial that members of Harper's football team received airline or train tickets to travel to and from Harper.

In commenting on the review of the program, Henry stated, "Although we are very proud of our athletic programs, we place primary emphasis on providing the most positive academic experience possible for all students who have chosen review should result in a clarification of any misunderstandings about the athletic mission and philosophy of the college, and produce an even better athletic and academic program for our students."

Students do not have the preparation or funds to live independently and keep in good academic standing.

It was also found that many football players are attracted to Harper because of the program's good reputation and coaches. They also come to Harper when their own districts don't offer football and to attract scholarship offers from four-year schools.

As a result of the investigation, the two loans made to athletes have been reported to the NCAA and the N4C. Also, Harper's coaches will be informed that any financial aid, including loans, must not be given to student athletes by coaches.

Eliasik must also either quit his position as manager of his sister's apartments or say nothing to his sister's athletes while he is coach of the football team. The report states that "Although not illegal, the arrangement presents the appearance of impropriety."

Another result of the investigation is that all Harper coaches must recruit only from within Harper's district, and, although outside recruitment doesn't appear to have happened in other sports, all athletes will be reviewed to assure that they are operating within recruitment guidelines.

Athletic Director Roger Bechhold and at least three other people to be chosen later will review recruiting guidelines and report to Henry by April 30, 1990.

These guidelines are to include a way to monitor coaches regarding recruiting conduct and a plan of activities for coaches to encourage academic success for underprepared students.

The report anticipates that, while the majority of players are expected to be from inside the district, there will still be students from out-of-district who are not recruited and come to Harper's program because of its quality.

These out-of-district students must be prepared to meet their all of their financial responsibilities incurred as a result of coming to Harper.

A subcommittee will also be appointed to review the practices of other N4C athletic programs. They are also to recommend implementation procedures and district and out-of-district student participation on Harper teams.

Track team starts season strong

By John Brinckerhoff
Staff Writer

The Harper Invite Saturday was "highly successful," said coach Rene Zellner. Harper did well, with two first place finishes against eight teams: Wheaton, Tristram, Concordia, U.W.-Northwestern, U.W.-Parkside, Northern Illinois Track Club, Black Hawk and Wright College. This marked the first track meet for the Hawks this season. Even though it was not scored "officially," the Hawks fought hard in every event.

Coach Zellner added, "We feel really good about the meet today. The excitement was in the air and we never gave up. We were fortunate to have sound weather." Coach Zellner is aided by assistant coaches John Italy and John Belleson.

Michele Maxwell was "dynamic in the 100 meter hurdles," as Zellner put it. Maxwell raced to victory in 15.8 seconds. "We will be looking for her help in the heptathlon (7 events) this year as well," Zellner said. Maxwell also contributed in the shot put with a 7.11 meter launch which gained 5th place.

Leann Campo wrapped up the win in discus with a 99' throw. She also heaved the shot put 9.1 meters, for 4th place. Rosalinda Sampedro came in 6th in the discus with a 67' 1 1/2' throw.

Pam Weider won the 1500 meter in 5:05.7 seconds quicker than her best time last year. Her time was not far off the qualifying time of 4:51. Zellner said of Weider, "She's looking very strong. One of her goals is to qualify for the national meet."

Ann Wilkie finished 6th in the 1500 meter with a 5:29 time. Zellner pointed out, "It was her first meet and she showed improvement. Now she has some insight on the competition and can train accordingly."

"For the men, Jerome Taylor had a fine performance," said coach Zellner. He placed 5th in the 200 meter dash with 23.01 seconds.

Cedric Garton ran for a personal record in the 200 meter dash, 25.33 seconds. Garton also competed in the 100 meter dash and ran up a 12.37 time.

Mike Cadell finished 3rd in the triple jump with a 37' 8 1/4" mark. Cadell also gained 4th place in the long jump with 18' 1". Mike Hynck corralled 4th place with 64.92 seconds in the 400 meter hurdles.

Wayne DeLomker placed 4th in pole vault. In men's discus, Scott Meizer finished 6th with a 25.13 meter throw. Beorn Harboid shipped the hammer 26.74 meter for 4th and Meizer finished in fifth with 25.63 meter. Chris Steadman threw the hammer 23.81 meter for 6th place.

In the shot put, Meizer pushed it 10.91 meter for 4th place and Harboid 9.75 meter for 6th. Meizer and Steadman finished 7th and 8th respectively in the javelin. Meizer let it fly for 33.06 meter and Steadman's landed 33.59 meter away.

Tom Irons ran the 1500 meter in 4:22 for 6th place. In the men's 1600 meter relay, Jamie Burhite, Mike Theodorakis, Jon Gayn, and Irons ended in 6th place with 1:42. "We were looking strong despite missing several key athletes," Zellner said later. "All the teams that were here want to come back next year, so this meet has been well received. Also, I would like to thank everyone who volunteered to help at this meet today."

The next meet the Hawks will compete at is the well-known Chicago Metro Meet in Aurora, which will be "officially" scored. There will be 14 teams there from Divisions I, II and III. Action begins with the heptathlon on Thursday and the decathlon on Friday. The regular meet will be on Saturday at 11:00 am.

Women's softball places third

Despite inexperience, team has high hopes for strong season

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

Head Coach Martha Lynn Bolt inherited in 1989 a softball team that had only three returning players. Despite this, she guided the inexperienced team to a 13-15 mark overall, 8-6 in NAC play, good enough for a third place tie.

In 1990, that young team has a year behind them, with a very promising group of freshmen and a 2-1 start during spring break, this could be the year for the Hawks to soar.

"I'm very comfortable with our hitting," Bolt said. "We should be strong throughout the line-up. I think we have better balance this year. The sophomores are bringing up the freshmen and the freshmen are pushing the sophomores."

The returning players include shortstop Lisa Devereaux and center fielder Karen Larson; both NAC Honorable Mention recipients last year. Devereaux hit a strong .283 last season. Versatile sophomore Georgine Grisco finished third on the team in hitting, with a .268 average and will play a number of positions including catcher. Chris LaSpina returns at second base and Sue Trachsel is slotted (or left field).

Leading the freshman is one of the area's top high school pitchers, Nicky Boldog from Schaumburg. She is a three-sport athlete who participated in women's basketball and volleyball at Harper. Huntley, Illinois native Kris Van Acker will back up Boldog on the mound. Jeanne Harwig and Patty Vicari, two All-Area selections from Lake Park High School in Roselle, are expected to be big contributors. They also competed on Harper's women's basketball team. Rounding out the team are Keri Bond, an Honorable Mention All-Area selection from Buffalo Grove, Melissa Amend, Robin Wright and Laura Jarow.

DuPage and Rock Valley as the teams to beat in the conference. "We have a definite chance to sneak up on some people," she said.

The Hawks competed against defending Region IV Champion Moraine Valley at Palos Hills on Tuesday, April 3rd. They won the first game 5-2, but lost the second 2-4. Their next game will be another away match against NAC conference rival Joliet on Saturday, April 7th at noon.

Student Trustee elections result in tie

By Lisa Aps
Managing Editor

The Student Trustee elections will be held again. The last election resulted in a tie, 26-26, between Mike Trippiedi and Kathleen Munson. A tie breaker will be held on April 16 and 17.

Both Munson's and Trippiedi's entire unbridged

Only 62 ballots were cast; two were invalid. This year marks the second lowest turnout in Harper's history. This is also the first time Harper has ever had a tie for the Trustee position.

The Trustee term normally runs from April 15 to April 14 of the following year. However, because of the tie-breaking election, this year's term will start April 26 or 27 according to Lisa Nance, Student Senator Secretary.

Nance said, "It is so my understanding that because there will be no Trustee or Senate meeting when they count the ballots on the 19, the Trustee will probably inaugurate at the Student Senate Meeting on the 27 or the Board of Trustee's meeting on the 26."

Trippiedi expressed concern over the low voter turnout. He suggested that more be done to hype the election so students can become more interested and be more informed.

There have been allegations that some students never received their Student Activities card.

Students are required to have an Activities card in order to vote.

The voting boxes will be in the same places as before: Building A at the information desk, Building D at the Computer Lab, Building F at the Media Center and Building J at the Box Office.

Mike Trippiedi

"I'd like to be a member of the Harper College Board of Trustees. I have served as a senator for one and a half years and I would like to undergird how the Board of Trustees works and makes decisions and at the same time assist the students to carry out their voice across on special issues, like smoking for example. I represent the Disabled Students of Harper. I represented the Special Programs & Services last year and headed the Student Senate Subcommittee on the Student Trustee election last spring. I currently serve as chair of the Disabled Access Subcommittee (now part of Joint Student Senate-Environmental, Health, and Safety Committee Sub-Committee with Tom Thompson as chairman)."

Kathleen Munson

"I wish to become the 1990-91 Student Trustee to work for the needs of the Harper student body. I want to work for a stronger instructional curriculum. I also wish to develop the recycling program more. On the smoking issue, I would like to see a few areas on campus remain as smoking lounges. In the past, I have served as Student Senate President. In addition, I am a member of Program Board and the Political Science Club. I am also the 1990-91 Lieutenant Governor of Illinois Government, in high school. I was the 1987-88 Illinois Association of Student Councils Consultation Committee Chairperson. I also served as a Student Council Parliamentarian."

Earth day is coming soon

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-Chief

Students and national organizers are gearing up for "the environmental event of the decade"—the 30th anniversary of Earth Day.

It is expected that about 2,000 college campuses nationwide will participate in the April 22 event.

"The environment is a hot issue," said Owen Byrd, national student coordinator of the group Earth Day 1990. "Students have a pretty sophisticated understanding that the environment touches on all other issues."

Earth Day was founded in 1970 by Gaylord Nelson, who was then a US senator from Wisconsin and now works with the Wilderness Society in Washington, D.C. "For ten years I was trying to figure out some sort of device to get the environment in the political arena. Politicians weren't paying attention to the issue and I thought that it was important," commented Nelson. "I was reading an article about an anti-Vietnam teach-in and the idea popped into my head to hold an environment teach-in."

The teach-in proved successful, and for the following decade environmentalists won several small battles, including the Clean Water Act, the Endangered Species Act, and the formation of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Environmental activism has been especially prevalent on college campuses.

Students from universities in New York, Colorado, and North Carolina, for instance have campaigned to remove tuna from food services because dolphins often get tangled in tuna nets and die. Other students have forced their schools to stop using polystyrene because of its damaging effects on the ozone layer.

In Lincoln, Nebraska, students climbed trees to keep them from being cut down during the first week of March. At least 18 were arrested in the three-day protest.

For Earth Day, campus activists say they're taking it further. Attention-grabbing activities have been planned on several campuses.

In Chicago, Earth Day will be kicked off with a protest march. The march will begin at the incinerator on the corner of Fullerton, Clybourn and Ashland and will proceed to the Lincoln Park mausoleum. The march will be protesting several environmental issues.

Nine designated areas have been set up in Chicago for Earth Day activities. The Lincoln Park Zoo will host films at the Crown Film Center and activities for children at the Farm in the Zoo. The conservatory will sponsor a rain forest tour. Speakers will be in Lincoln Park throughout the day, and a concert will highlight the Biodiesel, Michele Shocked, John Wesley Harding, and many others.

At Harper, Earth Day will be celebrated on Monday, April 23. Displays on environmental issues will be in Building A Lounge from 9 am to 1 pm. At noon, Harper will be celebrating Earth Day's birthday with a party in the Building A Lounge, and at 12:30 pm there will be a campus-wide clean-up.

A tree ceremony will be held at 2 pm. Money collected from aluminum can recycling will be used to begin a student tree grove with three trees. The trees' species will be marked with a plaque, and organizers hope that in the future a new tree will be added every year.

For more information on Earth Day activities, contact Darlene Iverson, Paul Dykstra or Karen Westrich in the Student Senate Office. Also, look in next week's Harbinger for the special Earth Day pullout section.

Hot, Sexy and Safer

By Alisa Chinlund
Assistant Managing Editor

Suzi Landolph's unique brand of comedy mixes straight facts about sex, blunt language, and audience participation to teach college students the importance of safe sex.

Her "Hot, Sexy and Safer" routine is direct. She goes into explicit details about sexual acts and makes references to sexual organs. She does not resort to vulgarities or four-letter words. She delivers her message via straight talk and humor.

"The humor makes it easy for me to say what I need to say," said Landolph. "It seems easier for the audience to receive it. Humor is a natural way to put people at ease."

Her appearance at Harper College last Monday had students listening. "Suzi was energetic, effervescent, funny and spoke to the students in language they could relate to," said Student Activities Coordinator Michael Neiman. "Students would have been bored by a straight lecture. They were fascinated by Suzi. They moved their chairs and craned to look every time she moved."

Landolph called sex parts by understandable terms. "Genitalia," she said. "Doesn't that sound like an Italian liqueur? I'll have a Genitalia on the rocks."

She referred to the male and female sex organs in euphemisms that would not embarrass anyone. "Veevies" and "nuttie."

Six years ago Landolph, a former video film producer, volunteered her time as a "buddy" for AIDS patients, a fundraiser, a video producer, and an AIDS educator.

She began speaking to high school students about AIDS. Her audience grew. People wanted to hear Landolph speak. "This seemed more important than directing a Toyota commercial," said Landolph.

Today she tours the country to educate high school and college students about sexual myths and the best ways to avoid contracting sexually transmitted diseases.

"Parents need to discuss safe sexual practices with their children," said Landolph. "AIDS is no laughing matter."

Condoms play a key element in the fight against sexually transmitted diseases. "The AIDS virus is transmitted through blood, semen and vaginal fluid. Wearing a condom can prevent transmission of the disease."

"I'm using sex to bring people up and make them feel sexually proud and confident," said Landolph. "I want it to be a very good part of their lives, not an eyesore."

"Sex does not mean intercourse," said Landolph. "It means a lot of different activities, one of which is intercourse. I promote safe sexual activity."

"I would like everyone to hold off on sexual activity until they are totally honest, keep the lights on, care about the person's feelings, and are not ashamed of their bodies," said Landolph. "That's when we should have intercourse. We do everything in the dark without talking. That's not having sex. That's doing something you're ashamed of."

To illustrate the importance of communication in a relationship, Landolph asked a young man from the audience to close his eyes and drop to the ground. Landolph guided the young man's hands and feet in a swimmer's pose. Yet, he seemed confused. Landolph's intentions became apparent when she communicated her desires.

"I was unable to get him to do what I wanted without communicating," said Landolph. "You can't have a good sexual relationship if you don't communicate. Any relationship can be fulfilling with communication, honesty, and trust."

Mark's Menagerie

By Mark James
Staff Writer

Hmm. Time to write again. It would be a lot easier if I didn't have Spring Fever. Not spring fever that makes people want to ditch school and/or work, but spring fever that involves L-U-S-I Love.

You see it all around. School's almost over and people either figure that they are in good enough shape with their classes to get by or they are so far behind it just doesn't matter any more and bring! Strange things happen. Guy meets gal, they like what they see, they get together for a while, then decide they don't like what they see, and for a brief time the meaning of their lives have changed (in some cases the "brief time" is only a few moments).

This spring fever thing wouldn't be so bad if there weren't so many good looking girls to have spring fever over. Decisions, decisions. Of course, most guys will take care of that by making no decision and just looking. That ain't bad for a hobby, but can make the love life very boring.

Then there are those who want to choose, but don't want to be the first one in the relationship to choose, so you hear things like "I just want to be friends" or "I don't know if I'm ready to be in a relationship." Yes, and if you're really good the Sana Bummy will deliver you chocolate hearts for Halloween.

Finally, you have them like me who are just too shy to do anything.

Now I know how Charlie Brown felt when he fell in love with his red-headed gal. (That's a sad commentary, when love makes you feel like Charlie Brown.) Oh well.

Anyway, on to some important things, like my editors. You see, until I arrived on the paper, there was no one who worked on the editorial page that was a Republican. They could get away with all the Democratic comments without any type of reprisal. Not anymore (heh-heh-heh—it's really hard to have decent sound effects in a newspaper).

It seems that my esteemed editors wonder why there isn't no College Democrats. I figure the reason is that the Democrats can't figure out who would work on it. They would all love to run it, but they couldn't lower themselves to actually work on something. They'd rather throw money at it.

"Nuff said (for now, I know I'm gonna get responses back from that, but oh well). On to other things, like a brand new, God-framing, Communist hating survey. Yes, the Wachamachall's are moving on in their quest for the ultimate smoking survey.

So far, the results are very interesting. Most of the results that I have seen have been from non-smokers, and yet there is a majority that still want to allow smoking areas. Hmm. Seems there is some discrepancy in the smoking surveys that have been taken. (Maybe our this survey isn't such a secret like the last one. Nah!)

Nuff said.

Why Trustee apathy?

This week, I received something pretty rare at the Harbinger office: a letter to the editor that not only complained about a problem, but offered a solution. That itself is enough to warrant special consideration, but I also agree with most of what it has to say.

Dear Editors,

Before you publish the inevitable commentary on how we have not been responsible college citizens because so few of us voted for Student Trustee, please consider the following: only two days were allotted to voting (but many students are only at Harper one night or one Saturday a week), only a few ballot boxes were available (and not in every building); and very little publicity was given to the election (those two paragraphs on the front page were hardly adequate coverage, especially when compared to the amount of space the newspaper regularly devotes to reviews of rock concerts, record releases, sports, cartoons, personals, etc.).

My suggestions are: supply a set of questions to future candidates and let them all answer the same questions; then print their own words, not just a watered-down summary. Give a lot of publicity and early publicity; post flyers all over all of the buildings and on doors, walls, and on every bulletin board to inform students of the election; this shouldn't have to be the responsibility of the candidates. Allow at least one full week for voting so that all students have an opportunity to vote while they are at school. Place ballot boxes in every building and in more than one place in each building.

Judy Wilkes

I'm sorry to disappoint you, but no apathy commentary here. In fact, I didn't vote myself due to the fact that there wasn't adequate information on the candidates to make a knowledgeable decision. Unlike last year, there was no formal debate or forum to get the candidates together at one time so students (and the newspaper) could compare positions on important issues.

Another major problem with the election this year was the apparent rush to get it over with. This year's deadline for applying for a spot on the Student Trustee ballot was March 20. If you go back and check your calendar, you'll find that it fell over spring break. For obvious reasons, this is a ridiculous time to set a deadline.

The Student Trustee election date was April 2 and 3. Considering that students were not on campus during break, this gave the candidates only one week for publicity.

This also gave the Harbinger only two days to gather information for a story (the paper is put together on the Tuesday before it is distributed.) This is not nearly adequate time to cover something this important. Getting statements from candidates involves tracking them down first. We're dealing with students on a commuter campus. It isn't as easy as it sounds. (Incidentally, the paragraphs that appeared in the March 29 issue were the candidates' exact words as they appeared on their statement sheets.)

The rush to get the election over with resulted in an almost complete lack of information about the candidates. Without the necessary information, voting students would simply be choosing a candidate because they like the way their name sounds or because they looked like a nice person when their picture was in the paper.

For those of you who missed the front page, the first Student Trustee election resulted in a tie.

With only 62 votes cast, this was the second-lowest turnout in Harper's history. As anyone who's been around Harper for a few years knows, there always has been and always will be an "apathy problem" on campus. The difference between this and previous years is the lack of preparation.

The tie-breaking election will be held on April 16 and 17, same building, same ball-channel. (Unfortunately, it's still only two days in only a few buildings.)

Perhaps it's too late to save this year's election, but we prompt the members of next year's election committee to consider allowing enough time for campaigning, debates, and lots of press coverage. This will give next year's students something this year's didn't have: the information necessary to make a sound, knowledgeable decision.

The Committee has estimated the total cost of this project at $10.5 billion a year, with $1 billion coming from the U.S. This may sound like a lot of money, but five times that amount goes to military aid for foreign countries every year. Population control is a crucial step in solving our environmental problems.

Cry Baby is creative

By Mike Schweisheimer
Harbinger Movie Critic

Writers/director John Waters is back with his new film "Cry Baby". The film stars Johnny Depp as Cry Baby and Amy Locane as Allison, the "square" girl Depp has his heart set on.

The story takes place in a very colorful and dreamy version of the year 1954, which only Waters could have created. The stereotype drapes (greaser) and squares are constantly at each other's throats. The juvenile drapes being the result of horrible upbringings, destined for evil from the start and the squares who were young Ronald Reagan types, are constantly reminded of "the four B's" — beauty, brains, breeding, and bony.

The plot is simple; there are the rebellious drapes and the normal squares. The king drape and the queen square fall in love and the result is a musical "Romeo and Juliet" with many creative twists. Surviving gang baddies and jail terms the two are probably united in their teenage love. Not very touching and easy to anticipate, the film does have a satisfying and uplifting ending.

The mix of big name talent in this film is not only incredible, but downright unusual. Johnny Depp is sexy, yet shallow as the title character. Amy Locane is very good at playing the good girl who is not sure if she really wants to be bad. Tracy Lords is the sleazy rebellious daughter from a family right out of the pages of Better Homes and Gardens. The somewhat deranged appearing grandfather is portrayed by Iggy Pop.

To top off the strange mix of names, Willem Dafoe has a cameo appearance as a masochistic prison guard. Mention must also be made of Kim McGuire, whose appropriately named character, Hatchet Face, brings to mind the question, "Is she really that ugly in real life?"

The film looks like the Fonz in Wanderland. Yet the story is very entertaining and, as with "Hairspray", Waters created a funny and definitively stylish camp film.

The picture is quite worth seeing, especially for those who always dreamed of being a greaser in the 50's but were born too late. It is even worth shelling out the six or seven bucks to see it in the theaters, because of its creative look and original photography. Waters style is clearly unique and unmatchable.

Overall, the film is fun and fast paced, but it could have been called "Hairspray Part II." The general look and feel of the film is identical to "Hairspray." It is a very effective and entertaining style, but a man with Waters' talents could do a lot more. He has the potential to be the Pedro Almodovar of America.

Turtles; not just for breakfast

By Lisa Ann
Managing Editor

Are Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles more than just a kiddie cartoon?

Maybe. These abnormal green dudes have hit the screen in a major way. They started out as an underground comic and have now gained nation wide, if not world wide, attention. There are mutant dolls, mutant cups, mutant decals, mutant stationary, the mutant cartoon and now we have the mutant movie.

The movie as well as the cartoon are both aimed at youth. However, the movie was very violent and some of the dialogue was more suited for an older audience.

While there has been publicity about the violence, it was an intricate part of the plot and flowed with the story. It does say Teenage Mutant NINJA Turtles after all. To take out the violence would be like taking out the fight scenes from any Bruce Lee film.

The puppetry, by Jim Henson, was outstanding. There is a huge believable rat named Splinter as well as the turtles.

Splinter learns the art of ninjitsu by amusing his owner from a cage. After a horrible tragedy (see the movie for details) the rat finds these homeless baby turtles and raises them as his own.

It has the regular sub-plot additive like boy meets girl, ect. It also has the obligatory strong language, and shots of female flesh. There isn't major skin but enough to guess a man directed this movie.

I highly recommend this film about the funny green dudes, but see it with an obnoxious group of very loud people. The film has the makings of a future cult classic.

Women's Softball beats Joliet 19 - 14!

14 inning game leaves team with a 4 - 3 season and 2 - 2 in N4C play

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

Good pitching will carry a team a long way, but a lack of it won't even be able to carry an equipment bag.

Case in point, in their marathon, 14-inning 19-14 win at Joliet Saturday, freshman Nicky Bolding came in to pitch the last 11 innings, after Kris Van Alker got knocked out in the third inning. On top of that, Bolding had already went the distance in game one, a 4-0 loss.

Practically speaking, it's a point that has Head Coach Martha Lyn Bolt concerned about her squad that stands at 4-3 on the season and 2-2 in N4C play.

"Right now Kris seems to be a little inexperienced so we're gonna try and work with (first baseman) Patty Vicar and see if she can give us something, even if it's only for a couple of innings," Bolt said. "With the rate that Nicky has been pitching lately, she's bound to burn-out so it's definitely an area of weakness that we need to work on."

Overall, she looks for her team to be more "mentally balanced."

"We're working the kinks out," the coach said. "The little things are starting to come along as we continue to play. I feel that our defense is strong enough to the point that we are able to hold our own against any team that we face. The thing that we're now looking for is the mental balance that will allow us to avoid those mental mistakes and make us a consistent team."

Earlier in the week, the Hawks earned a split with defending Region IV Champion Moraine Valley last Tuesday taking game one 5-2 and losing the second 4-2.

In game one against the Marauders, Harper broke out of the gate early with a pair of runs in the first frame. Sue Trachsel reached base on an error and scored on a single from Laura Jarow. Jarow then scored on Karen Larson's subsequent single. The lead went to 4-0 in the fourth before the hosts put a dent in the scoreboard. Meanwhile on the mound, Bolding kept Moraine at bay with a 4-0 hitler.

In game two, the Hawks took a brief 1-0 lead in the third on Lisa Devereaux's RBI single. But the Marauders took the lead for good thanks in part to a four-run barrage in their half of the inning. Harper cut the lead in half when Chris LaSpina singled and later scored in the fifth.

After a scheduled 10-in-ball with South Suburban was rained out Tuesday at home, the Hawks will host their next double-header against Rock Valley Thursday at 3:00 p.m. The team also travels to McHenry for a double feature Saturday at 12:00 p.m.

Track team starts season in high spirits

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

Progress is something Track & Field coach Renee Zellner looks to gradually increase throughout the season of both her Men's and Women's teams' campaigns for a Region IV crown.

If both of the teams' ninth-place finishes in a very competitive field at the Chicago Metro Open, held last Saturday at North Central College in Naperville, are any indication, Zellner and Co. are right on course.

"We want to be at a level where we do even better than the last meet," the coach said, "especially right now during the early months where we're dealing with the cold weather."

Four people, two from each squad, highlighted the day for Harper in a field that included DePaul, Loyola, Chicago

St., and UIC. National Qualifiers Michele Maxwell and Pam Wender led the way for the ladies. Maxwell took first in the Heptathlon and finished second in the 100 meter hurdles (16.88 seconds) while Wender raced to a pair of fifth place finishes in 1500 (5:00 minutes) and 3000 meters (10:53 minutes).

For the men, Jerome Taylor and James Burhite paved the way as Taylor brought home a pair of Top 5 finishes with a second place finish in 100 meters (11.36 seconds) and a fourth place finish in the 200 meters (22.46 seconds). Burhite earned a spot in the Top 5 by placing fifth in the decathlon (4,286 points).

After the men competed at the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater in the Whitewater Open yesterday, they, along with the women, will compete at the EIU Track Meet at Eastern Illinois University in Charleston Friday & Saturday.

Speech Team places fifth nation-wide

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-chief

The Harper Speech team placed fifth in the nation at the Phi Kappa Psi National Speech Tournament in Kansas City, Missouri on April 8 through 14. Over 420 schools attended the national tournament. This is the first time Harper has attended the tournament since Coach Marcia Larenta took over, three years ago. Since then, the team's size has increased by almost five times, and the team has become much more successful. "I'm glad to see the growing interest in Speech Team, and I'm happy to be working with a variety of students at Harper," commented Larenta.

At the national tournament, freshman Kashi Brandolino was awarded a silver in Poetry Interpretation.

Rosemary Langer, a second-year member of the team, took a bronze in Speech to Entertain, while Marsha Delis, a freshman, also won a bronze for Persuasive Speaking.

Also attending the national tournament and contributing to team points was freshman Shan Glimore.

Larenta added, "We were happily surprised that Harper did so well for the first time at the national tournament in a while. We hope it means continued success for the team."

FORMULATOR sets new goals

By David Shedd
Staff Writer

One week from today FORMULATOR, INC. will celebrate its one-year anniversary as the first computerized student-run corporation on Harper's campus.

Back in April of 1989 there were nine students chosen to work at this dental manufacturing firm. At first, there was no guarantee they would be paid as there was no assurance the company would survive a year. But there was a chance these students could achieve success, and they did!

Their 50-year-old product, the OCCULSA-MESH, is a firm material placed in the mouth of a patient. A paste, which will harden, is applied to the mesh like material. The patient must bite into the material and paste, until the paste hardens. Once an impression has been recorded, the doctor will remove this "inter-occlusal record." This process shows accurately where all of the patient's teeth come into contact. The record or impres-

America's Bald Eagle; a new victory, a new battle

By HAYAA EL-NASSER
USA TODAY/Apple College
Information Network

Of all the programs to save rare and endangered animals, the American bald eagle effort has been perhaps the most dramatic.

In the early 1960s, there were just 400 nesting pairs. Today, there are 2,600 of them, and the wild population — including migratory birds — is estimated at 11,610.

But the victory has set the stage for another battle. Because the fight has been so successful, government officials are considering taking the bird off the endangered species list and wildlife activists are frantic.

"There is no time to relax, protection of America's bald eagle," says Jim Probst of the National Audubon Society. "Have we only saved our national symbol from one death to confront it with another?"

Adding a touch of irony is the timing of the bald eagle issue. As concern over the bird's fate mounts, events marking the 20th anniversary of Earth Day are reaching a peak.

Pesticide pollution — mostly from DDT — almost killed off the bald eagle, pushing it onto the endangered species list in some states in 1967. It is now endangered in 43 states, threatened in five. Only Alaska, where bald eagles are still abundant, and Hawaii, where they never existed, are exempt from the list.

"It's a very encouraging increase," says Dan James, a biologist with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Some wildlife organizations support the government in capitalizing on the bird's popularity to bring about an environmental record.

Not true, says James. "We are fully having our considerations on biology. And what we have seen are increases of bald eagles throughout most of the lower 48 states."

But opponents say taking the eagle off the endangered list will slash funding and generate a more lax attitude toward protecting eagles.

Corporations have poured millions of dollars into the bald eagle campaign.

Of the 562 species on the federal endangered list, from the grizzly bear to the humpback whale, the bald eagle has received by far the largest amount of federal money — $1.1 million in 1989.

The government does not expect any cutbacks in state and federal funding if the bald eagle's endangered species status changes.

It would still be illegal to damage a bald eagle's nest or shoot a bald eagle — a crime that carries a maximum fine of one year in prison and a

Nevermore

Despite better prospects for endangered species like the whooping crane and bald eagle, inclusion on the list of protected species couldn't save some species. Here are several that have become extinct in the United States recently.

But now are not the concern of opponents. Land developers are

The bald eagle and humans have one thing in common: Both like to live and play near rivers and lakes. But we fitting the bald eagle can't do live and play with humans. Bald eagles don't breed in a noisy environment. If the change is officially proposed this year, the American bald eagle could be reclassified as threatened by 1991. But there is sure to be plenty of debate before that happens. James already received 150 responses to his February proposal. He says he welcomes the controversy. "This whole issue has reinvigorated and rejuvenated interest in the bald eagle."

son is then used as an aid to the practitioner in performing bridgework or other precise medical processes.

During the last year, they have begun to experiment with exportation to foreign markets. Fax ordering is now the easiest method when ordering with FORMULATOR, INC. Accounting is completely computerized. All production of the OCCLUSA-MESH is manufactured at Harper. Sales are the highest since 1985. Students now receive bonus checks, that's right cash, for their accomplishments. Those clients who have not ordered in the past year are now ordering again through the success of marketing campaigns.

The young entrepreneurs now plan to expand their product line. They would not disclose what product or products they will begin to distribute, but they believe what they plan to sell may out-do the OCCLUSA-MESH.

The FORMULATOR, INC. members are: President John Fallahoe, Exec. VP Brian Sans, VP of Finance Lisa Wanatowitz, Collections Michele Hasenauer, Accountant Brian Hendricks, VP of Marketing Steve Harris, Director of Sales Laura Perouse, Marketing Communications Charles Connelly, Research & Development Rita Heunch, VP of Production Fred Spender and VP of Purchasing Andy Schwender. This diverse group of students have brought the change needed to keep FORMULATOR, INC. on Harper's campus for the next decade and beyond.

"Everyone at FORMULATOR, INC. puts 150 percent in what they do. Cooperation, communication, and care is how we do it!" stated President Fallahoe.

Presently, FORMULATOR, INC. is looking for new employees. The positions available are in accounting, production, and marketing. Applications are in J249c, or call 397-3000 ext. 2970 for more information. FORMULATOR, INC. is an equal opportunity employer, looking for students attending Harper College through the Spring of 1991.

What lies ahead for FORMULATOR, INC. is still too early to tell, but one can bet that their future successes will continue to out-do their past performances.

"We can only continue this rate of success if the students at Harper get involved and try, that is all it takes, interest complemented with action!" said Fallahoe.

Hey Bart Simpson fans, it's time to join the Underachiever's Society

By Jamie Beven
Staff Writer

Admit it, you like the Simpsons, don't you. Every Sunday evening at 7:30 your eyes are glued to the television, aren't they.

The Simpsons have quickly become America's favorite family. They rate with the likes of the Cleavers, the Munsters, the Jeffersons and the Curbys.

Wherever I look, I see a Simpsons T-shirt. The one I own says "Bart Simpson 'Underachiever'." (And proud of it, man!) So in honor of the Bartman, I inform you a new club called the "Underachiever's Society."

However, there are certain ways to qualify as a member. If any one of the following traits are carried out, then you're in like flint. So here's some hard advice, or badvice, from your truly.

First, you have to waste an entire day sleeping. When that stinking alarm clock goes off, destroy it with an eight pound sledge. Then roll over and snore and your homework is like a missing person's report or send a search party after you.

Cut to the front of the line at a busy gas station. If somebody asks who you think you are, just say, "I'm Bart Simpson, who the hell are you?"

If you're at work and you feel sick, go in your boss's office and tell him how you feel. No wonder than you can tell him, show him... all over his desk. You're bound to get out of work for the day.

Elections for the Bart Simpson Underachiever's Society will be held soon. However, only a President is appointed since one underachiever on the executive board could cause enough damage.

In honor of Bartman, I can underachieve. It may be your safest bet. You've never known where an underachiever may strike next.

Faculty shows their stuff in art show

By Phyllis Beven
Staff Writer

More than thirty original works by Art Department faculty are on display this month in the exhibition cases on the second floor of Building C.

"It is very traditional," said Art Department Chairman Ben Dallas, "for faculty at most universities and colleges to have an art show once each year."

"It stems from the notion that most of those who teach are practicing artists. The basis of the show is faculty. That defines the participants, and aesthetically, that's what the show is about."

Dallas, who has three small drawings in the exhibit, said that each of the six full-time faculty and eleven part-time have two or three pieces. Artwork featured includes drawings, paintings, computer images, photographs and poetry. Some of the faculty's works are shown in galleries, said Dallas.

For Todd Ballantyne, the ambition to be involved in the theatre came in undergraduate school. He was inspired by one of his instructors, and decided pick up Theatre Arts as a major and a career.

"At first I wanted to be a performer, but it's much more interesting and fulfilling to share what I know with my students," commented Ballantyne.

Ballantyne, a graduate of the University of Iowa, is currently a speech instructor at Harper and director of the spring play, The Diviners.

Although Ballantyne directed a few plays in undergraduate and graduate school, this is his first experience directing as an instructor.

"I really enjoy it here. It's a unique and exciting experience for me. Thus far, I've found it to be a very fulfilling experience," he responded when asked about his experience at Harper thus far.

When talking with him, it's obvious the inspiration that caused him to first become involved in the theatre is still there. His enthusiasm about The Diviners is almost contagious as he explains that the progress of the play is coming along well, the characters are strong and they are now working on smoothing out the blocking and character dynamics.

The Diviners is set in a small, rural southern Indiana town. The play's storyline revolves around the relationship of Buddy Layman and C.C. Showers.

Layman is a disturbed young boy who as a child witnessed the drowning of his mother and almost drowned as well. The experience left him terrified of water.

Showers is a disillusioned preacher who has left his work in the ministry and comes to Zion, Indiana hoping for a new beginning.

Showers is drawn to a deeply human quality in Buddy and is determined to cure him of his fear of water. The story ends

"The characters are very genuine and sincere. We're trying not to promote overacting styles. They're simple characters with nothing but the best of intentions...Simplicity is always very difficult on stage."

- Todd Ballantyne

with an emotionally powerful climax.

"The audience is going to have to accept that this play is surrealistic," warns Ballantyne. He further explains that the play has no strict structure and the reality is merely suggested.

"The characters are very genuine and sincere. We're trying not to promote overacting styles. They're simple characters with nothing but the best of intentions."

Ballantyne feels that the development of characters has been the most challenging aspect of the production of this play. He explained, "Simplicity is always very difficult on stage." He also admits that the suggestion of the water and the river posed problems, as the water in the play is suggested, not actual.

The Diviners opens on Friday, April 27 at 8 pm in room 1143. The show will run April 28, and May 4 and 5 at 8 pm. The matinee performance is on April 29 at 2:30 pm. Tickets are $3 for Harper students and staff and $5 for the public.

A dinner theatre package is offered on April 28, with dinner at 6 pm and theatre at 8 pm. Tickets for the dinner theatre package are $15.95 for students and staff, $17.95 for the public.

For tickets or more information, call the Harper Box Office at 397-3000, extension 2547.

Power. The word says it all. For some people, you can feel it oozing to their body, a barely perceptible aura. Others, it hangs on their body like a stretch from wearing the same clothes too long.

Everyone wants power. Only a very few are willing to go to the lengths necessary to earn it. You somehow know that they are able to handle it properly responsibly. They have a sense of purpose, a goal, no matter if the goal is constantly changing, for such is the nature of power. To be in harmony with it, you must be able to change as it changes you.

Some will have power thrust upon them, and they must choose how to use it. It is not always easy to use it wisely, but there is one rule of thumb that can be used. The rule is, simply, if it helps someone else then it is being used wisely. If it is used selfishly then it is being used wrongly.

For those who have earned it, or, in most cases, those who have had it thrust upon them, it is very easy to follow this rule. The responsibility that goes with it weighs on their shoulders and must be properly balanced or it will ultimately crush them. They can feel it.

For others, it is a means to an end. Sometimes they cannot even say why they want it (or dare not) but they must have the power. These unfortunates would have us believe that it is their natural right. They do not know the balance which is required. By their own will they will have it (or so they think, after all they are legends in their own minds).

You must wonder why I chose to write about this subject this week. Last week I experienced something that really tickled me off. Someone in power (not who thinks he has power) decided that something I had to offer to someone else—something that would have helped that person, wasn't important enough to be taken care of. Never mind that it would have only cost him an extra 10 minutes of his time, and that it was his job, it wasn't as important to him as getting the message to his bosses that he was more important than they are. (I'm sure that his politicking with the admin for their position next year had nothing to do with it.)

If he does get this position he wants so badly, I pity the people that work under him next year. I would not even if I was paid for it. He has not learned the basic rule of power, that before you can lead, you MUST know how to follow. He not only doesn't know how to follow, he has no interest in following.

Oh well, I won't be here next year anyway. Perhaps this is for the best. I have seen enough of the results of actions by the power-mad to know that I do not wish to see any more of it. I can help it. I know that I will have to do so, but if I have a choice, I prefer not to. (Oh Bartleby, where are you when we need you.)

Editor's note to David Lennard:

Below I'm sure you've learned to page six and found that your letter had not been printed. I felt that you made some valid points, and we've certainly never run from controversy, but I felt I have to keep you from running your letter. I probably could have run a severely edited and watered-down approximation of your letter, but I don't think you would want that either. I'm sorry. Perhaps you can revise the letter for next week.

First of smoking survey results

Oh, no...they're going to use the "A" word again

Well, some of the smoking questionnaires have come in. All 29 of them. The responses seem to be varied. Let's take a look.

- #1: Are you a smoker?
6-yes 23-no
- #2: Are there certain places where smoking now takes place that cause discomfort to you as a nonsmoker?
17-yes 8-no 4 had no comment
- #3: Do you feel that smoking on campus needs to be restricted?
22-yes 7-no
- #4: Should smoking be completely banned from Harper?
18-yes 11-no
- #5: Should Harper allow smoking, but only in restricted areas?
14-yes 14-no 1 had no comment

So what does this mean? Not a whole heck of a lot. At least four people are confused about the meaning of "completely banned." It also means that 24,971 students probably don't care.

It also needs to be noted that a good portion of the surveys seem to be from teachers. The survey was meant for students. However, by the sheer bulk of the responses coming from inter-departmental mail, something tells us we're right. Also, many of the envelopes we've received through inter-departmental mail probably came out of Health Services. (By the way, the last department listed on the outside of an envelope one can usually tell where at least the envelope came from, if not the contents.)

The teachers and staff supposedly had their say when the Environmental Health and Safety Committee took their survey over the summer. (Are we suggesting that many of Harper's employees didn't participate in that survey, so they are participating in ours? No, we would never suggest that the original survey was unfair or inaccurate.) We think it's time to hear from the students.

Unfortunately, this also means students are pretty apathetic. We think this, along with the poor Trustee election run out, tells the Board of Trustees they could get away with infatigable if they tried (No, we're not suggesting they should or even want to).

Students, it's time to be heard. At least one member of the staff will be available at the April 26 Board of Trustees meeting to report the results to the Board members, so your responses will be heard. Fill out the questionnaire and return it to the Harbinger office. It is reprinted below.

Earth Day a 20 year event

By Alice Chisholm
Assistant Managing Editor

Twenty years ago Americans celebrated the first Earth Day. They participated in rallies, teach-ins, parades, and forums that brought attention to our deteriorating environment.

The original Earth Day was planned to get the environment into the political arena," said organizer Gaylord Nelson.

The environmental teach-in paved the way for the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the Clean Water Act, the Clean Air Act, the Safe Drinking Water Act, and the Solid Waste Disposal Act.

The 20th anniversary of Earth Day is billed as the environmental event of the decade. Organizers expect about 2,000 campuses to participate and hope the event will provide the backbone for the April 22 event.

"The environment is a hot issue," said Owen Byrd, national student coordinator of the group Earth Day 1990. "Students have a pretty sophisticated understanding that environment touches on all issues."

The Earth is in sad shape. The ozone layer is thinning. Greenhouse gas emissions are invading our atmosphere. The rain forests are disappearing. Animals are rapidly becoming extinct. Garbage is leaking out of our landfills.

A 1989 national survey of college freshmen conducted by the University of California at Los Angeles stated that 36.1 percent believed that getting involved in programs to clean up the environment is very important.

It's hard to say why students have become active, said George Washington University Political Science Professor Howard Gillette.

The Exxon spill probably helped renew environmental interest, but environmentalists also see more possibility for activism because President Bush is taking the issue more seriously than Reagan ever did," said Gillette.

Harper College will celebrate its Earth Day on Monday, April 23. "Earth Day gives us an opportunity to increase student and community awareness about the environment," said Dean of Curriculum Development George Voegel.

Earth Day activities at Harper include tree planting, seminars, films and videos on environmental issues, a composting demonstration, and a trash walk.

"Earth Day is a good thing," said Voegel. "It is unfortunate we had to wait twenty years for it."

Don't forget the earth Celebrate Earth Day, but don't forget your pledge

By James F. Arosen
Professor of Biology Department Chair

As Earth Day approaches and the planning for local, national and international celebrations comes to a frenzied peak, we are reminded by the media with statements of what we have not done to protect the Earth, suggestions as to what we need to do now and dire predictions as to our future if we don't act quickly and expeditiously.

The tremendous volume of information coming to us as this time can be overwhelming and confusing. It is important sort through the barrage of information and focus on a few facts.

You can not change what was, but you can learn from previous actions so as to repeat the same mistakes.

You can not solve all the problems by yourself, but you can do something. Whatever you do, no matter how little or great, is better than doing nothing. Pick up that piece of paper on the sidewalk before you take the extra step to recycle that aluminum can, drive one gallon of gasoline less and save the ten pounds of carbon dioxide greenhouse gas you would have produced, shower with a friend to conserve water, join a local or national environmental organization and work for the political changes necessary to protect the earth, write letters to support environmentally positive politicians and companies. Work for their success. Turn your backyard into a habitat for wildlife.

When we do on a daily basis as individuals as what will make a difference. It is many hands making things reach the ultimate goal of protecting Mother Earth. If we love our Mother Earth, she will love us in return and the future will take care of itself. If we continue to assume she will love us even though we abuse her, our future is bleak.

Earth Day is coming. Enjoy it and celebrate. When Earth Day has passed do not forget to continue your Earth Day pledge to protect and nurture the earth. Mother Earth needs many hands and many minds working for her every day, not just on Earth Day.

Dolphins still suffering

By Elizabeth Dombeck
Guest Writer

I spent my spring break at the Dolphin Research Center (DRC) in Grassy Key, Florida. There I got to know 15 Atlantic Bottlenose dolphins and one Spotted dolphin (one of the species being killed in the tuna nets). During the week I got to feed them, play with them, wash them and swim with them.

On my third and final swim, I opted to do a "free" swim. This meant as I swam I was not allowed to touch them. It was completely up to the dolphins to interact with me.

At first I couldn't see them. I was sure they were going to stay out of sight until it was time to get out of the water. (The dolphins at the DRC live in the ocean, not in an artificial environment). All of the sudden I saw two dorsal fins appearing toward me. Just as I thought they were going to move over they separated and swam around me.

A little after that, I was floating on my back and one jumped over my stomach. It was like a dream, being in their environment and having them seek us out. They were so playful, yet so careful not to hurt us. Later, after that evening I thought about how ironic it was that they are so gentle with humans and we are causing them immense pain, suffering and death.

One of the most surprising facts I learned at DRC is the tuna industry is exempt from the Marine Mammal Protection Act (MMPA), which states that no human shall harass, molest, attempt to capture or kill dolphins.

The MMPA refers to the dolphins killed in tuna nets as "incidental." The appropriate word is "intentional." The dolphins are deliberately located, thrown, drowned by bombs and encircled by a mile-long net. All this is done in hopes of catching any yellowfin tuna that may be swimming below them. The Eastern Tropical Pacific is the only place in the world where dolphins and tuna swim together and nobody knows why.

It has been recorded on video that 50 dolphins were sacrificed to catch few yellowfin tuna. The captain of the tuna boat asked how many dolphins were caught in the net. When he learned only 50 were caught, he ordered his crew not to try to release any because it wasn't worth the effort. This is called a "disaster set," when all the dolphins that are injured, deadened, or weakened in the process of catching tuna. A dolphin without the use of his lower jaw for hearing is a dead dolphin. An injured or weakened dolphin is easy prey for sharks, which follow pods of dolphins.

It is estimated that the total number of dolphins killed in a single year fluctuates between 23,000 and 657,000. Over the past 20 years an average of one dolphin has been killed every 2.5 minutes. These numbers do not include the dolphins that are released and die later from capture effects. Only five percent of the tuna sold is caught by using dolphins. The estimated total deaths of dolphins since modern tuna methods started is six million. All of that for what? A tuna fish sandwich on ice?

The past year has been exciting and very successful for Earth Island Institute and the Save the Dolphin Project. More and more people are learning about the tragedy taking place in the Pacific and are taking action. The boycott of all canned tuna is expanding, and school cafeterias are scrapping tuna off their menu. But the fight is not over.

Stopping the slaughter depends on the effort not only of Earth Island staff, but also of thousands of activists all over the country—people like yourselves. Don't be one of those people who doesn't do anything because they think they can only do "a little." If everyone does a little, it will add up to a lot.

Please stop by the Tuna/Dolphin table on Monday, April 23 and see what you can do to help the dolphins. There will be petitions and postcards to sign. Silent educator stickers and "Save the Dolphins" T-shirts will be for sale.

It's time to tell the tuna industry that we won't stand for one more dolphin being killed for their economic gain and that we are going "tuna free."

Sorry Charlie, tuna-free is guilt-free.

Editor's note: Since this story was written, a few tuna companies have announced that they are no longer purchasing tuna from fishing companies that kill dolphins. While this is a small victory for the preservation of dolphins, the battle is far from being over. Stop by the Tuna/Dolphin table for more information. —T.V.

Recycling causing a glut

By JOHN F. PETERSON
USA TODAY Apple College
Information Network

Recycling, once a solution to overflowing landfills, has created a new kind of glut.

With thousands of communities collecting mountains of paper, glass, metals and plastics, recycling industry executives are concerned that some of the material could outpace the market.

Only 10% of Americans' trash is recycled, but supplies of recycled material have outstripped demand in many areas. Until industries find ways to handle and use it all, the glut may slow the spread of recycling.

That worries environmentalists who say recycling tops the list of easy ways Americans can reduce their impact on the Earth. It costs individuals nothing and can often lower a local government's trash disposal costs.

In fact, the glut has arisen in part because states have passed mandatory recycling laws to stretch the life of the last few landfills left open under increasingly strict rules set by the Environmental Protection Agency.

One result: Volunteer groups have been forced to shun new boxes as a way to finance their activities.

The village of Seward Manor, N.Y., for example, once enlarged its budget with profits from the sale of recycled newspapers. No longer.

"We did it when you got paid for it," said Richard Bennett, who doubles as trustee and sanitation commissioner for the Long Island village of 675 homes.

"Now we've got to pay them to take the newspapers away."

The glut has dropped prices for used newspapers to all-time lows and in some areas people have to pay to leave newspapers at recycling plants. Tons of baled newspapers sit in warehouses around the country, according to John Vesdi, who runs the reclamation division of Jefferson Smurfit Corp. of Clayton, Mo., the largest US collector of waste paper.

"We have the collection process geared up and hot, but it's going to be three years before we are ready to start using the material," said Vesdi, whose company wants to build a new plant devoted to recycling newspapers.

Several other paper companies plan recycling mills, but say they won't begin cutting into the glut before 1992.

Joseph Nicoletti, a public works official in White Plains, N.Y., expressed the dilemma this way, "One of the biggest problems in recycling from a local point of view is that after you've gone to all the work and expense of collecting the material, you're still left with a commodity you have to figure out how to use."

Nicoletti said the White Plains program, like many on the East Coast, has difficulty selling newspapers and other recycled materials.

Wayne Koser, who monitors community recycling programs for Michigan's Department of Natural Resources, said Michigan, unlike many areas, has a strong recycling market for most products. The state's container deposit law, passed in the 1970s, helped create the infrastructure and markets, and Koser said 93% of aluminum, glass and plastic bottles sold in Michigan are recycled.

"We're fortunate that we have a lot of little businesses in the state that will take your plastic, paper or scrap metal," Koser said.

Not all areas are that fortunate. A pilot program that collects glass from 62,000 Los Angeles households has been unable to find a market for nearly 30% of the glass.

That could mean huge problems for a state-mandated recycling program scheduled to begin throughout the city in September. Crews will collect thousands of tons of recyclable trash daily, glass, newspapers, plastics and metals, from 720,040 households.

"We've already got a mountain of glass and a limited market," said David Jiang, a project coordinator for a local glass recycling company. Much of the glass people place in separate containers may wind up in landfills, Jiang said.

Many environmental officials are convinced recycling is the only viable answer for a society that seems intent on buying itself in its own garbage.

"The future cost of landfilling is astronomical," insisted Joan Edwards, director of Los Angeles' recycling program. "Whatever the estimates are, triple them, and they still won't come close."

We must change

A very commonly heard expression heard from weak people with small minds is, "I'm not going to do anything about the environment. Why should I? One person doesn't make a difference."

Unfortunately, because of people like this, most branches of government are considering unprecedented laws to deal with the environmental problems. The new laws have some people worried about protecting the Constitution and all of our personal freedoms.

As Laurance Rockefeller, Director for Earth Day 1990, has said, "Some economists and analysts agree that, if we continue consuming resources as we are now, the only way to bring about a balance between demand and supply will be through authoritarian controls."

It hasn't yet come to this, but statements such as this and others have many raised concern about the slippery slope possibility. One law restricting actions only slightly could lead to another one further restricting actions, and so on, until we are under authoritarian control.

The John Birch Society is one such outspoken group concerned over the nation's environmental actions. Gary Benson, Director of Research for the Birch Society has said, "If environmental extremists are allowed to succeed with their plans, the American people will be convinced that they must lower their standard of living, bend federal spending, and accept international authority in order to save the earth from what are actually unproven and unsubstantiated theories."

Their concern for the traditional American way of life is admirable. But, most cultures have always acknowledged that in order for society to exist, there must be certain laws and regulations even on personal freedom. My freedom to swing my arm is unquestionable. I do not have freedom to swing my arm into your face, however. So one's liberty is extended to the point where some one else's liberty is jeopardized. That's why our path is extended to the point where some one else's liberty is jeopardized. That's why our path is extended to the point where some one else's liberty is jeopardized.

That is also why we need to curb our wasteful behavior. My casual use and disposal of toxic chemicals could very well kill someone. If we cannot learn to modify behavior through education, then government has the right to protect the populace with laws in order to provide for the general welfare of all citizens and their standard of living.

Our waste and abuse of the Earth has not yet reached true crisis levels, but do we really want to wait that long before we take action? We may already be too late by then. Nature can take hundreds of years to correct damage. We must learn to voluntarily control ourselves before then in order to avoid the crisis. Preventive medicine is the best cure.

Fortunately there are other people, smart people. They may not get enough sleep at night for worrying about what to do next, but they usually spend a much happier life on average knowing they have accomplished something important (unlike small minded people who take conveniences of old cars so they can be the first one to pull away from a light). Doing something useful every day gives a tremendous sense of worth.

Are you sensing some hostility here? Good! It is about time the globally educated are heard, and it's about time to stand up, take action and convince others to do so. We must educate our families and friends on the importance of our Mother Earth. She has given rise to our existence, and has nurtured us every step of the way. Now we are slowly destroying her through our inability to stop our brothers and sisters from being small minded. We must do something now.

Today was right, once we are aware of our own selfishness, we can change our behavior, even on our Mother's death bed.

88% of all ivory is taken from elephants that are illegally hunted and killed. 58% of this ivory is bought by Americans.

If you convince two people to do something for the environment, and the next day they convinced two people, and so on, it would take less than a month to get everyone in the US to take action.

1/3 of the average American's garbage is parking which is thrown out almost immediately.

Recycling a glass jar saves enough energy to light a 100-watt bulb for four years.

If just Americans reduce their meat intake by only 10%, the savings in grains and soybeans could adequately feed 60 million people - the number of people who starved to death, world wide, each year.

Individuals count

Several times I've been criticized and questioned for my involvement and concern in saving the environment. A few of my friends have even been upset at me because I "got on my soapbox" a little too often.

The overwhelming attitude seems to be "The environment isn't my problem, and even if it was, there's nothing I can do about it." The general consensus is wrong.

The preservation of our environment is everyone's problem. We've enjoyed the technological advancements and comforts that have brought about the depletion of the planet, and now we must do something about it. If we don't act soon, the cost will be much higher than the human race is willing pay.

Unfortunately, most people suffer from the "omniscient effect". They stick their heads in the ground and ignore what's going on around them. I know. I did this for many years, and was quite successful at it. I felt that one person could not change the world, so it wasn't even worth trying.

I was wrong. One person can make a difference. Martin Luther King was only one person, yet he made a tremendous impact on American society.

If one person recruits a few more people, the impact will be even greater. It only took a few people to create the plastics, styrofoams, and toxic wastes we spew into our atmosphere every day.

A building is not created out of one gigantic mound of clay. It is built brick by brick, each brick supporting and laying the ground for other bricks. If even one or two bricks were removed, the building would collapse.

Environmental reform must be created in much the same way. Every person must support the effort, or the effort will collapse. An individual can make a difference, especially when it's considered that all great social movements consisted of many individuals. The equal rights movement movements consisted of many individuals. The equal rights movement movements consisted of many individuals. The equal rights movement movements consisted of many individuals.

I'm only one person, there's nothing I can do."

Every aluminum can tossed into the garbage instead of recycled wastes a precious resource. Every molecule of chlorofluorocarbon released into our atmosphere destroys the ozone layer. Every piece of plastic dumped onto the earth will be there in 500 years. Every animal killed because of human greed is a loss of life.

Most people are uneducated and uninformed where environmental matters are concerned. The first step in saving the earth is spreading the word. The second step is doing something about it. I'll take the chance of being criticized if it means that my children and my children's children will have the opportunity to breathe fresh air or drink unpolluted water.

Greenpeace was inspired by a Native American prophecy. The prophecy tells that the people of the world will unite as Warriors of the Rainbow to save the planet from destruction by greed and careless exploitation.

The time of the Rainbow Warriors has come.

Nobody ever tells anybody else that the music business is easy. Early last year the members of That Petrol Emotion were worried that they were on the verge of breaking up. Their latest album End of the Millennium Psychosis Blues had been poorly received by both the critics and the public. The band members themselves were slightly unhappy about the "funky" sound that their record label was pushing on them because, in their opinion, it didn't feel right. Not much later, one of the original Petrol members called it quits and the future looked dim. "I remember the day when we were rehearsing," said Damian O'Neill in a recent interview, "and Curran McLaughlin came in with Scum Surfin' and knew then we're not finished yet. It was great feeling."

The band worked hard during and after last spring's world tour, gaining a new member (John Marchini replaced John O'Neill) and recording songs for a new album. The enthusiasm that greeted the Petrols on their American tour dates urged them on. The new songs that they were working on were generally agreed by everyone to be as good as or better than anything from Millennium. New guitarist Marchini assimilated John O'Neill's responsibilities almost immediately. Things were beginning to click again for That Petrol Emotion.

Lead singer Steve Mack (the only American in the group—the rest are Irish) cites a major influence in the last Pixies

L.P., as well as other works by Dinosaur Jr. and The Jesus and Mary Chain. "The song Gnaw Mark was me trying to write another Sidewalking by The Jesus and Mary Chain", says Damian O'Neill. The rest of the album is a collection of songs that he wrote during his time in the band.

The new album is called Chemistry after an earlier Petrol B-side. The twelve tracks are all upbeat and curiously devoid of the strong political opinions that saturated much of the earlier albums. "With regard to the politics, we just weren't going anywhere," says O'Neill. The move away from the darker feeling of the previous two albums reflects the band's new-found optimism.

The production of Chemistry was handled by Scott Litt (producer of R.E.M. and others). Although their last producer Roli Mosimann did an excellent job, much of the material did not translate well live, and Mosimann's style just didn't correlate with the Petros'. Litt's production style brings the guitars up higher in the mix but lets them start and stop instead of creating a wall of guitar noise way back in the mix.

The album begins with Hey Venus, a song that immediately lets the listener know that Steve Mack hasn't lost any of his terrific vocal style. The bass guitar and drums take over for the next track, Blue to Black. It starts with a rapid crackle rill that continues through the whole song, at first deceiving the listener regarding the pace of its actual beat. The song Scam Surfin' slows its beat before picking up again before the fade-out. Compulsion is one of the slow songs on Chemical, featuring a simple yet memorable guitar

n/c

The song single would be perfect for radio play, with its easygoing beat and chorus. The following track, Headstaggered, is one of the most outstanding cuts on the album. It's a danceable guitar-pop song about being drunk and its backbeat is reminiscent to the Wonder Stuff song Goodbye. Headstaggered is written by Ciaran McLaughlin, who tends to write the more danceable Petrol songs. The next song, Abandon, is the first import single and was written by Reamann O'Gorman, who also wrote Tingle. The album closes out in typical Scott Litt style with the gentle Sweet Shiver Burn, rounding out an excellent collection of songs.

Chemierazy is a great album, the fourth for Thai Petrol Emotion. The band's current high spirits should keep them motivated for quite a while. Although their style and ideals have changed, they are still essentially the same band that they have been all along.

Women's Softball heads to DuPage for a double-header Hawks stand at 5 - 5 - 1

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

It was a little of everything this week for the Harper Softball Team: one win on the strength of a no-hit pitching performance, one game declared a tie due to darkness and one double-header sweep (unfortunately the Hawks were the ones who got swept).

Put all that in one big basket, and the Hawks now stand at 5-5-1 on the season and 3-2-1 in NAC play.

The week started off well as they literally shut out Rock Valley 5-0 in the first game of a double-bill against the Trojans Thursday at home. The visitors were unable to pick up a single hit as freshman sensation Nicky Bolding "ripped a bear" according to Head Coach Martha Lynn Bell.

"All of us (the team) were in awe of how smoothly she pitched from the first ball to the last ball," Bell said.

The Trojans ran into another problem in game two: a problem that also baffled Harper. Darkness. The game was called after the seventh inning with the score tied at seven apiece.

"I thought we were gonna make it up or play it over; it's kind of disappointing," a frustrated Bell said.

The Hawks next traveled up to McHenry where they ran into a buzzsaw, falling twice to the defending Skyway Conference Champion Lady Scots 7-0 and 9-1 Saturday leaving the coach with the feeling that her team really didn't want to be there.

"We just didn't come ready to play," she said.

After traveling to play Triton in a twin-bill at River Grove Tuesday, April 17, the team will travel to DuPage in a double-header Saturday. Game time is 12:00 pm.

Trippiedi voted new Student Trustee

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-Chief

Mike Trippiedi has been elected Student Trustee for the 1990-91 school year. The selection resulted from the tie-breaking election held on April 16 and 17. Trippiedi finished the election with a total of 33 votes, Mammon with 19 and Winslow got 3.

The total votes cast in the election were 57. This defeats the April 2 and 3 election for history's second smallest turnout at a Student Trustee election.

This election will also go down in Harper's history for other reasons; Trippiedi will be Harper's first deaf Student Trustee.

The Harbinger recently conducted an interview with Trippiedi at the onset of his term. The complete and unabridged interview is printed below.

Q. How does it feel to be the new Student Trustee?

A. It is kind of an honor. It is like I have reached a new height. However, I feel a sense of regret that my father, who passed away last fall, didn't live to see this.

Q. How do you feel about being the first handicapped Student Trustee?

A. I like the idea. It shows anyone with disabilities that being a student trustee is a job that can be done. I don't have any scruples about being the first deaf Trustee. But I wonder, did I not become the first deaf Trustee of a college in Illinois?

Q. Do you feel that your deafness will be an obstacle you'll have to overcome?

A. For me, it is not a big obstacle. From my understanding, the Board of Trustees didn't have any previous experience with a deaf person. So it will be a new and different experience for the Trustees.

Q. Now that you're Student Trustee, what do you plan to do?

A. I plan to continue to assist the disabled in any way I can. For example, I Earth Day; everyday!

Harper celebrated Earth Day on campus Monday. There were many displays and posters relating to the day, including that one by Harper's pre-school children. The day was an informative success. The Student Senate organized a variety of events including a campus clean-up, tree planting, a birthday celebration and of course, information on environmental concerns.

Ex-student employee petitions Formulator

By Erica Aust
Managing Editor

Formulator Inc. has undergone a few changes since last semester; a few too many changes, according to ex-member Dave Hill.

Hill is gathering signatures for a petition to be given to Formulator's Board of Directors this Friday. He is asking for changes within the power structure and the decision-making processes of the leadership.

Hill said, "The students should have more say...or even be considered in the process."

The petition specifically cites Formulator's policy of maintaining an above average grade point average and students being excluded from the decision-making process.

Even if Hill's petition proves fruitful, he will not see the results. Hill was fired from Formulator.

Hill said, "I was accused of not performing to capacity, yet I was the only one video-taped (for a training film). I was the only

College tuition increases exceed inflation rate

By Marc J. Baile
Staff Writer

The spiraling costs of college tuition in the 1980's were the result of schools improving their quality to compete for students.

There is no explanation for 9 percent tuition increases that were double the rate of inflation, said the American Council of Education and the College Board, in a study released last Thursday in Washington, D.C.

In Harper's 1988-89 academic year tuition was raised 9 percent, from $27 per credit hour to $30, increasing tuition over the last four years by 17 percent.

Higher education consultant, Arthur Hauptman listed a combination of factors which lead to the tuition increases, including:

• Private colleges competed for the declining pool of applicants by adding amenities from libraries to new gyms, rather than lowering prices.

• Public schools boosted tuitions, particularly in the 1980's, to offset recession-caused drops in state funding.

• Faculty salaries outpaced inflation in the 1960s to make up for the 1970's, when they ran behind inflation.

• Schools spent more on financial aid to make up for shortages in federal aid. It's feared that in the 1990's federal aid will be trimmed, meaning that low-income families and minorities will be getting less help.

In the 1970's schools were priced for value, but today schools are priced by the quality of the institution. Harper is recognized as one of the top community colleges in the nation; this may be one reason why tuition has gone up.

Harper's Board of Trustees recently approved the sale of revenue bonds to generate money for expansion of the campus. The project, which will begin next March, will include several new projects including the renovation of building F, a larger bookstore, and a Performing Arts Facility which will contain a theatre, offices, and the Liberal Arts Department.

FORMER CHICAGO POLICE OFFICER TO SPEAK

Former Police Officer Thomas Wishek will share personal experiences from his years with the Narcotics Division of the Chicago Police Department at noon next Monday in Building A 241.

During the talk, sponsored by DAWN, Wishek will present slides and displays of drug paraphernalia. He's appearing in conjunction with the Illinois Department of Alcoholism and Substance Abuse "Drug Free Illinois" campaign.

NEW COLLEGE THEME

Approximately two years ago the Institutional Marketing Committee (IMC) decided that the time had come to review the college theme and create a new one.

Students were asked in classes and through a Harbinger contest to vote for one of four possible themes that had been suggested by the committee and/or to suggest one of their own. The result was "Harper College: Your Future Today." The new theme was the brainchild of Harper freshman Ron Witek.

EARTH DAY FETED WORLDWIDE:

Millions of people in 140 countries celebrated Earth Day in 3,600 U.S. cities and towns, people picked up trash, hiked and biked, planted trees and paraded at rallies to mark Earth Day. Meanwhile, in open air mass was held in Poland's heavily polluted Silesia region; a rock concert was held on an island reclaimed from trash in Japan's Tokyo Bay.

BOOKSELLERS FIGHTING CENSORSHIP:

The American Booksellers Association and Waldenbooks have put out a full-page newspaper ad decrying "a growing pattern of increasing intolerance." They said they are mounting a new offensive against increasing censorship, citing the removal of books from libraries, boycotting advertisers of controversial TV shows, forcing retailers to remove certain magazines from shelves.

BUDGET DEFICIT GROWS:

The U.S. government has reported a record $63.3 billion budget deficit in March, up more than 51 percent from February's deficit of $35.3 billion. In March 1989, the government ran a deficit of $35.8 billion. Economists had expected a much lower deficit figure, in the range of $40 billion.

DRUG BALLOONS FLOP:

The latest device used for U.S. air interdiction of drugs is being called unproductive and is plagued with faulty mechanisms. Aerostats, a remote, radar-equipped balloon, is being used to trail planes that smuggle drugs from Mexico into Tucson, Ariz. U.S. government experts say aerostats are the "backbone" of U.S. drug interdiction efforts, but concede it has not helped actual busts.

could ask for more funds to pay the D.S.S. interpreters better. One of the interpreters said that Waubesa pays its interpreters better and so do some other schools within this region. I'd like Harper to have a competitive program for the deaf as well as for the disabled.

Also, I plan to address any issues that are important to our students such as recycling and smoking. But, my concern is with traffic and parking. I use Algonquin to leave my home to go to Harper. It is not bad going into Harper but when I leave Harper, I wait about two minutes. That is worse than the Meacham-Algonquin intersection which has a wait of about 1 1/2 minutes.

Q: Since your first meeting as Student Trustee will concern the smoking issue (tonight, at 8 pm in the Board Room), how do you feel about it?

A: Since I do not smoke, naturally the smoke bothers me. But I do not want the minority, which is the smokers, to be oppressed. I'd prefer if smokers smoked in specified areas of a building rather than all over.

I bitterly oppose banning smoking from the campus. I stick by the ban in Building M, after all, the people wouldn't want to breathe polluted air while exercising. But in Building A and other buildings, smokers may smoke in specified areas.

There are professors, faculty, and staffers who do smoke. I'm not sure about the rules for them right now but I try to be reasonable and try to respect the rights of the minority as well as the majority.

Organ donation; the present for the future

Thousands of people will receive organ transplants this year; an average of 32 transplant operations are performed every day. But for each one who receives a transplant, there will be many more who won't have an opportunity because organs just aren't available. Approximately 19,000 people at any time are waiting for a donated organ.

You have the power to save a life! All you have to do is sign an organ donor card. Signing your name on an organ donor card (or the one located on the back of your Illinois driver's license) could provide the gift of life to the victim of heart, liver or kidney disease.

Anyone, male or female, of any race or age — not only the young, robust or perfectly healthy — can donate his or her organs. After the donor's death, a transplant team will judge the suitability of donated organs. The more donors there are the better the chances of finding a well-matched, high-quality organ for each patient.

Contact the Health Service in A-362, extension 2288, for more information on organ donation or for organ donor cards. This week, during National Organ Donor Awareness Week, consider signing a donor card for someone's life.

Metaphysics school sponsors "Dream Hotline"

By Alisa Chomond
Assistant Managing Editor

Everyday as night rolls into day we live out our fantasies or nightmares in our dreams. These movies of our mind may provide new insights about life or journeys beyond our wildest dreams. For years seers, seersayers and prophets have used dreams to predict the future. Throughout history, many influential people — religious leaders, inventors, artists, writers and shamans have depended on dreams as the key to unlock their inner levels of consciousness. They sometimes have important decisions on discoveries made during the dream sequence.

Now you can learn about the universe in your mind as your dreams are interpreted by experts in the science of dream interpretation. The School of Metaphysics is sponsoring a nationwide dream hotline from 6:00 p.m. Friday, April 27 through midnight Sunday, April 29. Dream experts will interpret the symbols in your dreams for no charge within the local calling area. Call (708) 961-BADVICE: Why should I drink?

By Jamie Benson
Staff Writer

"Oh my aching head! My stomach is doing flip flops faster than Mary Lou Retton. I swear I'll never drink again!" How many times have you heard those words?

Why do people get drunk before work on the weekends. Is it because of our hectic schedules during the week? Maybe your hangovered friend or girlfriend drives you to drink. Some drink to blow off steam, and most people drink to achieve a feeling of euphoria.

All of the above can be a valid reason for drinking. But this week I have chosen to give reasons NOT to drink. So here's some not-to-had advice, or badvice, from yours truly.

One of the best reasons to stop drinking is so you won't wake up in strange places, such as your bedroom closet, your mom's car, seven under your neighbor's picnic table. Did you ever wake up and your mouth tastes like the bottom of a bird cage? Did you ever wake up wearing different clothes from the previous night? (Or clothes for that matter.) Did you ever wake up with a myelome because the size of a golf ball?

All of the above consequences of excessive drinking can be avoided if we stop getting drunk beyond recognition.

"Did you ever wake up and your mouth tasted like the bottom of a bird cage?"

Another reason to stop drinking heavily is to avoid humiliation. How many times has your drunken behavior been the topic of discussion for at least a week. Personally, I hate it, and it's equally as frustrating because you can't remember a darn thing, so how if you really did those things.

The best reason to stop drinking too much beer is it makes you FAT. If you don't like the way you look then don't even think about taking up beer drinking as an extracurricular activity.

For those who know me, you're probably saying, "Who the hell are you telling me not to get drunk?" Hey, you don't have to listen to me! Just take a look at my belly!

I'm not saying be 100% sober, and I'm surely not saying you must kill half your brain cells by 1993. But the next time you wake up in your neighbor's swimming pool with your underpants over your head, don't say I didn't warn you.

Could you use an extra $18,000 for college?

Here's How To Get It.

The Army Reserve's Summer Training Program can help you earn extra money for college. Here's how:

One summer, you take Basic Training, and the next summer you take skill training at an Army school. You'll earn at least $1,200 for Basic and even more for skill training. You can train at an Army Reserve unit near your college, usually serving one weekend a month plus two weeks Annual Training. During a standard enlistment, you'll earn over $10,000.

Add to this $18,000 for college if you qualify for the Maxx program (if full). Put it all together and you could have $18,000 and that could take a lot of the financial strain out of going to college. Think about it. Then join us at call.

RU 486: How it works

■ The woman must take three pills — 800 milligrams — of RU 486. This blocks the normal action of progesterone, which normally helps the fertilized egg attach to the uterine wall.

■ RU 486 causes the lining of the uterus to shed, as in a normal menstrual cycle, so that bleeding occurs. If a fertilized egg has implanted, the drug dislodges the egg from the wall.

■ After two days, the woman must return for an injection or vaginal suppository of synthetic prostaglandin, a drug that causes contractions of the uterus and helps complete evacuation. She must return once more in five to eight days to make sure the abortion is complete.

■ RU 486 must be taken during the first 49 days of pregnancy.

New abortion pill may be introduced to American women

By RON HELED SHAPIRO
Copyright 1990, USA TODAY
Apple College Information Network

WASHINGTON — California politicians think they have devised a way to circumvent the federal government and import a new abortion pill from France — which could radically transform the abortion debate in the United States.

Using its special drug-testing law, which allowed the state to test and distribute AIDS medication without the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's approval, the officials expect the pill could be available to California women as early as next year.

There is some freight with many personal pitfalls that some abortion-rights leaders say it will be impossible to execute and will become merely a ploy for politicians seeking to capture the pro-choice vote.

The first step involves getting the drug, called RU 486, into the state for more testing. That process starts Thursday with a public hearing before the San Francisco Board of Supervisors. If the board ratifies a resolution supporting clinical trials, tests could begin after the state legislature and governor approve the proposal.

"This hearing could be historic," said Supervisor Terrence Hallinan, the resolution's sponsor. "This will open the door to testing."

Indeed, doctors have developed a plan to analyze the drug's effect on women. Lawyers have begun work on ways to reduce potential liability lawsuits. And feminists started forming two companies to license and sell the drug in California.

But one major ingredient is missing — the pill.

It remains unclear if California could ever get the pill from Roussel Uclaf, the French company that developed the drug in 1992 and spent the last several years trying to back away from the controversy it generated.

"We don't want to sell the drug in the United States or license the drug either," said Arel Mounter, the company's international product manager for RU 486. "We do not want to enter into a public opinion debate. We are technicians."

Before the company will sell the drug in another country, Mounter said, the public must be in favor of it. Given the intense controversy over abortion here, feminists say they fear the company will never view the United States as a pro-choice nation.

Supervisor Hallinan said his resolution will convince the company that California is a pro-choice state and therefore allow the drug to be distributed there.

"We're as big as France," Hallinan said, explaining why he thought the company would be willing to negotiate with one state. "California women have a right to this drug. If Roussel Uclaf doesn't cooperate, I'd be for suing them."

All three gubernatorial candidates declared they favor abortion rights. Candidate John Van de Kamp, the attorney general, has made testing RU 486 in California one of his campaign issues.

Carol Downer, executive director of the Federation of Feminist Women's Health Centers, said the plan to market the drug in California is ridiculous.

"It's a grandstand thing," said Downer, who met with Roussel executives in France last year. "The company is almost as interested in what Van de Kamp has to say as a giant that's buzzing at their nose."

The drug became controversial as soon as Roussel started distributing it in France in September 1988. Within a month, the company pulled the pill from the market, citing anti-abortion pressure. But the French government, which owns a part of the company, ordered Roussel to resume distribution, saying the drug was "the moral property of women."

Downer says one way to force the issue is for someone to manufacture the drug here — defying Roussel's patent. If the company sues, pro-choice lawyers could argue that international patent laws are designed to protect inventors so they can exploit the market. If they refuse to sell the product, lawyers would argue, their patent could be taken away.

The companies (willing to distribute the drug say they believe they could get the pill from the World Health Organization, which has made it available for clinical trials in India, China, Hong Kong and Cuba. And there is talk of trying to smuggle the pill into the United States, an effort that would be difficult given the tight controls the company keeps on the drug.

Many feminists say they do not want the drug smuggled in because it can be dangerous if taken without medical supervision. Women who take the pill usually make three doctor's visits: one for the RU 486, another for a drug that causes the uterus to expel its contents, and a third for a follow-up.

France will give the pill only to residents. Given anti-abortion pressures and liability problems, Dr. Joseph Spindel, who monitors RU 486, said, "The drug is probably going to get here last."

Mark's Menagerie

By Mark James
Staff Writer

Well, to paraphrase the song, "Tonight's the night, will it be all right?" We'll soon find out. Tonight is the big bad board meeting to decide what to do with all the filthy rotten stinking secondhands I mean smokers.

What to do, what to do. Should we hang them smokers by their genitals until they decide to quit? Or maybe just public flogging. After all it's for their own good. Hm.

For History Major's, go back to around 1935 or so and listen to Hitler talk about the "Jewish problem". Or, if you're into American history, go back to the early 1900's and listen to the southern plantation owners, or even more recently, to the 1920's when the KKK was alive and active across the country.

All of it was for "their own good" to make them better citizens. It seems that the do-gooders are always around, the only thing that changes is the names of the victims. Seems they would have enough problems of their own to solve without trying to solve mine, too. Not to push my religious beliefs on you, but it was Jesus who said to "remove the board out of your eye before trying to remove the splinter from your neighbors'." Seems He had his own do-gooders to contend with (the Pharisees).

All of this in the name of trend-setting. Well, these people were trend-setters in their own time (and legends in their own minds).

For the average student I have a suggestion. Take what you can learn from the situation and leave the rest. Remember to look past the cover glass before you buy something at face value. When someone is trying to do something for someone else, or if you are trying to do something for someone else, make sure that the someone else wants it done for them.

Too many mistakes have been made in the past because people didn't want to look at the consequences. Look at the consequences. See what they are doing and call it what it is: prejudice at its ugliest. Someone saying to someone else that "I'm better and I know what is best." Stop them before it becomes too late.

As much as I would like to take a few of them and shake them, they would not learn. They must make and learn by their own mistakes. It's unfortunate that we who do not want their help must pay for the consequences.

Smoking survey results

Wanted: reasonable compromise in battle between smokers and non-smokers

Well, the final totals on the smoking surveys are in. Over the last two weeks, we have collected 110 surveys. Our collection fared much better after we wised up and placed collection enveloped on the distribution bins.

Although the survey was completely unscientific, we consider the results to be pretty representative of campus opinion. (After all, only 58 students voted for Student Trustee, and that's considered a "fair representation.") Perhaps we shall just assume that the remaining 24,890 students and faculty just don't care. In any case, the survey results were as follows:

- #1) Are you a smoker?
31-yes 79-no
- #2) Are there certain places where smoking now takes place that cause discomfort to you as a nonsmoker?
58-yes 41-no 11 had no comment
- #3) Do you feel that smoking on campus needs to be restricted?
72-yes 36-no 2 had no comment
- #4) Should smoking be completely banned from Harper?
43-yes 67-no
- #5) Should Harper allow smoking, but only in restricted areas?
65-yes 44-no 1 had no comment

Okay, that's great, but what does it mean? Well, it means some people are still confused about the meaning of "completely banned" (look it up in Webster's). It also means that the vast majority of respondents are non-smokers.

We find it interesting that, although the majority are non-smokers, many were against a completely non-smoking campus. Most (smokers and non-smokers alike) agree that smoking, in some way, needs to be restricted. While completely banning smoking is one rather extreme alternative, the majority want to simply restrict the areas where smoking is allowed.

There is no doubt that there are areas under the current policy that cause discomfort to non-smokers (many smokers, in fact, responded that there are places that are uncomfortable to them). While they may not have an overwhelming majority, they do have the right to be comfortable and not breathe fumes from smoking areas. Even if they were the minority, they would still have these rights. However, smokers have rights, too.

A lot of talk about the rights of either side has been brought up since this issue began last fall. The smokers have a right to smoke. The non-smokers have the right to breathe fresh air. Nobody can dispute either of those issues. However, the campaign of the Environmental Health and Safety Committee and the Institutional Wellness Committee has been loosely based on some form of "democracy." They claim that, since the non-smokers are the majority, their right should be upheld at the expense of the smoker's rights.

They are forgetting one of the most basic concepts of democracy: equal representation. Here they have been sadly lacking. There are no smokers on either committee; thus there is no representation for smokers.

Early this school year, Dr. Larry Kent formed the Committee for Smokers' Rights. When this committee attempted to explain their side to the others, the meeting was canceled due to lack of a quorum, and a rescheduling was refused. The smokers were, again, denied their say.

The Environmental Committees cannot rightly call their methods "democratic".

A compromise between the two parties needs to be reached. Yes, the smoking areas are uncomfortable where they are now. With a little planning and research, I'm sure they could be relocated to better, well-ventilated, low-traffic areas. Yes, there are rude smokers who don't keep where they belong. There will also be rude smokers and the need for enforcement whether or not Harper is "smoke-free".

Perhaps the Environmental Health and Safety Committee and the Institutional Wellness Committee should concentrate more on a compromise and less on their all-or-nothing attitude. Perhaps they need to work on researching and relocating the existing smoking areas. But, then again, they're probably too busy creating their next illusive summer survey.

The Diviners

By Tari Vaughn

"In the beginning, the play posed all kinds of technical problems, and we've managed to surmount them," commented The Diviners Director Todd Ballantyne. After months of rehearsing, building sets, fixing lighting and making costumes, Harper's spring show, The Diviners, will open this weekend.

The Diviners is set in a small, rural southern Indiana town. The play's storyline revolves around the relationship Layman is a disturbed young boy who as a child witnessed the drowning of his mother and almost drowned as well. The experience left him terrified of water.

Stowers is a disillusioned preacher who has left his work in the ministry and comes to Zehn, Indiana hoping for a new beginning.

Stowers is drawn to a deeply human quality in Buddy and is determined to cure him of his fear of water. The story ends with an emotionally powerful climax.

Ballantyne is very excited and confident about the opening of the show and a talented, hard-working cast makes the experience a truly enjoyable one," he commented.

However, Ballantyne warns the audience that they must come to the show with open minds, because the play is nontraditional in nature.

The cast of The Diviners includes: Dwight Powell, Lisa Marie Razzano, James Cunningham, Jennifer Denise Peters, E.J. Sutton, Julie Moncek, Diane Squers, Michael Ulrich, Michelle Pruzan, Bruce Stone, and Matt Helms.

The set for the show is designed by Michael Brown, with lighting by Barry

Jerry Peters (Goddie) faces Julie Moncek (Norma) and Michelle Pruzan (Luddy) with skepticism at the news that the preacher will save the town.

Lisa Razzano (Jenny Mae) washes Dwight Powell's (Buddy) feet

Taylor and costumes by Denise Diamata-Geiger. The Diviners opens on Friday, April 27 at 8 pm in room 1163. The show will run April 28 and May 4 and 5 at 8 pm. The matinee performance is on April 29 at 2:30 pm. Tickets are $3 for Harper students and staff and $5 for the public. A dinner theatre package is offered on April 28, with dinner at 6 pm and theatre at 8 pm. Tickets for the dinner theatre package are $15.95 for students and staff, $17.95 for the public. For tickets or more information, call the Harper Box Office at 197-3000, extension 2547.

'Birds of Passage' a memorable album

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

It's easy to detect influences of Dead Can Dance, Croquet Twiss, and Heavenly Bodies in the newest release from Norway's Bel Canto, and it's not just because of Anneli Marjan Drecker's voice—the music has the similarities as well. Birds of Passage, the second American release from Bel Canto, contains such songs as Dewey Fields and The Glassmaker, which sound just like Dead Can Dance, and the title track, which sounds like it could have come from the last Heavenly Bodies LP.

The great thing about all this is that even the songs that are similar to those other bands have their own distinctive "Bel Canto" feel to them. A good album is one that has many memorable moments, and this one has many...more than enough to avoid having it disappear into the murky nothingness where albums with no personality or distinctiveness end up.

Intravenous: A Shoulder To The Wheel, and Dewy Fields are the highest of the high points on the album. Intravenous details the agonized thoughts of a dying person being kept alive by machines, wanting nothing more than death. "Oh, what a trauma / release me from this coma / why won't they let me escape?" This is one album that often sounds deceptively happy when the lyrics are really quite intensely unhappy (but never angry).

Drucker's voice is very pleasant, not quaintly warbling like Bjork of the Sugarcubes, nor falsely affecting and overemotional like Sinead O'Connor, nor is it like the smiling bubble-gum squeal of any number of current top 40 singers. The rest of the band, whose other primary members are Geir Jenssen and Nils Johansen, play their instruments with remarkable proficiency. The instrument list gives you an idea of what the music might be like: keyboards, bouzouki, mandolin, flugelhorn, trumpet, violin, viola, cello, and clarinet co-exist comfortably on Birds of Passage with the drums, guitar and bass, which are all used sparingly.

The sound quality of this album is astoundingly clear and crisp, and it's the kind of music that demands such clarity. If you want a new disc with which to show off your CD player, look no further. You'll be getting more than just a show-off disc...you'll be getting a very special recording that you will want to listen to again and again.

Cajun flavor at Ice Cream Social

This spring's Ice Cream Social will have a decidedly Cajun flavor if the band playing has anything to say about it.

The Remainders, a five-member band which is carving a distinctive niche in the Chicago area, will play New Orleans, Tex-Mex, rock, folk and soul music in a free noontime concert on May 2.

Having performed as the opening act for such Louisiana-style musicians as Zachary Richard, Queen Ida, Doug Sham, and Buckwheat Zydeco, The Remainders will play their own renditions of Ho, Ho, Mardi Gras, Yours Truly and Colinda.

Bucky Halker, an assistant professor of history at North Central College in Naperville, writes original material, sings and plays guitar for the group. Other band members include Rich Parent, vocals, saxophone and rub-board; Gordon Patriarca on bass; Buddha Slim, accordion and keyboards; and Bob Schneider, drums and percussion.

If weather permits, the concert will be held on the patio outside Building A, where ice cream sundaes will be sold for 25

Concert Choir scheduled to perform

Whether you're a musician or just a music lover, you're in for a treat on Sunday, April 29 at 5:00 pm in Building A. Mark your calendars for the final concert of the Harper Concert Choir.

The concert will feature the combined talents of Thomas Stauch, director of the choir, and Maestro Vittorio Negri of Blonay, Switzerland. During the concert, Deixi Domine RV 595, the unpublished work of Antonio Vivaldi, will be performed for the first time in America. Five soloists, a mixed chorus and an orchestra perform the work which is based on the Latin text of Psalm 109.

Featured soloists in the concert include soprano Susan Dennis and Susan Lageson-Lundholm, mezzo-soprano Jo Rindenberg, tenor Willard Thomen, and baritone Mark Sundberg. Dennis, Lageson-Lundholm and Thomen are members of the Harper College voice faculty.

The second half of the program is highlighted by Magnificat in C by Franz Schubert. This selection illustrates Schubert's knowledge of baroque and classical traditions while including the melodic lyricism and harmonic color of the early romantic period.

Tickets for the concert are $5.00 and may be obtained from members of the concert choir, the Harper College Box Office or at the door on the day of the concert. For further information contact Thomas Stauch at 397-3000, extension 2566 or 2568.

Track teams enjoying success

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

"Wonderful" is how track & field coach Renee Zellner describes how both of her defending Region IV Champion men's and women's teams are doing as of late. And with good reason; each one of her top ten finishers set a personal record at Saturday's Whitewater Invite on the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater campus and at Friday's Cardinal Women's Classic at North Central College in Naperville.

At the Cardinal Classic, sophomore Pam Weider took second place in the 1500 meters with a time of 4:59.6, breaking her old personal record (set at the EIU Track meet April 14) by .04 tenths of a second. Also at the Classic, freshman Leanne Campo came in fifth in the 800 meters with a personal best of 2:10.7.

The next day, Weider added another personal record and came within four seconds of a return trip to nationals in the 3,000 meters with a fourth place finish (10:42.2). Sophomore Michelle Maxwell also came within range of a second national meet berth, falling 183 points shy with a total of 1,007 points in the heptathlon, putting her in fifth place. Maxwell added to that first place showing in the 200 meters with a time of 27.8 seconds.

For the men, three individuals highlighted the day for Harper. Sophomore Jerome Taylor took third in the 200 meters with a time 22.12 seconds. Freshman Mike Theodosakis placed eighth in the 400 meter hurdles coming in at 57.81 seconds. Freshman Jamie Barthele added to the Top Ten parade with a fifth place finish in the decathlon (4,605 pts.).

Next for both squads is the Elmhurst Invite, which will be held at East Field, 355 W. St. Charles Rd., Elmhurst, Saturday at 10:00 am.

Baseball team on winning streak

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

As Al Capone (Robert DeNiro) said in The Untouchables, "If somebody is gonna mess with me, I'm gonna mess with them." It is the 1990 Harper baseball team that is putting that philosophy into action.

After a double-header loss at Joliet April 3 (5-2 in game one, and 25-1 in game two) left them at 5-7, the Hawks won 12 of their last 17 games. They posted their record to 17-12 overall and 3-6 in N4C play. They completed conference play with a double bill at River Grove against 16-time defending N4C champ Triton on Tuesday, April 24, and a single game at home versus College of DuPage (last year's Region IV Runner-Up and currently ranked 10th nationally) Wednesday, April 25.

"I feel that we're doing well considering all of the circumstances," Rivke Head Coach Matt Royer said. "Sometimes it's been frustrating, but our goal is to be peak for the (Region IV) playoffs. Hopefully, the best is yet to come."

Probably the biggest highlights of their recent success have been a double-header split with defending sectional champion Oakton April 12th taking game one 9-3 while the second one 8-3; and a 9-1 slashing of College of Lake County (ranked #1 in Region IV, #14 in the NCAAA National Poll) on April 13.

"Everything is starting to come around; we're starting to play better as a team," freshman outfielder Sean McIntire said.

After completing their conference schedule, the Hawks will finish the regular season with a twin-bill at home Saturday against DePaul (1:00 starting time) and a solo contest Sunday versus Morton, beginning at noon. Their regular season finale will be a double-header in McIntire Monday at 1:00 pm.

Softball season one to remember

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

Regardless of how Harper's softball team does this season, it'll be one for Head Coach Martha Lynn Bolt to remember.

After a pair of tough losses at Triton last Tuesday 3-0 and 4-1, the Hawks found themselves holding the short end of the stick in a scheduled double bill at #10 DuPage Saturday.

First came the accidental cancellation of the team bus, which forced a delay of game to 12:30 pm from its originally scheduled time of noon. After the team found transportation and finally reached the field, the umpires ruled that since they arrived at 12:33 pm, game one was to be forfeited to DuPage. Despite heated protest from Bolt and Assistant Coach Julie Ellersson-Kuehn, the call stood.

"I couldn't believe it. Even the entire DuPage team and their Athletic Director (Herb Salberg) were in favor of us playing that game," Ellersson-Kuehn said.

"The whole thing was ridiculous," A formal appeal to the N4C and to the Region IV office is currently in the works.

With game one gone, the Hawks tried to come away with game two. Unfortunately, thanks in part to a pair of untimely fielding errors and only three hits on the offensive end, Harper lost by a count of 3-0.

However, the Hawks were able to rebound from Saturday's nightmare day with a double header sweep of South Suburban, taking game one 15-14 and game two 10-8. This moved their record on the year to 7-11-1 overall, 3-6-1 in N4C play.

The team will complete league action with a double bill against Illinois Valley at home Tuesday, April 24th. The squad will then travel to Elgin for a twin-bill Thursday afternoon, where they will encounter the team that knocked them out of post-season play last year.

Men's tennis disbanded

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

Harper College has been forced to disband its men's tennis team for the rest of the 1990 season because of a lack of eligible players.

"Several players were dropping classes, which in turn placed them below the 12 (credit) hour limit needed for eligibility to play," Athletic Director Roger Bechtold explained.

This left the team with only three members eligible to compete. Also, a final decision on whether the remainder of their schedule would be classified as a forfeit, or as if it were never scheduled, is pending.

"It's a sad situation that is always very difficult to handle," Bechtold said. "We'll just have to deal with it the best way possible."

Trustees ban smoking

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-Chief

The Board of Trustees passed a School Policy which will prohibit all indoor smoking at its meeting last Thursday. The revision of policy, which is the result of a recommendation by the Environmental Health and Safety and campus effect August, 1991.

Despite protests from members of the Harper's faculty and student body, the survey to determine opinion on a total ban of smoking inside campus buildings and college vehicles. The reported results of the survey indicated the majority of respondents favored a policy that would ban smoking and the use of tobacco inside college facilities and vehicles.

Both committees recommended the current policy be amended for implementation beginning the 1990 summer term during the February Board of Trustees meeting.

Harper's administration altered the recommendation to make the total ban interim period. Harper will restrict and more healthful environment, as well as offer help to students and staff who wish to stop smoking.

'The Diviners' opens

By Tari Vaughn
Editor-in-Chief

If you missed Harper College's The Diviners last weekend, don't miss your last chance on Friday and Saturday night.

The Diviners, a play by Jim Leonard Jr. focuses on the relationship of a fourteen-year-old boy, Buddy Layman and a preacher, C.C. Showers, who has left his ministry.

Layman witnessed his mother's drowning as a boy and almost died himself. The experience has left him disturbed and pitted. Because of his intense fear of water, Buddy can find water with a diving reel, or tell when rain is coming.

Showers, after becoming discouraged with the ministry, comes to Zion, Indiana for a new beginning.

Here, Showers and Buddy meet. Showers is drawn immediately to Buddy, and they become good friends. When he finds out Buddy suffers from ringworm, because of his refusal to wash, Showers' determination lays the groundwork for a compelling and emotional conclusion.

Harper's production of The Diviners is excellent. It is easy to follow and always interesting. The play is

College Bowl canceled

By Lisa Auld
Managing Editor

Harper skipped College Bowl this year.

Kevin Geiger, the advisor for College Bowl, explained that several factors are to

The organization had to buy buzzers and game packets, thus depleting their funds for actual game playing. Geiger also knew he would be unavailable to travel with the team to regional. So the decision was made not to attempt a Bowl this year.

The organization was allocated $925 by Student Activities, while $875 was spent. The $50 will be carried over to next year. In addition, Geiger also receives money from the school every two weeks for being the advisor.

Geiger said, "We had to keep borrowing equipment, which got expensive after a while."

The organization plans on spending another $600 for game packets next year. Jean Parkinson, Director of Student Activities, said, "At least they'll be in shape for next year."

Mountain Man to speak

By Lisa Auld
Managing Editor

One of the last mountain men will be speaking tonight at Harper in E106 at 7 pm.

Lou Gold is generally regarded as a unique and dynamic spokesperson for the forests of North America. He comes down from the mountains during the winter months to share his learning with others.

Gold has a farm back ground in teaching. He is a native of Chicago, a graduate of MIT and has taught at Oberlin College and the University of Illinois. He gave up his career, and sense, to find "the kind of learning that flows from the world."

While visiting a friend in Oregon, he fell in love with the Sixtyfour Forest. He has since fought atop Bald Mountain to save the region's 700,000 acres from the ax.

It is estimated that at the present rate of logging, the nation's virgin timber will be decimated in less than 30 years.

Gold lectures to urban audiences from about the autumnal equinox to shortly before the summer solstice. It has become his mission in life to save "his mountain."

Gold said, "I began in the city, but actually, the city was not really my starting place. The wilderness is where we came from."

He continues, "Beats don't write letters and they don't vote."

Long Distance Love; help is on the way

By Ailsa Chisholm
Assistant Managing Editor

College students don't have to deal with their diseases or disabilities alone, thanks to a special support service developed by 19-year-old Rutgers University student Roxanne Black.

Black was diagnosed with the disease systemic lupus erythematosus — the severe form of lupus which causes skin lesions and damages vital organs — at the age of fourteen.

The disease changed Black's life. "I went from a prominent position in my high school's crew team to a wheelchair in a hospital," said Black.

While Black was undergoing treatment — which included taking medication that made her face puffy and her hair fall out — she longed for a buddy with lupus, her own age, to talk to.

Out of that desire Long Distance Love (LDL) College Network was born. Black created LDL as a service where college students could seek support, learn more about their illness or disability, and compare notes. It is not a dating service. LDL is a free service that matches students with the same malady according to age, residence, and interest.

"I truly believe there is a need for a service like Long Distance Love," said Black. "No one should have to fight alone, not when there are others who are familiar with the struggle."

Doctors, nurses, relatives, and friends try to understand the problem. However, it's very difficult to relate to the patient's feelings unless you've had similar experiences.

Doubtful Student Senator and Student Trustee Michael Trippodi supports the program. "Long Distance Love is an excellent way to meet others that have the same malady. It lets sufferers of a specific illness know they're not alone," said Trippodi.

People can learn about a disability by reading literature or talking to qualified professionals. Family members may be able to relate to the patient because they live with him or her. LDL goes beyond research and caring by providing a link to a special friend who knows what you're going through.

"It is important to have someone who supports and understands the feelings and fears associated with the disease," said Trippodi. "A Long Distance Love 'buddy' would provide that."

LDL operates out of Black's dorm room. Students who want to participate in the LDL program need to fill out a questionnaire about their medical history and interests.

After receiving the questionnaire, Black uses her computerized file to find each student a buddy. Black contacts support groups and foundations to find a buddy if none are found in her files. She also can link parents of respondents together for support.

LDL has more than a thousand members and is continuing to expand. "Many participants write back with stories of how the service has provided them with emotional support and a renewed hope in the future," said Black.

Students interested in participating can write to Long Distance Love College Network, Box 2301, Venner, New Jersey, 08406.

Rhythm and Moves Dance Company stages benefits

By Alicia Chisholm
Assistant Managing Editor

A dancer moves his or her body and feet rhythmically to the beat of the music. Each dancer has a different style and background, but all share the desire to perform. Out of that desire, Fritz Holmes and Julie Gentry formed the Rhythm and Moves Dance Company in 1981 to give Harper students and community members a chance to choreograph and perform.

Auditions are held in the fall and spring for Rhythm and Moves. All dancers are taught dance sequences and judged on basic moves. The selected dancers sign up for the classroom portions of Rhythm and Moves, Dance Performance LPP 011-001, through the continuing education department.

Members of the company are Shannon Diesel, Jennifer Koepf, Lynda Karowski, and Vicky Neczkowski. Arlington Heights, Kimberly Gault, Buffalo Grove, Sam Manar, Chicago; Julie Gault, Des Plaines; Melissa Gallenbach and Kerry Givinski, Elk Grove Village; Karyn O'Hara, Mt. Prospect; Tammy Lutsch, Bryn Mawr; and Renee Urban, Palatine; Christa E. Weillhausen, Rolling Meadows; and Jennifer Van Doye, Schaumburg. The group's advisor is Fritz Holmes of South Barrington.

Theoretically, Rhythm and Moves is a dance company, a non-educational and club. Director Fritz Holmes, and his officers—President Kimberly Gault, Vice President Tammy Lutsch and Secretary Trease Vicky Neczkowski—help the dancers learn the routines performed in the winter and spring shows.

Classes conducted every Friday from 10 am to 12 pm in M250. During the five period, dancers have time to stretch their muscles and practice loops, kicks and short dance combinations across the floor to increase endurance and prevent injury.

Each dancer is encouraged to choreograph a piece. At the beginning of each semester, any member may audition as a choreographer. The choreographer can choose the dance style: ballet, jazz, modern, tap and novelty; the music; and the movements. The officers decide which dances to include in the show. Company members can audition for any dance they'd like to perform. Rehearsals are held on Fridays from 12 pm to 3:30 pm and other times selected by the choreographer.

The choreographer's job is not easy. "The choreographer creates a concept and chooses the music, movements and (time) phrase to complement it," said Christa E. Weillhausen.

Music is chosen to reflect the idea of the work, to complement it. "We select music that is different, eye-catching and keeps the audience interested," said Vicky Neczkowski. "We do use top ten pop hits. We want the audience to watch the dancers from beginning to end. The music and dance steps should all be one."

The choreographers have the difficult job of teaching their style and movements to the dancers. Some of the choreographers' responsibilities include placement of dancers and type of movements and other exercises. Weillhausen is a volunteer as a learning experience. "No one is as critical of themselves than themselves," said Weillhausen. "The videotape gives the dancers a chance to critique themselves, call it other and the choreographer."

The Rhythm and Moves dancers practice for many hours on each piece to convey the choreographer's intent to the audience. They also choreograph their own costumes, lighting and props needed to complement their dances.

This spring the Rhythm and Moves Dance Company will stage two shows at Harper College on Friday and Saturday, May 18 and 19, at 7:30 pm in J143.

During the show, the dancers will perform tap, ballet, modern, jazz and unique numbers such as "Ratty Day Sane," "Motley cycles," "Body," "The Price," "Rock On" and "Funky African." Guest male dancers will accompany members for a tap number.

One dollar from each ticket sold will benefit former Harper student Keith Baker, who was seriously injured last year in a car accident.

"I know Keith from Explorers, an oddyssey of Bryn Givinski," said Neczkowski. "We've been best friends for six years. It's important for me to help his family any way I can. He needs help—financial help, especially—so he can come home to his family and friends."

Tickets for the performance are $5 for general admission and $3 for Harper students and service citizens. For tickets and information, call the Harper Box Office at (708) 397-3800, extension 2547.

Professor finds her labor of love

By Phyllis Benum
Staff Writer

When Dr. Cathy Albergo was a little girl, her mother made her take dance lessons. But when Albergo saw her instructor's mother playing the piano and what keys of a piano she knew she found what she wanted to do.

Now, as an associate professor of music at Harper and director of the Harper Music Academy program, Albergo brings her passion for keyboards to a nation-wide audience through a new magazine entitled "Keyboard Companion, A Practical Magazine on Early-Level Piano Study."

"Keyboard Companion" was developed specifically for beginning students through the intermediate levels, their teachers and parents. One main focus of the magazine is getting the parents and teachers actively involved in the study of the student.

"Keyboard Companion" is written and published exclusively by music educators. Ten departments deal with the different aspects of music: including reading, rhythm, adult study and motivation. "Each department has its own editor," said Albergo, "and each department has the authority to make its own decisions about the issues addressed in the magazine."

The editors were hand-picked. They reflect a very high level of education. We were pleased that every person that we asked to participate said yes. We got the people we wanted."

Albergo, in addition to her position of subscription manager, is the editor of "The Magic Triangle," a department that deals with the direct relationship between parents, teachers and students. "These three parts are the key to successful music study," she said.

Departments each ask and answer a question, such as, "What is the Parent's Role?" and "How Important is Home Practice?" The editors then find a sampling of parents, teachers and students and develop the answers into constructive information.

"The response was tremendous," she said. "The teachers were extremely excited. People approached us about the magazine."

A major development in the interest of the Frederick Harris Music Company of Canada,

As a music publishing company, it is looking to expand to the United States. The firm is offering 5,000 free books to 50,000 musicians who subscribe to "Keyboard Companion."

"We, of course, accepted the offer. It's an important boost for us," Albergo said. A year in the making, the development of "Keyboard Companion" asked Albergo, her husband and their partners Richard and Wayne Chmura of California. "The most difficult part," she said, "was having to choose the details, like graphics, paper quality, print size and layout. Maybe compared to us, giving birth. She called it nine months of hard labor. It took a full year to get up and going and we're still making changes. But the second year should be easier."

"Considering we are novices at this," she said, "I think we did a good job. We can only improve after this."

Subscriptions are $14.95 for one year or $25.95 for two. Gift and group rates are also available by calling 1-800-824-5087.

Albergo is finding herself in a time crunch these days. In addition to teaching full time, her directorship of the music academy and the publication, she is also the conference coordinator of the National Conference of Piano Pedagogy this October at the Hyatt Regency Woodfield in Schaumburg. But she really doesn't mind.

"It is a labor of love," she said. "I've reached a point I've had all my life, so help teachers. You find time for a labor of love."

No passengers on board, this taxi does carryout

By Laura Laskowski
Staff Writer

Are you sitting at home reamped with homework and suddenly getting the hunger pangs? Or are you not feeling well but want something to eat? Well, we have the service for you. It is called Taxi Carryout. Dave Hill and Patrick Scales are partners in this booming business. Josh Jendryka is Vice President of this great delivery service.

Taxi Carryout is a delivering service that delivers restaurant food to homes and businesses at lunch time. The two main restaurants that sponsor this business are Gricanille, an Italian restaurant located on Golf Road and Shinghai, a Chinese restaurant located off of Higgins Road in Barrington Square. They serve approximately 15-20 people and/or businesses. Hill and Scales both attend Harper College and are business majors. They chose to start their business here in Schaumburg because Schaumburg is growing so rapidly. They wanted to put their major in practice and experience the ups and downs of the business world.

"We want to get people to use the service to get homework done and study for finals," said Hill. Hill would also like to thank Mr. Davis, Mr. Seok, his mom and especially God.

"We would like to achieve something and start a new trend in the Schaumburg area. We believe that this investment is a no loss situation," stated Scales.

They are off to a great start! Right now Taxi Carryout is only open during lunch hours, 10:30 am to 3 pm. If you want efficient and prompt delivery you must call ahead at 382-6096. "We go out when you don't want to" is their motto. Keep up the good work, guys.

Once more to the breach McDuff I was fortunate(?) to attend the Board Meeting last week, and the decision was made to make Harper a non-smoking campus by August of 1991.

There was a slight reprieve from their original proposal, for next year there is supposed to be a smoking area in a list of the buildings that currently have smoking areas now, but that is only temporary.

One thing I found out when I went to MIG that I haven't mentioned before concerns the Illinois Indoor Clean Air Environment Act of 1989. According to the law that passed late last year, any public facility that goes non-smoking must have a smoking area. Harper receives most of its funds through the State. That makes Harper a public facility. When this was brought to the board's attention, we were told that their legal counsel had looked over the new policy and it was okay-dirty with him.

I have a question though. What if he's wrong? I mean no disrespect to the board or to their legal counsel, but what if he's wrong?

Their policy for next year is fine, from what I heard it was a clause of logic in a desert of fatality. But what happens if he's wrong?

After next year Harper would then be enforcing a policy that is breaking the law. Would not the state then have the authority and even the responsibility to hold back funds? I say responsibility because anyone or anything that hold themselves above the law must be taught that they are not for as long as they are in contempt of that law.

Even if he's right, is he right enough to keep it out of court? This issue could easily end up in a court battle, at least by the looks of both sides of this issue. Can Harper afford that? If this issue goes in either direction (and once that path is started upon I don't see either side giving up easily) it could mean the destruction of Harper. To either lose or to desert funds would mean a possible freeze on teacher salaries, loss of certain athletic programs, loss of funds for the Program Board. Disabled Student Services, the library, etc. Can Harper afford that?

Oh well, this lunch is no longer mine to bear. After this semester I'm Northeastern's problem. If I was returning, I would do my best to graduate by August of '91. I would want to make sure that I graduated by an accredited school.

One final thing about the board meeting. If anyone had any doubts about the capabilities of our new Student Trustee Mike Trippick, relax. He represented the students very well. He may be hearing impaired, but he heard better than most of the board members.

Null serious stuff. How bout this here Spring Flung? Just what are we flungin' any way? Will we have a spring this year to fling? Anyway, in keeping with my policy of taking everything I can from school, I will be there. Maybe it is a little high schoolish as some would claim. I have enough responsibilities now to deserve time to play.

Life is too serious to take seriously.

1989-90 Overheard...

"I love looking at baby geese...I can see the dinosaurs in them."

"Did you see the thickness of that guy's glasses? He should be able to see the future with those glasses."

"You just want to grab her and strangle her until she turns blue in the face."

"It's like using a sledgehammer to put a thumbtack into the wall."

"Point of Bullshit."

The Annual Student Awards Banquet will be held this Friday night. Unfortunately, the awards that people really deserve won't be given out.

The envelope please, here are the recipients of the 1989-90 Binger Awards.

The Loose Lips Sink Ships Award And the winner is...Jim Cabaj. If this time-worn adage is true, Jim sunk the Titanic this year.

The Cross Campus Dash Award goes to John Eslabee. John spent about 25% of his time running from Building A (where he was Senate President) to Building J (where he was Formulaire President). Oh, that was John? We thought it was Haley's Comet.

The Friendliest Club Award is given to the Muslim Students' Association. We're not kidding. We've only met two members of this club, but it seems they all know who we are.

The Best Student Trustee Award goes to Darlene Iverson. Okay, so this is kind of a narrow category, but we didn't see how we could get away with not mentioning her.

The Delusions of Grandeur Award goes to Program Board for the almost-ignored, but highly-hyped 'Eat Me Night'.

Program Board also gets the Spring Fever Award for failing to maintain even a passing grade for general motivation during the spring semester (as a club).

The You Can Lead a Horse to Water... Award goes to PALS and BACCHUS for trying to push themselves on anyone and everyone on campus.

The Rodney Dangerfield Award goes to WHCM because they "don't get no respect." No matter what they play, someone is always complaining.

The Most Deserving of a Copy of Robert's Rules of Order Award winner is Board of Trustees President Barbara Burton. She really needs to brush up on her Parliamentary Procedure.

The Me and My Shadow Award goes to Ed Wallace and Anthony Garcia. Is it true that they share one brain? No, no that's Danthony.

The Most Obscure Award goes to the only person who came to ask us why the final Elitask story didn't quite make sense. (The story was accidentally switched around in layout, so it didn't make any sense when it appeared in that issue.)

The Madonna Wannabe Award for being generally over-rated and over-publicized goes to the smoking issue.

The Best Attempt at Propaganda Award goes to the cafeteria for the literature enjoying the virtual idyllic atmosphere for the environment. (Never mind the CFC's, nobody will miss the window layer.)

The It's Time to Update the Files Award is presented to everyone who keeps sending us press releases addressed to old staff members or people we've never heard of (e.g. Scott Neidl, Nick Opals, Pearl Henderson). Look at the stuff box and get a clue.

The Women on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown Award goes to us for having to deal with the apathetic, the offended, and the just plain annoying all year.

State of the Earth

By Fayette Fabron
Staff Writer

We need a new energy plan, and we need it now. Our current wasteful and inefficient use of fuel will lead us into disaster both economically and environmentally. U.S. consumption of energy is increasing, yet U.S. production is decreasing.

As we are running out of domestic sources of fossil fuels, our dependence on foreign import is increasing. It is not wise to let foreign countries gain this kind of control over us. It puts us in a position of instability. Remember when the war with Iran caused a big drop in our oil supply and sent prices soaring?

Yet the answer to our problem is not to deplete every last source of domestic fossil fuels to avoid foreign dependency, but to be more efficient in our production and use of energy. Our efficiency in production is definitely lacking.

According to Thomas A. Lewis, author of the article "The Heat Is On" from the magazine National Wildlife, with the same amount of energy the U.S. uses to produce $91 worth of goods, Sweden can produce $110 worth, France can produce $232 worth, and Japan can produce $178 worth.

Obviously, there is room for improvement on our part. We also need to concentrate on methods of conservation and developing options in renewable resources.

Most importantly, we must consider the environment. The consumption of fossil fuels is a major cause of urban smog, global warming and acid rain.

According to National Wildlife President Jay D. Har, "We have 10 years—15 at most—to completely change the way we do business, or the basic life support systems of the planet are going to break down. I don't mean 10 to 15 years to discuss what we're going to do, but to get it done."

Fortunately, U.S. Secretary of Energy James D. Watkins is working on a new plan. He told the Senate Energy Committee, "I intend to supervise the immediate development of a sound national energy policy, coupled with an integrated strategy to carry out that policy."

His intentions seem sincere. His initial efforts include collecting information and opinions from across the country by way of public hearings and use of a computer program called "The National Energy Modeling System" that predicts possible outcomes of a change in energy prices or supplies.

He is determined to "craft an action plan that will reconcile our energy requirements and our desire for a safe and healthy environment." Let's wish him luck.

Guest Opinions

As the 89-90 school year draws to a close, students of government and political science at Harper College can look to an object lesson in the tyranny of the Minority, or for want of a better term, fascist power politics. For such is a history of the anti-smoking initiative adopted as Harper policy by the Board of Trustees at the April 26, 1990 Board meeting.

To September of 1989, two school-wide committees, the Environmental Health and Safety Committee and the Wellness Committee, comprised entirely of non-smoking Harper employees, many of whom are hard-line anti-smokers, decide it would be good for Harper College to impose a total ban on smoking indoors.

September, 1989: the college's Research Office conducts a survey on this complex issue, which offers respondents a Hobson's Choice (either or fallacy) of banning or not banning all indoor smoking.

November, 1989: The Committee on Fairness to Smokers, having requested, at the direction of President Thompson, line on the agenda of a regular meeting of the Environmental Health and Safety Committee, meets with a group purporting to be the committee. In fact, they are a small group consisting of the most militant anti-smokers of both the Wellness and EHS Committees. The Fairness to Smokers personnel present their evidence, which is met with patronizing and self-righteous responses.

December, 1989: The chair of the Fairness to Smokers committee requests a copy of the minutes of the meeting with intent to publish them for the greater Harper Community. Several weeks later, a response is received from Mr. John Gekko, who informs me that he is the current chair of the EHS Committee, but was out of town at the time of the meeting, and that no minutes of the meeting exist (despite assurances that minutes were being taken) as there was not even a quorum present.

February, 1990: the administration presents to the Board of Trustees the recommendation of the EHS and Wellness Committees to prohibit all indoor smoking at Harper in August of 1990. The Board presents the measure on its agenda as follows: "First Reading/Revision of Current Smoking Policy; Second Reading and adoption at March 8, 1990 Board Meeting." A vote is taken. During the discussion, several members of the Board expressed a willingness to seek a compromise that would satisfy the concerns of smokers and non-smokers. At the request of the Faculty Senate President, the issue was deferred to the April meeting of the Board.

April 26, 1990: after hearing, further opposition to the total smoking ban, the Board casts votes 4-3 to adopt it in August of 1991, the deciding vote having been cast by Board Member Peter Jakala, a former member of the college administration sponsoring the measure, who was not even elected to the Harper Board of Trustees, but rather was appointed to fill a vacancy. Imagine if you can, this crucial matter being decided by a non-elected official, while the duly elected Student Trustee's impassioned plea against it was ignored. Thus, this Puritanical measure, which inflect great suffering upon inveterate smokers, is to become official Board policy.

These cheers for democracy!

Larry P. Kent
Chair, Ad Hoc Committee on Fairness to Smokers

Dear Mr. Vaughn:

I would like to take this opportunity to point out a number of inaccuracies in your editorial of April 26 concerning the issue of smoking on campus.

1. You write of "completely banning smoking." In fact, the new smoking policy allows smoking outside of campus buildings and college vehicles.

2. You state that there are no smokers on either the Environmental Health and Safety Committee or the Institutional Wellness Committee. In fact, there is at least one member of the Environmental Health and Safety Committee who smokes.

3. You state that the Environmental Health and Safety Committee and the Institutional Wellness Committee are "they creating their next massive summer survey." This implies that the survey was never taken or was conducted in some evasive fashion. In fact, the smoking survey was done in the fall. It was not "created," it was compiled from the results received from faculty, staff and students. The results of the survey were given to the Harper College Board during the February 22 meeting, which you attended. A little diligent research on your part could probably have put you in possession of a copy.

4. You state that the Environmental Health and Safety Committee and the Institutional Wellness Committee "claim that, since the non-smokers are the majority, their rights should be upheld at the expense of smokers' rights." In fact, I think the major concern of both committees was the health risks of environmental tobacco smoke, not whether majority of people on campus smoke or do not smoke.

5. You state that when the Committee for Smoker's Rights "attempted to include their side to the others (the Environmental Health and Safety Committee), the meeting was canceled due to lack of a quorum, and a rescheduling was refused. The smokers were, again, denied their day."

In fact, when the Environmental Health and Safety Committee met with the Committee for Smoker's Rights, a quorum of the Environmental Health and Safety Committee was not present, and the Committee for Smoker's Rights agreed to present their side of the issue to the members who were present. They did so, at great length. Their arguments, as well as a paper they presented, were presented and discussed during the next meeting of the Environmental Health and Safety Committee. There was never any refusal to reschedule a meeting.

6. You state that the "Environmental Health and Safety Committee cannot regularly call a meeting democratically." In fact, all sides of this issue were considered and debated in detail. The decision to recommend to the Harper College Board that smoking be banned in campus buildings and college vehicles was voted on at a joint meeting of the Environmental Health and Safety Committee and the Institutional Wellness Committee, and passed unanimously.

I believe that a responsible newspaper would check the facts in order to present a balanced report, and even the issuance of an editorial demands that the truth be the basis of the argument. This lack of professionalism reflects poorly on the journalism program at Harper and the Harbinger. You suggest that the Environmental Health and Safety Committee and the Institutional Wellness Committee need to work on reasoning. That, Mr. Vaughn, is precisely what you should be doing before you write a story or an editorial. The Harper community deserves better from an Editor-in-Chief.

It seems Mr. Anderson needs to check his facts, too. I would like to point out that the Harbinger is in no way connected with the Journalism Program at Harper. TV

'RevCo's 'Beers, Steers + Queers' worth the wait

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

After a huge delay of almost a year, the latest album by Revolting Cocks is finally available. The Cocks, more tamely referred to as RevCo, ran into serious problems with the original planned release last summer.

The new LP, called Beers, Steers + Queers, originally contained a cover of Olivia Newton-John's Let's Get Physical. The music was radically different in typical RevCo industrial style, but the lyrics were the same. Newton-John, however, had not given permission to use the song, so the album could not be released in the same form as the first test pressing.

The problem was compounded by the fact that Wax Trax had already printed hundreds of thousands of sleeves with the title Let's Get Physical listed as one of the tracks. To save the cost of having to scrap the sleeves and reprint them, the Cocks re-recorded the song with the same music but with new lyrics. The new version of Physical is inferior to the one with the Newton-John lyrics, but it doesn't matter much because the song is one of the weaker tracks on the album.

The Cocks are what could be termed an "industrial supergroup" made up of Alan Journeymen and Paul Barker of Ministry, Bill Kefflin, and now Nick Opre of 242 was once a member but dropped out after a disagreement with Journeymen. The name comes from a group of Cockney rebels who staged a revolt hundreds of years ago.

The music is a little tamer than the last Ministry offering, favoring a more light-hearted approach from the beginning. The title track is a "spi in the face" of rap music, driven almost entirely by hugely noise-distorted drums. It's a decent song but it gets old fast. The following track is the new version of Physical (the original version is available in a hard-to-find limited test pressing).

In the New-A song by Chris Connolly, is the quadro version of the same song that appeared on the Cocks' live album. The live version is marginally superior.

Following In the Neck is the first RevCo song to feature Opre on vocals, entitled Get Down. It's a scintillating song about a bad trip (as in drugs) that actually captures the feel of such a violently horrible experience. Nobody is better suited to shrieking "I'm tripping again!" in a cocky voice than Opre, whose vocal by now, the guitar work on this song is perhaps the most impressive to date from this group of musicians in any of their guises.

Side two begins with the year-old single Slaughtered Steel Provender, followed by three new songs. Can't Sit Still, Something Wonderful, and Racer's Edge. Aside from Get Down, Something Wonderful is the outstanding cut on the album. It's my guess that this song is the prototype for Ministry's So What. The title is taken from the sample of dialogue lifted from the film 1010 that is repeated throughout the last dance track.

Can't Sit Still and Racer's Edge are somewhat disappointing, more like throwaway songs than anything else. A much better song is At the Top, the B-side of the Stankies. Steel Provender single. The final count is two old and good songs, two recent okay songs, and four new tracks, only two of which are significantly memorable. It could be better considering the long wait for the album, but overall it was worth the wait.

Rating out of 5: ****

Also new from Wax Trax is Paul Barker's side project known as Lead Into Gold. After waiting a year for the first Lead Into Gold single to be released on compact disc, there are cassettes available at last. The CD includes all three of last year's tracks (co-written with Al Journeymen) plus three excellent new tracks written solely by Barker. The title of the disc is Chicks and Speed. Faurism.

Local rockers 'Menagerie' show potential

By Eric Isom
Staff Writer

Local rockers Menagerie, who have been playing locally for over a year, have released their debut EP Win, Place, or Show. The four-song EP defines Menagerie's style of home-brewed rock very well. Songs like Hard Life and Something In Your Eyes have a lot of energy and are very consistent. Menagerie's sound is lightly influenced by Scorpions and Turkmen. This can be heard, especially in Win, Place, or Show, which is the best the EP has to offer.

What makes Menagerie's sound work is the combination of Harper's own Rick Spinnato on guitar and singer Ray Hagan on vocals. Hagan's strong voice work well together all the way through, especially on Hard Life. Besides the strong vocals and guitar, Menagerie has solid rhythm playing that is provided by drummer Eric Benish and bassist Greg Watson (who help keep the songs together).

Win, Place, or Show is a mixed EP that shows that Menagerie has a lot of potential to be a major name in the Chicago scene. Their demo is being currently played on WVVX and (4-Force 1190), but if you want your own copy you can get it through Rolling Stone Records and Beyond the Limit. When checking out Menagerie live, its best to expect all originals on their set. You can check them out at the Thirsty Whale Music + Stay Out West June 29.

successful because Director Todd Ballantyne has kept it simple, focusing on the development of characters instead of elaborate technical aspects.

The sets are simple, using only props, small set pieces, and locations on the stage to suggest the location of scenes. There are no elaborate sound effects, only the bare essentials (like the sound of rain). The show's lighting changes from time to time to enhance the mood of the show but does so subtly, it is barely noticeable.

Buddy is played by Dwight Powell. Powell does an amazing job not only portraying, but becoming a very disturbed boy. He does an excellent job maintaining the energy and concentration this part demands.

E.J. Sutton is a wonderfully complimentary to Powell's talent. He provides a sensitive, endearing C.C. Showers. He obviously provides the backbone and continuity of the story.

Also deserving of special mention is Lisa Marie Razzano, who plays Buddy's sister, Jennie. May Layman. She was fresh, sincere, and genuinely caring.

As in any production, however, it would not be complete without the efforts of the entire cast. It was obvious Ballantyne and the cast spent numerous hours making each character unique and well motivated. Other excellent performances were provided by James D. Cunningham (Ferry Layman), Jennifer Denise Peters (Goldie Short), Julie Munck (Norma Hewshaw), Duane Squares (Darlene Hewshaw), Michael Ulrich (Igor Bennett), Michelle Praxan (Lucia Bennett), Bruce Stone (Melvin Wilder), and Matt Helton (Dewey Maple).

Generally, I felt that Harper Theatre Department has done a wonderful job with The Diviners. In fact, I can't think of a single bad thing to say about this performance (even to lend myself credibility, if for no other reason).

There is still a chance to catch The Diviners. Performances are Friday and Saturday nights at 8 pm in the Building I Theatre. Tickets are $5 for Harper students and staff and $5 for the public. For tickets or more information, contact the Harper Box Office at ext. 2547.

'Q & A': same story, new show

By Michael Schweishelmer
Harbinger Movie Critic

There have been an almost infinite number of police detective-murder mystery movies. The last thing that the film industry needs is another one. Unfortunately, Tri-Star pictures released the film Q & A.

The movie has such a bad story that it completely wastes the talents of its stars: Nick Nolte, Timothy Hutton, and Armand Assante. The three leading men did give solid performances, as you would expect, but the story just didn't take them anywhere.

The plot of the story is a highly respected cop (Nick Nolte) has killed a hood in self-defense. Timothy Hutton plays the naive district attorney who has been assigned to the case. During the questioning, a statement made by Bobby Traylor (Armand Assante) that makes it unclear as to Nolte's innocence in the shooting. The story winds through lines of corruption and scandal, coverups and politicians. It all becomes quite ridiculous, especially because in the first scene of the film we see Nolte murdering the guy and did not shoot in self-defense.

The film seemed to be trying to make some horrifying point that the system is not working. I think this is already a fairly well known fact, and this film doesn't even shed any new light on the matter. The screenplay, written by Director Sidney Lumet, was based on a novel by ex-New York State Supreme Court Judge Edwin Torres. This leads me to believe that the film might have been based on fact and not fiction. The only problem with that is that sometimes real life does not make a good film.

The movie came off as a typical cops and robbers movie with the modern day symbols of the drug dealer and the good and bad cops. The only thing different in this movie was everyone had been on the take at some point during their careers.

The technical aspects of the film were about as impressive as the rest of the piece—not much at all. There were only two shots which actually stood out. The rest of the camera work was fairly dull and mundane.

A better picture would have been expected from names like Nolte and Hutton, but what resulted was a disappointing picture checked full of racial slurs and corruption. This film is not worth the time or money to see. It's all been done before, and it's really no different this time.

Rating: ★ 1/2 out of 4 stars

Hawks baseball on winning streak Team wins last five games going into sectional play

By Lou Nunez
Guest Writer

Warning! Beware of the Hovering Hawk, for it may capture big prey at tournament time.

Buoyed by a five-game winning streak, Harper's baseball team (24-15) prepares to face Oskoson Saturday in sectional play at Lake County.

Included in the streak was a 9-5 win over Morton, rated third in the Region IV poll, Sunday and a pair of 11-1 thrashings over DePaul Saturday, all of which took place on the friendly confines of the Harper diamond.

"We'd still like to squeeze in a couple of more games," Head Coach Matt Royer said. "We re-scheduled Aurora IV's for Thursday and maybe we can get up a Tuesday or Wednesday game to get ourselves in the swing of things."

Sectional play continues through Monday with the winner advancing to next weekend's Region IV Semi-Finals at Kaukaune.

Track team fares well

By John Brinckerhoff
Staff Writer

The Harper Hawks Track Team corralled a number of place finishes Saturday at Butler University.

In the 100 meters, Jerome Taylor placed third with a time of 10.9 seconds. Then, Taylor took fifth in the 200 meters with a 22.4 time.

Scott Melzer gained a personal record in the hammer throw with a 97 ft. 3 in. throw, good enough to gain seventh place.

For the women, Michelle Maxwell ran another tough time in the 400 meter hurdles. She finished in 69.9 seconds to place third and notch a personal record.

Pam Weider ran the 3000 meters in 11:04 to place second and finish off a successful meet for the men and women Hawks.

Monday, April 30 and Tuesday, May 1, the heptathlon and decathlon were conducted respectively.

The Region IV meet, which the Hawks have dominated in recent years, will be held at Harper Friday and Saturday of this week.

"When we show up, we can play with the best of them."

It is that thought that drives Softball Coach Martha Lynn Bolt and her squad into the NJCAA Region IV Tournament at Lake County Saturday (12 noon starting time) after completing the regular season 8-11-2 overall and 4-7-1 in N4C play.

But another thought also comes to mind, the fact that the Hawks will have an 8-day layoff between Saturday's contest and their R-4 loss to DuPage in Friday's regular season finale, a thought the coach welcomes with open arms.

"We'll have time to rest and hopefully get some people back from injuries," Bolt said.

Highlighting the team's injury woes are Kori Bond and Laura Jarman, who both were in need of stitches (as of Monday) when they were hurt in Friday's game, and Karen Larson who has been sidelined indefinitely with knee problems.

"She (Larson) will probably be out the rest of the season because the doctor won't even allow her to twist her knee at all," the coach said.

With this year's play-offs, a new format will begin that ends the double-elimination format until the Semi-Final round next weekend.

A win Saturday will send them to Tuesday's quarterfinal round against the winner of the Morton Kaukaune game, which will also be played Saturday.

Class Gift

By Lisa And
Managing Editor

Each year there is money left over from the student activities fees. This money is traditionally given away as the class gift. The $17,700 gift will go toward WHCM's conversion to FM.

Student Schuck has proposed the gift of $5 to $6 thousand go toward a new sound board, which is necessary for the FM conversion. The exact amount of the gift should be determined by Friday once the budget surplus is known.

It is not certain that WHCM will even go on the air, according to WHCM advisor Tom Schuck.

The school is currently conducting a feasibility study to determine if it is physically possible to have another station on the air in the Northwest suburbs. Schuck explained that stations must be a specified number of miles apart. There are also several college and high school stations with strong signals, thus eliminating possibilities.

However, Schuck is optimistic a spot will be open. Schuck said, "It's not time to get hyped yet. We're still about a month away from excitement."

If WHCM does not go on the air, they will still use the money to replace their sound board. Their present sound board, the class gift of 1980, is ten years old. It has a life expectancy of only five to seven years.

Senate Class Gift Subcommittee Chair Person Kathleen Munson said, "Students have been in support of WHCM for a long time and we think this will benefit everyone."

Student wants life

"My blindness makes me a good listener," commented Harper student Mike Zuker, a volunteer at Elk Grove's Talkline. "When other disabled persons call in distress over their difficulties, I quickly let them know that I do understand the burden they face with their families and with regularity adjusting to a different pace of life."

Zuker began working on Talkline in March of 1987, soon after diabetes destroyed his sight. He says he volunteered to prove to himself that he could still be a useful member of society. "For the first two years, he worked double shifts."

While blindness requires finding weekly transportation to and from Talkline, Mike's commitment has already kept him there four times longer than the average volunteer stays. Recently, Zuker received one of Elk Grove's three Volunteer Recognition Awards for his work at Talkline.

Aside from his Talkline duties, Zuker maintains a 4.0 grade point average at Harper and is a member of Phi Theta Kappa and the Honor Society. Soon, he will receive a degree in counseling and intends to obtain a graduate degree in social work.

However, despite all his work helping others, Zuker now faces his own crisis. Without an expensive organ transplant operation to replace the diseased and malfunctioning pancreas which has already taken his vision, Zuker faces a slow but certain death. He has recently been placed on the urgent transplant list at the University of Chicago hospital.

Zuker must now raise the $25,000 required for the transplant operation and an estimated additional $160,000 for the supply of anti-rejection medication which he will need for his lifetime.

Zuker's coverage under the Illinois Comprehensive Health Insurance Plan for hard-to-insure people won't help him with the necessary $25,000, saying the surgery is "experimental."

To raise the money, Zuker must rely, instead, on other citizens he has faithfully met and helped through the Talkline network.

Zuker commented in a recent Daily Herald interview. "They will pay if I have a heart attack from diabetes, but they won't pay for the one thing that could actually save them money. It makes you want to scream because a just doesn't make sense."

Even if Zuker can raise the Harbinger advice: Jon Osman has been trying to get a story on Well Six on this paper for several years now. Since this is the last issue of the year, we thought we'd do it for him.

This story is dedicated to Jon Osman from Lisa Aust, Marc, Balke and myself. I thought, since it's for him, for once I'd take his advice and keep it as concise as possible.

This is Well Six.
It's a well.
We assume it's the sixth one.
We have no idea where well one through five are.

Well 6 is not your ordinary well, it has its very own sign. Most wells don't have their own sign, this just goes to show you just how special it is.

Fashion extravaganza this weekend

By Phyllis Benson
Staff Writer

With the onset of spring comes the latest trends in fashion from the corners of Paris, London and New York. In this spirit, the Harper College Fashion Design and Merchandising departments will present the Best of 1990 on Friday, May 11 at 2 pm and 8 pm in Building M.

"The fashion show represents the best student work that we have," said Fashion Design and Merchandising Coordinator Sandra Clark. "We have 165 garments in all kinds of categories, ranging from classic coats and suits to 'wearable art.' The avant garde represents the very innovative part of fashion."

Both design and merchandising students are assigned a design problem in the classroom. The two are separate, but complimenting concepts, said Clark. "Design is the concept of idea, the originality of the product. Design stages and presents the product to the buyer.

That's where merchandising comes in. They determine what to buy, how to display and coordinate the garment, and how to present it."

This year garments were presented to more than twenty retailers from the Chicago area, who judged the entrants and assigned a numerical value to work judged of excellent quality. "The highest points are presented in the show," said Clark.

"I am extremely excited about this year's fashions," she said. "The students are certainly following future trends and did an excellent job."

For a while fashion was into black and white, but now the browns, sand, rust, and nature colors are prominent. The nature theme has also made green prominent again. The trend is to also variety skirt lengths of all sizes. The idea is to be slave to a particular style, but let fashion be an expression of our own being these days."

Harper depends on the community as a whole in its support of the fashion department. Proceeds subsidize educational trips and competitions to New York and Paris, where, for the first time, a Harper fashion design student presented her award-winning ensemble in December at an international competition.

"We are fortunate that members of the community and companies in this area donate money for students," said Clark. "We encourage students, faculty and friends to support the fashion department. Not only support it, but turn the money from ticket sales back into the educational experience."

Tickets for the two shows are $8.50 and $5.50 with a student activity card. Call the Harper Box Office at 397-3000, extension 2-517 for more information.

Harper's Fashion Design Program

By Jenny Baken
Staff Writer

Any Harper student who takes any fashion courses is eligible to join Harper's Fashion Design and Merchandising Program.

Participants in the Fashion

Design Program must have some background knowledge of sewing. This is not a sewing class. Students who join this program do not learn how to sew; they are taught how to become designers.

The main idea of this program is to teach students how to become designers, work in the fashion design field and/or become fashion merchandisers or buyers.

The program started in 1969 under the auspices of Sandra Clark, coordinator of fashion design and merchandising.

The fashion design department will sponsor a fashion show on May 11, highlighting garments student designers created from sketches, pattern making, and draped and fitted into a final product.

The students select models, develop a theme and produce a show.

The fashion design curriculum is based on the needs of the advisory board from industry. The students in the program can go directly into the work force into jobs in the fashion industry.

Students at Harper do not have to be full-time students to be in this program. In fact, many students in the program go part-time.

Right now, there are around 200 students who have participated and about 10 teachers.

Many students who join are recruited from different high schools. This program has developed a good reputation over the past 21 years. Since they have had such a good reputation, students are interested in joining.

The special features of this program are: students get to do internships, fashion shows, and learn every aspect of the fashion business imaginable. They also get to go to the apparel center and see manufacturers in Chicago, Paris and New York. They get to see a lot of these different places so they can appreciate the whole world of fashion.

Students can also receive scholarships. There are a lot of different scholarships offered. In fact, the list is too long to mention. Scholarships are awarded internally, from community organizations or from fabric stores around the city. Women's organizations offer huge scholarships to this program. Some of the scholarships are offered up to $1500.

After finishing the program, students can go directly into the field with training, especially in design. In the merchandising field, many students transfer to a four year college to receive a degree.

"Our students work really hard, learn every aspect of the business and culminate the year with the fashion show," said Clark. "The money earned from the ticket sales at the fashion show is given back to the students in forms of scholarships, subsidizing these trips to France, or New York where we might be learning about the fashion industry."

There are openings for more students to join. If you are interested call the fashion department at 397-9000.

Costume history...

A blast from the past!

By Susan M. Troester
Guest Writer

The nineties are upon us. We are nearing the start of a new century. What lies ahead in the world of fashion? That's easy, the past!

Just about every garment constructed in the 20th Century, if not before, can be traced to origins as far back as Egyptian times. So it's a sure bet nothing too strange or overly futuristic will be worn in our time. Maybe not. If fashion designers of the 1990's or the 21st Century decide to imitate some of the crazy trends and styles of the past, we could all be in for a real laugh.

Our morals, standards and beliefs today make some of the clothing, hairstyles and basic fashion principles of the past look anywhere from completely unbelievable to just plain funny. It all started in Egypt back in 3000 B.C. where it was the practice of wealthy males and females to shave their heads completely and wear a wig. In addition, dignitaries would wear a parasol, or false beard, attached to the chin and tied behind the head. Not THAT strange, right? How about the queen? You got it, the queen of the time wore one, too.

In ancient Greece, about 1500 years later, things were just as unusual. Certain women of the time wore a simple 3/4 length sleeve dress with a flounced skirt

Simple, except for the fact that the neckline went to just beneath the breasts. Underneath this was the always comfortable metal waist cincher.

Ancient Rome could compete with ancient Greece not only in areas of philosophy, mathematics and art but also in the area of weirdness. It was common for the ancient Roman woman to wear a wig or to curl her own hair in a fringe of long sausage curls. Another popular style was a short-haired Medusa with the hair curled up from the base of the neck.

One of the most unusual periods in all of costume history (excluding the 1960's) was the medieval or Gothic period. Footwear, for example, existed in a wide variety of styles, the most popular of which was the masculine "poulaines." This was a soft ornamented and embroidered boot with a long pointed toe. The toe length grew to such extremes it became necessary to stuff the toes and to hold them up by attaching chains running from the toe of the shoe to the knees. For women, there was the "chapeau," a simple leather slipper with a stiff-like platform sole about six inches high.

Headpieces in the Gothic period was equally unusual. There was the popular "hennin," a very long pointed cone perched atop a woman's head with a veil-like drape of transparent fabric attached to the tip of the cone. It was worn also in a slightly lower, wider, heart-shaped style. The most unusual of the bonnets probably was the double helmet in which two of these conical structures were attached side by side and protruded from the woman's head like two giant horns.

For many men, headpieces were also dramatic, with many varieties. The "sugar loaf" and the "chapereau turban" were two of the most common. The sugar loaf was a felt hat that varied from a male version of the conical bonnet in a flatter, more turban-like shape. The chapereau turban was a rather plain hood or cap with a "tippet" attached to the back. The tippets were in the chapereau turban what the pointed toe was to the shoes of the Gothic period. This long tail grew so long it was essentially worn trailing around the neck and shoulders like a scarf.

The start of the Renaissance brought changes in all aspects of life, including fashion. In this period, many of the most unusual garments were worn by men, women's clothes reflected a religious and more conventional style. It was in this period that men wore one of the more humorously named garments, or the "peacock belled doublet." The doublet was a long vest with a short skirt-like peplum. The peacock belled version was styled so that the front of the doublet extended out to look like a large pointed stomach.

The cod piece originated in the Italian Renaissance and continued in great popularity until around 1580. It was a decorated bag, often of silk and embroidered with gold thread and jewels, that was attached to the doublet and used to "carry" the male genitals.

The 17th century brought about a rage for the feminine headpiece called the "fontange," a tall stiff piece of lace set just behind the bangs and standing straight up to a height of nearly a foot. Another curious style of the time was the use of beauty patches and silk masks as accessories.

The late 1700's were undoubtedly some of the most extravagant years in costume history. Women's hair was piled 3 feet high atop their heads and miniature scenes such as garden arrangements and ships were implanted within these tremendous coiffures. They were wrapped in gauze or interlaced with ribbons, pearls and feathers.

Worn by women of the 18th century was the "pannier," a basket-like structure that jutted out from each side of the hips to distances that reached widths of almost 8 feet. The bodice of the dresses worn over these structures was cut extremely low over the bust and had 14 length sleeves that just grazed the elbows. The central focal points of the time were the shoulders and the elbows, which were frequently covered only with filmy layers of lace. In contrast to our modern day values, it was more acceptable for a woman to wear a gown that bared most of her breasts but that covered the shoulders and elbows.

A bewildering fashion of the early 19th century was the use of corsets. They were worn by women from childhood on, and were actually responsible for changing the shape of the female frame. It was thought even by medical professionals of the time that the female frame was incapable of standing upright without the metal caged corset. This belief was perpetuated by the fact that it was impossible for women to function properly without the corset after the shape of the ribcage had been changed.

The turn of the century found women freed from the constraints of the corset but trapped in those of the new "hobble skirt." Though the hobble skirt was undoubtedly more bearable than the corset, it was extremely difficult to walk in due to the long length and swirling around the ankles.

In the 1940's one of fashion's prequel legends in the area of humor and innovativeness made her debut. Elsa Normal ribcage (left) and the ribs of our great-grandmothers (right), according to Dr. C. H. Bragg.

Schiaparelli, famous for creations such as lamb chop shaped handbags and suits with edible buttons, demonstrated her unusual style not only in her creations, but also in her behavior. In New York, the subject was school girl uniforms and sat in grammar school desks.

A decade that is most definitely experiencing a resurgence of pop culture today in the 1980's. Will we go to the extremes our parents did? While parents' extreme go-go, bows, and the minuscule of some pin might be frowned upon as far as corporate world today, but in the psychedelic 60's. Worn with white eye shadow and lipstick, false eyelashes and other a bee hive or flip hands, they were popular with nearly all of the women of the time.

Designers in the 1960's created some of the most unusual garments ever. Be it Paco Rabanne, with his mini-dresses made of metal disks hooked together, or Courreges with his mini-skirts, little girl ponies and huckle shoes, creativity and originality were abundant.

Just as the 60's were years of change, the 1980's are sure to be the same. The next decade will most certainly bring about many surprises and curiosities. But just remember, the next time you're flipping through a magazine and think, "A! How could anyone wear that?" things could be a lot stranger.

Graduation is over; now what?

By Kate Westler
Guest Writer

What do you think a student in fashion design or merchandising will do upon graduation? Most people think of the obvious: becoming a designer or working in retailing. Certainly there are possibilities, but today, if you are a young person interested in the fashion industry, your options are as limitless as your imagination. You only need two things: talent, and unrelenting perseverance.

No matter what the area of the industry, it is highly competitive, to be sure. It is an industry that thrives on nervousness, and does not react kindly to mistakes. So if you are searching for a low-pressure career, you'd better look elsewhere.

Many options exist working for a designer or manufacturer. Positions exist in technical areas, such as pattern making, sample making, grading and cutting. If you're not a technical person, other areas include public relations, sales, accounting, and managing.

If you don't want to specialize, your best bet is to go with a small company where you can do a little of everything. But be prepared to do just that. Susan Friley, head manager for leading eveningwear company Patricia Rhodes, Inc., found she was able to carve out a niche for herself working in a small company that is definitely growing rapidly. "I wanted to be involved in production management, but I knew I would have to start at the bottom," and Susan Friley, who sewed garments for production when she first started. She added,

"Back then we were in the basement, and look at us now," referring to the fact that when she started, they worked from the home of designer Patricia Rhodes, while now P.R.I. has a modern factory and a million dollar plus business. Susan has done everything from patterns to quality control and shipping. Now her main responsibilities include dealing with all the suppliers and stores, chems such as Neiman Marcus and I. Magnin.

Susan's timing was particularly good. She found P.R.I. when the company was still very young. She was able to learn every aspect of the business first hand, and affect policy as the company grew. She says there are still employment opportunities at Patricia Rhodes, Inc. The most important quality a prospective employee should have, in her opinion, is commitment.

Spiegel is one of the largest apparel companies in the Chicago area, and therefore has a wide range of jobs that students may not have thought of. Karen Durante is a graduate of the Harper fashion department, in addition, she holds a bachelor's degree in merchandising. For years Karen worked in advertising and catalog layout for Spiegel. She now freelances, but eighty percent of her work still comes from the company.

Karen enjoys being associated with a quality company, anticipating new trends, and the freedom to develop new projects. However, she asks about the flexible hours of freelancing. "I get to choose when a twelve hour night-to-work morning or night."

Though she says that it helps to have strong writing and art backgrounds in her field, the most important things are drive and perseverance. "No matter what you can get your foot in the door. Be willing to take an entry level position, even if it's not what you want to do. Once you're in, then you can meet people and tell them your ideas," she advised. She also stressed the importance of having a portfolio that exhibits an ability to translate concepts into actual work.

Another area at Spiegel is quality assurance and control. This is the perfect area for someone with a sharp technical mind and an eye for spotting problems.

Jeanne Asa is one such person.

Her job is to find the problems in the garments and work them out before the garments go into production. One sample garment has been made, she fits it on a live model. Then, if there are problems, she marks them for the pattern makers to correct. After that, the garment goes through several checks to assure a minimum of production problems. But in any production problems do occur, and when they do, Asa is there to assist in solving them.

Since Spiegel is a large manufacturer many things are made on order. Asa travels to the factory several times a year to check on production. She says her job gives her a great deal of satisfaction in being able to fix problems and see a great looking garment at the end of the process. Anyone considering a job such as Asa's, should acquire at least 3-4 years of manufacturing experience, and be a perfectionist.

If becoming a designer is what you want most, there are several ways to make the career a true personal choice. Some designers work for large manufacturing companies that specialize in a particular type of clothing—swimsuits, or active sportswear, for example. Other people feel a designer's need to produce garments that express their individuality.

Paige Mayberry is the designer for Grass Orchids in Chicago. Mayberry combines intricate handpainted with unique lace and fine needles to create pieces with a unique elegance reminiscent of another era.

"Do whatever you can to get your foot in the door. Be willing to take an entry-level position, even if it's not what you want to do..."

Karen Durante
Harper Fashion Department graduate

After studying at Parsons School of Design in New York and the Art Institute of Chicago, Paige decided to try to sell her work. First she developed a small sample line consisting of three pieces. She recalls walking into stores, where she knew the buyer would be with her garment bag already open. She did this so that they would have to see her things before they could reject her. She felt that if they rejected her after seeing the clothes, then at least she gave it her best.

It wasn't easy at first, but Paige began to get orders, and was quickly faced with the problems of production. Then she met Shirley Price. Shirley now has business partner, and financial backer of Grass Orchids.

Having a business partner is a solution for a lot of creative people who would like to concentrate on designing and exploring new concepts. However, the selling of clothes is the purpose of the industry, and Paige has become more involved in every aspect of the business. Her advice to prospective designers: Take motions to make things happen. Be aggressive and persistent, because you never know where opportunities exist.

For the very artistic, designing one of a kind pieces to be sold in galleries and to private customers is an option. These pieces are often collected and

Fashion Student Profiles

By Phyllis Benson
Staff Writer

The Fashion Design and Merchandising department will present its annual fashion show, the Real of 1990, on Friday, May 11 in Building M at 2 pm and 7 pm. Six of the students, three freshmen and three sophomores, spoke with The Harbinger about their designs and the experience of being in a real fashion show.

Nicole Steele is a part-time student studying fashion design. Steele, a freshman, is a returning student and mother of three. Her garments is a beautiful-type jacket made of polished cotton and raw silk banded at the waist. A bra top lies under the jacket and a coordinating skirt with fitted yoke and narrow pleats completes the look. Both jacket and skirt are embellished with ruffia and hand-sewn gold beadedwork.

Steele enjoys the coursework at Harper and welcomes the chance to be in competitions.

"I plan to acquire as much knowledge as I can," she said. "I want to get all I can out of the school experience. I wanted a long time to decide what I wanted to do. If you wait and go back to college, you finally get to do what you want and have a better understanding of what you want to do."

Courses in wearable art, textiles and fashion history prepared Steele for her submission in the fashion show. But nothing prepared her for the excitement she would feel when having her designs shown professionally.

"I am overwhelmed and humbled when I see what others do, and feel good about myself when I see what I've done," she said. "I'm not nervous about winning or losing. I feel extremely honored to be eligible. The object is not to win so I'm really very calm. But a win is the icing on the cake."

Steele is looking forward to doing more designs and learning more in the process. "I can't believe I'm actually doing something I love," she said. "If you work hard and feel good about what you've made then others do too."

Sharon Ege is a full-time student in fashion design. She is presenting a big, swinging coat with an angle on the back in the show. It features colors in a southwestern pattern, the coat is embellished with beads and medallions. The material is slightly unusual. "It's a blanket that I cut up," she said.

Ege began designing in high school and participated in a fashion show before coming to Harper last year. She enjoys making clothes for herself. However, "in the real world designers don't make things for themselves. The motivation is to make things for others. You shouldn't get too attached to clothes, create great things for other people. The real world is very different."

Ege, who works two jobs in addition to her studies, looks forward to the opportunities available and the experience of being in a fashion show.

"This is really the first big show for prizes and scholarships," said Ege. "I've had experience and may be winning a scholarship is very exciting. You can't get that kind of opportunity anywhere else."

Course in pattern making, textiles, fashion illustration and basic construction have led Ege to prefer designing to the actual construction of a garment. "Working in design making is really hard, the intricate work is difficult," she said.

But the courses have also given her a great respect for the instructors, a path that she finds very interesting and may pursue.

"The teachers are really good," she said. "They work in the industry and really know what's going on. They are very helpful. We can learn from their mistakes."

"There is a helpful feeling," she said, "when you're backstage because you don't know if your dress will bomb or not. But having been on both sides, as a designer and as a model, seeing reactions from the judges has helped her in competitions."

She is looking forward to an upcoming show at the Tavern Club for a scholarship on May 10, and a show at Arlington Park Racetrack on May 16, in addition to the Harper show. A competition for Woodfield Mall in Arlington could lead to another show next year.

"The best benefit," she said, "is a wide variety of experiences and trying many different things, so many things I wouldn't normally do."

Cheryl Fletcher, also a freshman fashion design major, has five garments in the show.

A beaded bustier of raw silk and a mini hip-skirt with no waist and beaded at the hem, is Fletcher's "wearable art" entry. A sportswear outfit of geometric design, different on both sides, consists of a blouse and skirt. The blouse has a mandarin collar to make it stand up. The skirt waistband also has beading for shape.

Three wedding gowns complete Fletcher's collection. All of silk, the shape is slim with a high slit in the skirt and a low neckline beaded with gold and pearls.

Fletcher, who would like to attend the Fashion Academy in Chicago, doesn't find the actual showing of her designs nerve-racking, just the behind the scenes atmosphere.

"It only makes me nervous working with the models," she said of the hectic pace backstage. "You have to help them change and look just right before they go out on the runway. I worry if the model is even going to show up. I've had that happen to me and I had to do the modeling."

"But I'm not nervous. I really like it."

Fletcher takes courses in illustration, pattern making, construction and design and fashion art, part of the textiles. "Except for illustration," she said, "the courses are directly related to the show. The instructors teach a lot, especially in pattern making. Many of us don't know anything except how to sew. But I'm amazed that I can actually take an idea from a piece of paper and make it into a garment. It's a lot of work, but teachers help."

Fletcher finds participating in a competition beneficial. "Through the shows and jury judges," she said, "you get an idea of what people like. The jury show assigns points to designs and you know how well you've put the whole thing together. A good design can get a job you wouldn't have otherwise gotten if not for the exposure of the show."

The judges are all professionals who work in fields related to fashion design.

Laura Hubka, also a sophomore in fashion design, has seven garments in the show.

She is black knit, "baby doll-type" jumpsuits with little details. The other is a swing out coat of black wool with a polka-dotted lining.

Hubka's coursework includes drafting, draping, illustration and visual merchandising. "The teachers have a lot of knowledge," she said, "and it's a good foundation. You need more instruction if you want to go into the profession, but the foundation is excellent."

Hubka would eventually like to go into hat design, which goes along with garment apparel and work on runways with major designers. Her experience at Harper has opened the door. "Any experience is good exposure," she said.

Hubka said she gets nervous during shows, but the love of designing something totally new carries her through. "I think it's great," she said. "I just hope everyone else gets as big a kick out of it as I do."

Pamela Relitz is the third sophomore in fashion design. Her specialty: hand-painted silk, is represented in her seven garments in the show.

One outfit is fire-red and magenta leather with chiffon. Three sets of evening pajamas are done in pastels of peach, pink and seafoam, cropped in chiffon. Another is a silk, asymmetrical wrap jacket that covers a slip dress.

Her final entry is a short-waisted dinner jacket with an exaggerated shoulder treatment and big flaps running from the shoulder which covers a slip dress.

In addition to her studies, which includes all of the drafting and draping courses, Relitz has run a fashion business for the past three years. With some college behind her, she enrolled at Harper to expand her business.

While she has not yet gotten a response from the show, Relitz said the experience is invaluable. "Knowing how to deal with a fashion show," she said, "and knowing what you can produce and how to put it together in a professional manner is the real value."

Relitz won a scholarship last year through a sale show but said that sophomores don't have as many opportunities as freshmen for a scholarship. "But it's definitely a plus."

Being in a show makes Relitz very nervous. "Part of you is up there on stage. I don't know, maybe you expect the garment to fall apart or something."

"But if it looks good," she said, "then you can be proud of yourself. It is quite an accomplishment."

accomplishment.

These six students are a small representation of the talent and originality of the annual fashion show. Mark your calendar for May 11 for the "Best of 1990."

Kate Wester is a sophomore in fashion design and also has a Bachelor's in Theatre. She has six garments in the show. Included are three spring suits, a velvet evening coat, velvet pants, a hand-painted blouse and a red velvet, medieval dress trimmed in brocade. Her final entry is an outfit from the international competition last fall in New York.

"I'm sort of inspired by Ascot and the racing theme," she said. A chiffon bodice, strapless tops, chiffon pants with hand-painted peppy dots. A jacket of striped and brocade upholstery fabric, covers the top. The ensemble is accented with an antique portrait and a huge hat covered with chiffon and hand-painted flowers.

"I really enjoy the opportunity to create without too many boundaries, especially considering stability and wearability. You develop an eye for things, an objective eye, with the help of assistants," Wester said.

In her two years at Harper, Wester has developed a respect for the teachers. "I think the teachers are top notch," she said. "But I think there comes a point in time where you have a lot more to learn. There's only so much they can teach you. You have to learn it on your own."

The exposure through the fashion department gives students that "learn it on your own" opportunity and the chance to see ideas come to life and get professional comments about them.

"I'm not really nervous at the show," said Wester. "The most stressful time for me is right before the garment is due. If it's not ready on time or it's not coming out the way I saw it, it is stressful."

Fashion Close-up

But when I see the finished product and it has come out like I envisioned it, I'm happy."

Wester takes her critics in stride. "Some people like it and others don't," she said. "Everyone's point of view is different and perceptions are really subjective."

Fashion design student represents USA in Paris

Paris, the fashion capital of the world. Home of haute couture where designers showcase their stylistic ensembles. Graceful models stroll down the runway in seductive, elegant or classic outfits adorned with accessories galore.

Watching an international fashion show is a fantasy, unveiling your designed garment to an audience in a dream come true.

Last November, a dream became reality as Harper College fashion design student Rachel McAlpin, of Park Ridge, won a chance to represent the United States in Paris during a New York competition.

design schools, including the Chicago Art Institute and the International Academy of Merchandising and Design — for one of ten Paris-bound slots.

Her victory was a milestone for Harper's 20-year-old fashion design department and Sandra Clark, coordinator of fashion design and merchandising. "We competed last year, but this is the first time we have a designer representing the United States in the international competition."

Clark believes Harper has a strong, high-quality design program with excellent instruction for talented fashion design and merchandising students. "Our major problem is that we are lo-

The Councils International Designers Creatives De Mode (Paris competition) on December 19, sponsored by Glamour Magazine and Air France gave McAlpin a chance to compete against 160 student designers from 16 countries including France, Finland, Japan, Italy and the USSR.

Her task was to design a fashionable and elegant day dress "suitable for a young lady during the Art Deco Triennial Grand Prix at the Louvre Museum in Paris, a graduation ceremony at a well-known university or the opening of a new fashion museum in a large city on a sunny autumn afternoon."

McAlpin describes the design she submitted for the Paris competition as "wearable art. I like to use my imagination and create. I want people to take a second look."

Her dress symbolizes a fish. "I like fish," said McAlpin. "I tried to incorporate scales and feathers into the design." The garment is made out of ultra-soft half circles applied by hand to give a scale effect. Wire and beads are used to add shape. The back is open and covered with chiffon.

McAlpin was not alone for the Paris trip. Sixty Harper College fashion design students, faculty and friends walked overseas to attend the international competition.

The program began on December 18 with a video tape highlighting past fashion trends and future possibilities.

The evening's pulse detector was a Sonia Rykiel fashion show. "Sonia Rykiel is the Grand Dame of Paris Fashion," said Clark. "Her collection was imaginative and very classic. She highlighted tactile, the splendor of black and gold, and a lot of neutral colors. Her designs were highly sophisticated. It was a quality presentation."

Students also had the opportunity to visit the American Academy of Fashion Design in Paris. Guests were treated to the evolution of mid 19th and early 20th century garments via a lecture and historical fashion show.

The international competition gave McAlpin a chance to show her design, and Harper students an opportunity to attend a presentation with an extensive display of world wide student fashions. The commentary was simultaneously translated into English, Spanish and Japanese.

"The designs in the international competition were innovative, sculptural, unusual, highly creative and avant-garde," said Clark.

An added feature of the show was a presentation of designs from French fashion design schools. "The garments were very sculptural," said Clark. "They were three-dimensional, not flat garments."

Although Japan won top honors in the competition, Harper was victorious in its own way. "Our students have learned from design and merchandising presentations in the national and international level," said Clark. "This edge will help us in future competitions."

"This trip was a wonderful exposure to many different avenues of the world of fashion," said Clark. "It was a chance to meet students, see fashion illustrations, so-called, and visit museums, boutiques and the Paris flea market."

"People don't believe we can be a viable fashion school."

-Sandra Clark

"I didn't expect to win anything," said McAlpin. "I was so happy to be in New York and in the competition. I was very excited when I won. I was numb from head to toe."

McAlpin competed against 53 students from 27 of the nation's top fashion schools in northwest suburban Chicago," said Clark. "People don't believe we can be a viable fashion school." "By winning a variety of awards in numerous competitions we have already gained a superior reputation as an excellent fashion design school," said Clark.

Fashion to fit you!

By Jennifer L. Troester
Guest Writer

Imagine how different the lives of most women would be if they were perfectly content with their bodies. There would probably not be such a crazed obsession with diet and exercise or liposuction.

But this is nothing new, throughout recorded history, people have attempted to perfect their bodies to the desired ideals of the time and culture. To achieve the desirable rail-thin look of their culture, Egyptian mummies were wrapped as tightly as possible, often creating a more perfect deceased body than the live one. And it has been less than 100 years since women discontinued the use of the painful and dangerous corsets that created waists as small as fifteen inches. As we near the turn of the Twentieth Century, we are still attempting to perfect our bodies. It is the era of choices in almost every aspect of our lifestyles including fashion. These options can be used to your advantage to create a "more perfect body" simply through the use of clothing.

There are three basic figure types that can be adjusted by different styles and details in dress: the rounded-all-over figure, the top-heavy figure, and the pear-shaped figure. Within these broad categories, there are practically as many shapes as there are human figures, but the ideas from the main groups can be applied to the most specific categories. Most figures aren't simply one figure type, but more often a combination of two or more. Tips for each basic type can be used to enhance your own figure.

One main category of figure flaws is the rounded-all-over type. To enhance a figure of this type, one should not wear extremely tight fitting garments or display too much flesh. This figure type can be strategically adjusted by garments that draw the eye up and down, but not side to side. Vertical patterns and style lines can create this "vertical" effect. Some helpful details include lines of vertical buttons, thin vertical stripes, square, cow and V-necks, scarfs, jewelry, and straight skirts. Hairstyles of medium length should be worn to balance this figure type. Any other garment or accessory that adds to the slim silhouette will be enhancing to this figure.

There are specific things that should be avoided with the rounded-all-over shape. Horizontal lines can have a devastating effect on a round figure. Some horizontal details to be avoided are stripes, sleeves that have a definite horizontal cut, and wide belts. Secondly, curved lines such as a rounded neckline should be avoided. Too much fullness as in a circle skirt or a full coat should also be avoided. And finally, too many details such as ruffles, pleats, and tiers should be kept to a minimum.

Another figure type that can be adjusted through the use of clothing is the top-heavy figure. The top-heavy figure is often the most difficult to dress, mainly due to the fact that it is frequently ignored by designers and manufacturers. This can cause improper proportions which will result in ill-fitting garments. To help solve this problem, consider a wardrobe that includes garments that detract from the top and draw the eye to the lower half of the body.

The strategy for the top-heavy figure makes use of soft skirts and pleated or patterned pants and blouses that are loose-fitting and soft looking. A V-neck is the most flattering for this figure, and shoulder pads are often helpful. Separates fit best for top-heavy people who may have trouble with dresses.

Specific things to avoid are plunging necklines, cropped tops or puff sleeves. These garments, as well as waist definition in the form of wide belts and high waists, draw attention to the problem area. Full hair-dos are detrimental to this figure type because they add to the top-heavy effect, and therefore a medium size hair-do should be worn.

Finally, there is the pear-shaped figure. This figure has small shoulders and a small bust in comparison to the hips and bottom. This figure flaw is the most common for American women, and therefore the easiest to manage.

Again, there is a specific strategy to follow. Color can be used effectively with light colors on the top (which have a widening effect), and dark, slimming colors on the bottom. Soft pleating and gathering at the bustline can create the illusion of a fuller bust, while waist detail can emphasize a pear-shaped figure's small waist. Padded or enlarged shoulders can add to the shoulder line and further balance the figure.

Certain things to avoid are an emphasis on the hip line such as obvious hip pockets or a low waist belt. Bright colors, horizontal lines and large patterns below the waist will draw attention to the problem area and should be kept to a minimum. Leggings and tight skirts tend to look ill-fitting on a pear-shaped figure and should also be avoided.

Unfortunately, the dissatisfaction for our personal figures will probably continue for many generations. But with these tips, adjusted to your unique figure and style, you can obtain the look of a near perfect figure through the use of clothing.

Harper's Bizarre Club

By Jamie Benson
Guest Writer

If you're into the latest fashions in sportswear and evening wear, plan on attending the Best of 1980 fashion show, sponsored by Harper's fashion department, on Friday, May 11 in the Building M gym at 2 pm and 8 pm. The spring fashion show is entirely in the hands of the fashion department. The students here model, select the music and redesign the stage. All of the clothing is made by the design students, and the merchandising students run the show.

Harper's Bizarre is a club within the fashion department consisting of roughly 100 students and three co-presidents: Jennifer Hachfeld, Susan Troester and Jennifer Troester.

Harper's Bizarre is devoted to the fashion department, furthering fashion activities, and helping students with career placement.

"It's a lot of fun and a great learning experience," said Hachfeld. "By being one of the co-presidents, I have learned what it really takes to make it in the fashion world."

The students learn a great deal from the guest speakers who work in fashion design and merchandising, as well as former students who manage their own stores.

Completing Harper's two-year fashion program can lead to a job as a fashion designer or a department store manager.

"One thing I learned about running a fashion show is that it takes a lot of people working together as a team," said Hachfeld.

valued as works of art. This approach gives those who don't like producing in volume the option of choosing what and when they will create. Because of their uniqueness, and time involved, these items may be sold for large amounts of money. But be assured that the quality must meet pricing.

Lauree Gray, owner of Lauree Gray Designs in Barrington, is an example of how someone can combine work and family effectively.

Lauree runs her business from her home. With a small staff, she is able to produce a line of contemporary knitwear twice a year. She sells through representatives who have shows in their homes, moving friends and neighbors to try the clothes. She offers a wide range of colors and fabrics, and all items are custom made to fit the client. Since shows are going on continually, the production demands are never too strenuous at any one particular time. This gives Lauree the ability to be near her two small children.

Another option that exists for designers is the Designer Showcase at the apparel center. Susanne Patton guides 10 start-up designers in this collective wholesale showroom. The showcase is the only one of its kind in any regional market. It includes the designers and gives them a lot of exposure, while being much more economical than having a private showroom or going to New York. Susanne also advises the companies, lending them her expertise.

Susanne believes there is a tremendous amount of support in Chicago from the State and City governments toward fostering new manufacturing companies, and creating more jobs in the apparel industry. She also says there is "definitely" room for new companies here. The most important things she would like to see from new designers are a matched interest and enthusiasm for the business as well as the creations.

One more area to think about is the promotion and publicity of fashion. Possessing an open mind, an objective eye, a curiosity about the world around you, and a "tough hide" are the key qualities to success in this area, according to Jo Hopkins Deutsch. Jo has been involved in the fashion industry for many years. She started as a model in New York City and gradually learned more about the business.

After moving to Chicago 17 years ago it took some time to make new contacts. She worked for Sears, Caprio, and Lord and Taylor as director of fashion and promotion. Ten years ago she formed her own company, J.H.D. Communications, which produces fashion shows, writes fashion copy and other promotional activities.

She stresses the importance of meeting people in the industry. One person may not be able to hire you, but they may know someone who can. The personal note, says Jo, can really help people to remember you, or be more interested in meeting you. Send one attached to your resume. Meeting people and finding a place for yourself takes a lot of time. It may take fifty little roses before you do.

There are many other areas that have not been touched on here. If you don't find someone as first, don't be afraid to decide what you want to do, and create a position that perhaps didn't exist before. Whatever your special talents are, if you are tenacious and adventurous, you can find a place that's right for you.

Twins separated at birth; united at last!

By Alicia Chinlund
Assistant Managing Editor

Harper student Laura Lakowski always felt that somewhere in the world she had a sister. "I was born in Galeburg, and adopted when I was one," said Lakowski. "Somehow, I knew I was not an only child."

Lakowski grew up as the adopted daughter of Jackie and Edward Lakowski, now divorced. She was raised with brothers Brad, who died two years ago, and Kevin. "I was the only girl in a family of men, so I learned to speak up for myself," said Lakowski. "At the age of ten, I was responsible for babysitting for my brothers, cooking and cleaning."

Toward the end of freshman year, Lakowski transferred from Palatine High School to Marillac, a private high school for girls in Northfield.

"My cousin, Kim Orlowski, mentioned to my dad that she had seen a girl at Marillac who looked just like me," said Lakowski. "My parents investigated and discovered I had a twin sister. Yet, they didn't tell me."

The day Lakowski registered at Marillac, the confusion began. "I was walking down the hall and two girls yelled 'Hey Fitz over here!'" said Lakowski. "I didn't know why they were calling me Fitz. I thought it was some kind of nickname."

Later in the day, Lakowski at last met some classmates. One of the students, Margaret Pasquier, ran up and hugged Lakowski between two classrooms and asked Lakowski when she was born, when she adopted, and did she have a sister.

After class was dismissed, Lakowski and her identical twin sister, Eileen Fitzgerald, were pushed together. "Neither of us knew the other existed," said Lakowski. "I didn't think we looked alike," said Fitzgerald. "We looked at each other and walked away."

The shock of having a twin hadn't set in. Eileen, the adopted daughter of Maryann and Robert Fitzgerald, was raised as an only child. Now, fifteen years later, she had a sister.

"We're more like friends than sisters," said Fitzgerald.

Lakowski and Fitzgerald are both right-handed, wore braces and glasses at the same time and enjoy track.

The twins are very different personalities. "Eileen is shy, neat, organized and spends most of her time studying," said Lakowski. "I'm outgoing, disorganized, spontaneous and spend most of my time with other people."

Both twins are snubbers. "Eileen sometimes reminds me so much of me," said Lakowski. "As I get to know her better, I become more aware of my own faults. We're both hot-tempered. We didn't talk for a year and a half after fighting over a piece of pie."

Now, at nineteen, Lakowski and Fitzgerald are working at strengthening their friendship. "I'm glad I met Laura," said Fitzgerald. "It's still kind of weird getting to know each other." As the years pass the twins spend more time getting acquainted. "I hope as we get older we get closer and don't fight," said Lakowski.

Lakowski is pursuing a career in Broadcast Journalism at Harper College, while Fitzgerald will embark on a career in Accounting or Psychology at Illinois State University.

In the future, Lakowski and Fitzgerald would like their families to get to know each other and become friends.

Endless summer days full of abuse; Beeson style

By Jamie Beeson
Staff Writer

Can you believe another school year has drawn to a close? This year dissolved quicker than Donald Trump's divorce.

For some of us, it's the end of an era and the beginning of a new one as we prepare to move on to four-year universities. A year of bad advice. I feel it's my duty to leave you with some pointers on what to do this summer. So here's some final bad advice, or badvice, from your truly.

Your first responsibility this summer is to catch up on sleep. On the first Monday morning of freedom, kindly flip your alarm clock the bird and go back to sleep till Tuesday afternoon.

The first of secular risk concerts this summer is entitled, Amorism. Minkley, One, Whitecane, Rush and Steve Miller to name a few. If you go to any of these shows, then be sure to follow my three simple guidelines: be loud, obnoxious and NEVER sit down.

There are several ways to deal with the vending machine from hell. You know, the one that spits out Dad's Row Beer instead of Gatorade. Since rocking these machines is hazardous to your health, I have some alternatives for getting revenge.

A couple of solid whacks with a sledgehammer should solve the problem. If not, then get a bigger one. You could always stuff an M 80 in the coin return and blow it off. If all else fails, try abusive language.

Speaking of abusive language, be sure to use it as often as possible while driving. Just be sure that someone hears you. Personally, I'm going to start carrying flash cards with various obscenities on them.

The next time you don't know what to do on a weekend, go camping. It can bring more excitement, and it's a good way to find out which of your friends can handle two days in the wilderness.

We can't forget to pay tribute to our good buddy, Bart Simpson. Call a bar and ask for Mr. Jacques Sarge. More importantly, the next time you offend somebody and they ask you what you think, just say, "I'm Bart Simpson, who the hell are you?"

In all seriousness, please, have a totally bitchin' summer (duh). May you accomplish what you set out to do, and may you not accomplish what you don't set out to do.

As your friendly doctor of bad advice, I want to leave you with this piece of badvice: play it LOUD, everybody is weird no matter how sane you think they are. Beer makes you fat, and fun is the best thing to have.

Art appreciation; in a class by itself

By Alicia Chinlund
Assistant Managing Editor

An artist chooses a medium of expression and creates an image subject to interpretation by spectators. Students in Ben Dallas' Art 105 (Introduction to Art) class develop a sensitivity to art by studying elements such as form, subject, content, perspective and color. Art 105 students learn to appreciate art and make their own interpretations.

Dallas teaches students to get in touch with their own feelings about art by giving them a chance to express their ideas via working together or alone on interpretive exercises such as describing a person, a piece of art, or having impressions of beauty or ugliness.

"Ben Dallas encourages us to drop our preconceived notions and experience art anew," said Virginia Komorowski. "He's one of a kind. He takes an interest in his students. His teaching style is informative as well as entertaining. He's a gem."

Dallas prevents information in lectures, slide presentations or exercises which elicit the interchange of ideas. "We participate in a dialogue when Ben teaches, we don't just listen," said Nancy Wald. "As a teacher, Ben Dallas has the ability to accept each and every student for who they are and respects where they are. At the same time, he approaches a class in a manner which creates the necessity for looking within oneself, thereby challenging the passivity with which we approach so many classes."

Art interpretation is personal. People appreciate different artworks based on their feelings, experiences and values.

Each student in ART 105 completes a 50 question handout which gives them a chance to delve into their feelings, thoughts and interpretations of a variety of subjects. "The handout is very personal," said Dallas. "There are no right or wrong answers. It is intended to get students to think about their perceptions."

ART 105 helps students develop a appreciation of art based on personal interpretation and aesthetic concepts. Dallas tries to help his students understand the concepts as much as possible. "We may not always understand what he says but he's always willing to repeat his ideas until we do understand," said Sandra Stewart. "He's a pleasure to listen to. His lectures are informative and humorous."

Ben Dallas

Dallas is respected by his students. "I look up to him," said Walter Hill. "He makes you feel confident. You can say or ask anything in his class and not feel threatened."

Every semester, Dallas teaches one section of ART 105 which fills to capacity. The class gives him a chance to experience art with his students. "I enjoy bringing art alive for others," said Dallas. As long as students sign up, Dallas will continue to teach ART 105.

Are you a junk food junkie

We know why they call it "junk." It has little if any nutritional value, is often high in calories, fat, sodium, sugar and like it even though we may feel guilty after we eat it. The fact is, once consumed, it doesn't fill you, but when junk food becomes a regular part of your diet, it can become a nutritional health hazard. Junk food can move nutritionally balanced meals. So, if you're a junk food junkie, try these tips for breaking your habit. Start gradually, making one change at a time. If you give yourself time to adjust to new habits, you'll be more likely to keep up with them. You may find each nutritional step you take more difficult to follow through with the next. If you're like most people, it would be unrealistic to think that junk food will never pass your lips again. But it's very realistic and healthy to make simple changes in your eating habits to help limit the amount of junk food you eat. Why not? Junk food should be the exception, not the rule, for healthier eating habits. You may even discover that "junk" food isn't half bad.

Tips for kicking the habit

- Switch to the low-salt variety of your favorite snack chips or cracker.
- Bake your own treats and reduce the amount of added sugar by half.
- Save candy for a special occasion rather than an everyday indulgence.
- Choose popcorn instead of potato chips for a quick snack.
- Unsalted pretzels are a better choice than chips since they are lower in fat.
- Opt for a plain burger rather than deep-fried chicken and fish sandwiches.
- Mix 1/2 cup fruit juice with 1/2 cup plain carbonated water or so-dium-free seltzer instead of soda pop.
- Try a low-fat frozen yogurt dessert or a frozen fruit juice pop instead of an ice cream sundae.
- Eliminate the high-fat meat toppings (sausage, pepperoni, meat balls) from pizza, and try bell pepper, onion, mushrooms, or a combination of vegetable toppings.

Harper's prairie restoration project: Earth Day every day

By Penelope Skrzymski
Copy Editor

Harper's prairie restoration project began in the spring of 1985 on two acres on the east side of campus. The land was originally a dumping ground for landscaping materials, wood chips, waste dirt, etc., with no human or soil, hardly the ideal place to rebuild a lost ecosystem. The ground was plowed and seeds planted that first year, and each year since the Biology department has continued the effort to restore these two acres to the kind of tall grass prairie that the settlers saw when they first arrived in Illinois. For a state known as the Prairie State, it seems sad that less than one-tenth of one percent of the original Illinois landscape remains as natural prairie.

It takes many years to fully restore a prairie. Progress depends on the level of funding, management and sheer labor hours put in on the project. All the interactive aspects of the prairie must be planned or encouraged to return, down to the insects that pollinate specific species of plants and mycorrhiza in the soil that interacts with plant roots. A normal prairie has over 200 plant species per acre.

An important part of the restoration project is the annual burning of the prairie. The natural life cycle of the prairie is a cycle of burning. In the past, lightning strikes began many prairie fires. The plants have evolved to survive fire by means of very deep roots which quickly regenerate the plants. They benefit from the ashes which fertilize the soil, producing ten times as many flowers as unburned plants would. Some plants even need to burn in order to complete their reproductive cycle.

Burning promotes the growth of grasses and true prairie plants, while killing the woody species not native to Illinois prairie and the European species transplanted here that aren't adapted to fire. Queen Anne's Lace, thorny and dandelions are a few of the European weeds that have spread across the nation. A natural burn doesn't consume everything; the burn is more a patchy pattern, which leaves many seed-bearing plants intact. The fire also clears out the undergrowth long before affecting the crowns of trees.

Each spring the biology people wait for the weather to be clear, dry, and still on a weekend in March or April. Harper's prairie was burned this spring, coincidentally on Earth Day. Only half was burned, to assure that seed sources survived, and to allow the annual life a better chance to get clear.

The burn isn't the only work involved in the restoration. All during the growing season, volunteers are needed to rake the soil to promote growth of seeds from previous years' plants, and to plant seeds and seedlings of native species. During drought conditions, water has to be hauled out to the prairie to sustain first year seedlings which haven't fully developed their root systems yet.

As Harper's prairie has developed, wildlife has been attracted back to the area. Most notably, a Black-crowned Night Heron (on the Illinois Endangered Species List) has been seen in the prairie. Numerous other birds are inhabiting the prairie, and a complete list of wildlife sighted at Harper. The area is also currently home to a family of muskrats.

Summer is currently the best time to visit the prairie. The spring flowering species are not as well developed yet. Some of the more eye-catching flowers of summer are the Aster, Goldenrod, Ox-eye Daisy and Wild Bergamot. Also growing well in Harper's prairie now are the Tall Sunflower, Black-eyed Susan, Indian Grass, Coneflowers, Marsh Milkweed and Tall Bluestem, an original Illinois prairie grass that grows to six feet tall.

Students interested in working on the prairie should contact Karen Lustig, ext. 2566 or Randy Schenck, ext. 2800 in the Biology department. Related coursework at Harper includes BIO 103 - Man and Environment, BIO 120 - Botany, and BIO 150, 151, 152 - Field Biology.

How ya doin' bank? That's the last time I get to say that here at good of Harper High. (I call it that because of its new smoking policy.)

Been an interest year so far. Speak of the smoking staff. I've heard rumors that a group of students want to have a smoke-in in the cafeteria on Thursday. Smoke and study all day. Of course I couldn't confirm this and being the responsible journalist I am, I won't report on it. Besides, this sounds like a type of protest, so I won't even talk about it in my column.

I wasn't going to talk about smoking anymore but, well, what the hell. Mr. Anderson made some interesting comments in last week's Harbinger that deserve something.

1. He mentions that the new policy doesn't completely ban smoking. The new policy doesn't completely ban smoking effective August of 1991. At least that's what the board voted on.

2. About the "fact" that there is a tobacco smoker on your committee who did it take so long to correct this error since we've been talking about there being no smokers on any of these committees since November of 1987?

About your wonderful, god fearing, communist hating survey again, said the drill could not hear. With my experiences here, there are times that I now think it is sad that I am not dead. I've learned how to communicate better than I did before I came here. That's the nature of Sign Language.

Why tell you these things? Because we are the future (scary). What we learn here will have an impact on what we do later in life. Always beware of the tags that are not there. Something you might think is a great idea (like mainstreaming) and a non-smoking campus might not be such a great idea to the people that have to live with it.

3. This is a very brief part of what I have learned. I wanted to do an entire column on this issue, but things came up. In retrospect, some of the things I've written about (some entire columns) don't deserve to be in the paper. I should have put that column in then I offer my apologies to the Deaf Community because there's a story that deserves to be told. The problem arises when people don't want to learn as much as the facts may confuse their theory.

The facts (at least the few that I know are) that there are a community that has been put down and enslaved by the attitudes of the majority of the hearing for centuries. I cannot make up for that attitude, but I can promise you this attitude will no longer exist in the lives of myself and those who I can persuade. Oh well, final stuff. If I passed you off this year with the things I wrote then good. Someone who is passed off is not speaking. If I've made you think even a little bit differently, good. College is the time to do these things (or once we're in the real world we no longer have the time). I've enjoyed writing here at the Harbinger. I hope you have enjoyed reading what I've wrote (trouble). (Sorry, inside joke.)

Time to go. In the words of David Allen, "Good night and may your Gods go with you."

Editor's Note:

We'd like to leave the Harper community with just a few closing words.

Thanks for a great year. It's been fun (usually), but we wouldn't do it again if you paid us.

It's such a secret?

The contents of your letter, in my opinion, reflects poorly on the Biology Department at Harper as well as the Environmental Health and Safety Committee (as well as being poorly written). Oh well. On to other subjects.

Read the rumors that I'm a world, cynical Nam vet. No, I was never in Nam. I was involved in Beirut and Grenada but not Nam. Sorry I was cynical long before I was involved with those two affairs and I've been wrong even longer.

Is it me or do other people feel like yelling "Jackpot" when the coke machines give back nickels for change after putting in a dollar? And why don't they accept these dollar bills? They'll take old bills if they're not too old, but not brand new ones. If anyone can answer this question for me they'll receive a free issue of the Harbinger. Home.

More stuff. This has been two good years for me. I would like to make sure I mention a class I've really enjoyed (despite the fact that I was the only girl in the class). Sign Language. I originally took it because I was the only girl in the class.

While there I accidentally learned something. I learned how myself. I used to think I didn't have any prejudices. I've since learned that I did, even though it wasn't intentional. I used to think it was sad the drill could not hear. With my experiences here, there are times that I now think it is sad that I am not dead. I've learned how to communicate better than I did before I came here. That's the nature of Sign Language.

Why tell you these things? Because we are the future (scary). What we learn here will have an impact on what we do later in life. Always beware of the tags that are not there. Something you might think is a great idea (like mainstreaming) and a non-smoking campus might not be such a great idea to the people that have to live with it.

This is a very brief part of what I have learned. I wanted to do an entire column on this issue, but things came up. In retrospect, some of the things I've written about (some entire columns) don't deserve to be in the paper. I should have put that column in then I offer my apologies to the Deaf Community because there's a story that deserves to be told. The problem arises when people don't want to learn as much as the facts may confuse their theory.

The facts (at least the few that I know are) that there are a community that has been put down and enslaved by the attitudes of the majority of the hearing for centuries. I cannot make up for that attitude, but I can promise you this attitude will no longer exist in the lives of myself and those who I can persuade. Oh well, final stuff. If I passed you off this year with the things I wrote then good. Someone who is passed off is not speaking. If I've made you think even a little bit differently, good. College is the time to do these things (or once we're in the real world we no longer have the time). I've enjoyed writing here at the Harbinger. I hope you have enjoyed reading what I've wrote (trouble). (Sorry, inside joke.)

Time to go. In the words of David Allen, "Good night and may your Gods go with you."

So long, farewell...

I've always hated saying good bye. Unfortunately, the time always comes when it's inevitable.

In case there's any doubt in your mind, yes, this is the traditional good-bye and thank-you editorial. (Sorry, this is where it gets sentimental. But, hey, I'm the editor, I can do that. If you can't handle it, please skip to the movie reviews.)

It's been an exciting, frustrating, crazy, interesting, stressful, educational year. In a way, I'm sorry it's over. In another way, I can't wait to turn all the stress over to the next crazy sap we talk into being Editor-in-chief. (I'll have enough stress on my own with job-hunting.)

Well, Mom always taught me to say my "thank you's." Please forgive me when this list gets fairly redundant. There are so many people who deserve to be thanked, I'm sure I'll miss someone. To those of you who I forget, thank you.

First of all, a million thanks to my friends and family, who stood right behind me the whole year. You never abandoned me, even on Wednesdays when I was cranky from being up the whole night before. You've given me someone to lean on, an ear to talk to, and a shoulder to cry on. You were also there to celebrate my victories, no matter how big or how small.

Thanks to the crew at Lucky's Diner, who listened to me complain about this job all year and never hit me for it.

Thank you to all of the people who have helped out with this story or that all year. Special thanks to Terry Karow for her help with so many of this year's stories.

To John Falahee, Jim Cabaj, Dianna Dickson, Darlene Larson, the seniors, the Program Board and the WHCM staff, thanks for being so great to work with this year. Who would have believed that maybe for the first time in Harper's history we could survive this year and come out without hating each other? That, in itself, seems like a pretty big accomplishment.

Thank you to Jon Oxman and the Publications Board (more or less, my bosses). Even though you didn't always agree with what I had to say, you never tried to interfere with my right to say it. We're given a lot more freedom of the press than many colleges, and it helps the students involved to grow and learn from their mistakes and successes.

Now for the hardest of the good-byes, the Harbinger staff. This year's staff has been exceptionally small, but exceptionally hard-working. We've worked as a team, and that's made all of the successes possible. Thank you for making it such a great year. Without you, there would be nothing but blank pages. You have been more than just co-workers, you've been good friends. Special thanks to Marc Balke, Alisa Chindrud, Victor Chin, Lou Nunez, and Penelope Skrzynski, who have gone way above and beyond the call of duty.

Last, but most certainly not least, thank you to Lisa Aust, our Managing Editor. Lisa has stuck it out here with me every Tuesday night (usually until Wednesday morning), and even though we both felt like it, several times, never given up. She's covered for me when I had to be at work, and taken on half of the responsibilities around here (much more than she needed to). Lisa, thanks for all of your help, support, honesty, encouragement, etc., etc. Your friendship has meant so much, and nothing would have been possible without you here. You and I both know that, even if you don't have a plaque to prove it.

I've commented many times this year about an old journalistic saying.

"If you offend no one, your job isn't done."

As Mark James says, if we've offended anyone this year, good. Sometimes the only way to get people to think is to really upset them. If we've offended anyone into doing something, I guess we did our job well.

Harper's real responsibilities

Feeble! me! While attending classes at Harper, I had made the unwarranted assumption that the college's first responsibility was to the tuition-paying students who attend classes. Over the course of this semester, I have come to realize that Harper's interest lies elsewhere.

This is the first semester I have attended a weekend class. Normally, I attended evening classes and after this semester's experience, I will continue with night classes. The first couple of weeks of the semester were quiet and uneventful. Students arrive on campus to dark rooms and empty corridors.

As the semester progressed, things changed. Harper opened its doors to the community, allowing its campus to be used for a variety of activities.

First, there was the speech tournament. The organizers mistakenly scheduled a competition in the room where we were trying to take an exam. Does anyone realize how difficult it is to concentrate on microeconomics when the classroom door is opened every couple of minutes and everyone is interrupted by someone asking if there is a class in progress?

Putting a "Do Not Disturb" Class in Progress sign on the door didn't deter the disturbances in the least.

I won't even go into the hassles of trying to concentrate while being apathy-stayed by pump tunes!

Last week, it was the child care convention. Once again, we found ourselves trying to concentrate on a test. Our efforts were hampered by blaring videos of screaming children in the rooms adjacent and below ours.

It seems that Harper is quick to offer its campus to the community without stopping to consider the effects on the student population. If activities are to be sponsored during class hours, they should be confined to buildings that don't have classes in progress or Harper should invest some money to soundproof their classrooms!

YCA denies rumors

An open letter to the students of Harper:

It has recently come to our attention that several vicious rumors are circulating regarding our conduct and that of the club we administer, the Young Corporate Achievers. We would like to summarily deny the accuracy of these rumors. Here is a list of our denials:

1. It is unfair to say that the Young Corporate Achievers are funding an orgy on the club's expense. A final vote is yet to be taken.

2. It is unfair to accuse us of having conducted insider trading with brokers at the Chicago Board of Trade. We were never convicted of such a crime.

3. It is unfair to say that we practice sexism. Men are welcome to join our club, too.

4. We were never convicted of indecent exposure. The case was dismissed on a technicality.

5. There is completely insufficient proof to the allegation that we embezzled $1,500 from Formulator, Inc. in our senior there.

6. There are no witnesses to confirm the allegation that we hit on junior high school girls.

7. We absolutely deny the allegation that we sent a letter to the Department of the Treasury asking them to put a picture of Ed Wallace on the $20 bill. Any letter produced by any agency is a fabrication.

We hope that these rumors will stop now, as they are damaging to our politics, social and business lives. But perhaps worst of all, they are damaging to the psyche.

Campus-wide survey?

To the Editors:

Concerning the committees that "conducted a campus-wide survey to determine opinion on a total ban of smoking inside campus buildings and college vehicles."

In the May 3, 1990, edition of the Harbinger, Tim Vaughn, Editor in Chief, stated that certain committees' reported survey results indicated that the majority of respondents favored a policy that would ban smoking and the use of tobacco inside college facilities and vehicles.

I would have you know that a group of students concerned about fair treatment of smokers conducted their own survey and our results did not even resemble a majority. In order to resemble a majority, Harper's committees would have had to survey all of the students on campus, not just a handpicked few.

I personally have never even seen another survey other than the one circulated by our group and the one conducted by the Harbinger.

For those of you concerned, everyone should be here at the results of our survey.

Number of respondents: 94

1) Do you smoke?

Yes 156 No 236

2) How old are you?

a) 16-25 178 b) 26-35

11 c) 36 up 4

3) How many hours are you on campus?

(per week)

21.7 was average

4) Are you aware of the attempt to ban smoking on campus?

Yes 297 No 97

5) Are you in favor of making Harper a non-smoking campus?

Yes 191 No 186

Don't know: 17

6) Have you participated in any other previous surveys?

Yes 17 No 383

This survey was conducted randomly over a week, and no one was discriminated against. As you can see, there is no clear majority in favor of banning smoking.

Of course, the fact that the ban could be illegal also helps strengthen the smokers' position. In the Federal Clean Air Environment Act of 1993 it is stated that any publicly funded establishment that considers itself to be non-smoking must provide areas for smokers.

In rebuttal, one might say that Harper will provide the outside for smoking. The outside is already there; it is supposed to be a bonus!

I propose that the Board provide well-ventilated areas inside the buildings for people who smoke. Maybe the fact that these areas are a privilege would cause people to adhere more to the rules. It isn't fair to ask someone to step outside in January when it's 40 degrees just so that they can smoke a cigarette!

For a progressive institution, Harper is in the dark ages on this issue. I would have hoped that the school would have the foresight to see that by imposing their will on people they run the risk of losing students, and therefore, revenue.

I guess one would think I'm just getting carried away by my emotions, but if one looked at the situation more closely, one would see that there are some basic fundamental rights at stake here.

In the two years that I have been at Harper, I have been fairly content with the way the school has been run. Now I'm glad that I'm getting out of here because I wouldn't want to continue my education in a school that is so blatantly dictatorial as Harper has proved to be.

The Realities of Islam

Have you ever been frustrated when people start talking rubbish behind your back? What happens when they say false things concerning your culture, race and even your religion? Surely, if false information is given out concerning any of the above categories, you would make a point to correct the misinformed informers and their audience with the truth, right?

We're writing this to replace misconceptions with factual knowledge in reference with the religion Islam.

'Islam' is an Arabic word denoting the commitment to surrender and submit to God in order to live in peace, peace with the creator, with oneself, with other people and with the environment. Therefore, a Muslim is one who submits to the will of God in peace. Jews are Elish for God, Jesus Christ used this word when he prayed to God in Aramaic, God has an identical name in Judaism, Christianity and Islam, Allah is the same God worshipped by Muslims, Christians and Jews. Allah, the Arabic word for God, cannot be plurally conjugated. This singularity and unity of God denotes Islam as a monotheistic religion.

The legal sources for Islam are the Quran and Hadith. The Quran, which was revealed to the Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) in the 7th century of the common era, is, as the Muslims believe, the word of God. Its authenticity, originality and equality are intact. The Hadith is the report of the sayings, deeds and approvals of Muhammad.

The moral system of Islam is based on the righteous and God-conscious man and his love of God and his fellow man.

It is not righteousness that you turn your face towards the East or West, but it is righteousness to believe in God and the Last Day and the Angels, and the Book, and the Messengers; to spend of your substance for the needy, for the warfaring, for those who ask, and for the feeding of captives, to be steadfast in prayer, and practice regular charity; to fulfil the contracts which you make; and to be firm and patient in pain (for suffering) and adversity and throughout all periods of panic. Such are the people of truth, the God-conscious (Quran, 2:177).

By setting God's pleasure as the objective of man's life, Islam has furnished the highest possible standard of morality. It stipulates for man a system of life which is based on all good and is free from all evil. It invokes the people not only to practice virtue, but also to establish virtue and eradicate vice, to bid good and forbid wrong.

The sense of justice is one of the most wonderful ideals of Islam, because as I read the Quran, I find those dynamic principles of life, aimed at the world," said Samir Naash.

The most common misconception of the spread of Islam is by the means of the sword. How could a religion over 1400 years old, which was supposedly spread by the sword, become the second largest (over 1 billion followers) and fastest growing religion of the world today?

"History makes it clear that the legend of fanatical Muslims sweeping through the world and forcing Islam at the point of the sword upon conquered races is one of the most fantastically absurd myths that historians have ever repeated," said De Laity O'Leary in his book Islam at the Crossroads.

One of the important principles of Islam is the freedom of conviction and freedom of consciousness. Islam has given the right to the individual that his religious writings will be given due respect and nothing will be said or done which may encroach upon his right.

Two other common accusations given to Islam are that of terrorism and deprivation of equal rights for women.

Islam condemns all forms of terrorism. "It would be wrong to judge Islam in the light of the behavior of some bad Muslims, who are always shown on the media," says Youssif Islam (Ali Stevens). Terrorism is not only associated with Muslims, Jew and Christians have also committed terrorist acts which the media explicitly doesn't report and in most cases doesn't seem to put the blame of the acts on the religion itself.

Concerning women, the true Islamic conception of the female is that of a shrine of sanctity, with one word, Muhammad raised her to the highest pedestal when he said, "Heaven lies at the feet of my mother." Islam over 1400 years ago gave women the right of inheritance, the right to keep her surname after marriage, and the right to hold political positions, to name a few. Islam regards women spiritually equal to man. It also regards her intellectually equal.

There are just a few facts about the nature of Islam. The formation of the Muslim Students' Association was to give a better understanding of Islam to Muslims and non-Muslims. We hope this has shed some light of truth and cleared up the misconceptions associated with Islam.

If you have any questions or want to acquire further knowledge about Islam, please feel free to contact the Muslim Students' Association of Harper College after a few weeks in room A136. Free pamphlets are also available.

Artistic expression verses obscenity

Record sticking has been a seriously debated issue the past few years. Organizations such as the Parents Music Resource Center (PMRC), have been pushing for warning stickers on recordings that contain lyrics of a violent or explicit nature. The scary thing is that the PMRC has gotten legislative support for some of their ideas. In Florida and Missouri legislation has come into effect that requires warning stickers be attached to albums by more controversial artists. As a supporter of free musical expression, this really bothers me a lot. No matter how you put it, it's still censorship.

It's not just record sticking that is the problem, it's the overall negative attitudes toward more controversial artists. A good example is the rap outfit 2 Live Crew, who have been under fire by Florida's state legislature. The state of Florida has brought up obscenity and racketeering charges against the group, as well as forbidding the sale of their albums to minors.

Even though the band's material is of explicit nature, the state of Florida is overstepping its authority, as well as violating the first amendment. Just hearing that a band was facing criminal charges over explicit music is enough to make you think twice about how fragile our rights are.

It's just another battle in the war over what is artistic expression versus what is obscene. This time around the fight for freedom of expression is losing ground to fringe groups and media hysteria.

According to the PMRC, music with violent content can cause impressionable children to become violent, suicidal and anti-social. Of course, the PMRC uses its share of flimsy evidence and false sense of alarm to back up its claims. Despite the lack of evidence, the PMRC uses the media to its advantage, especially talk shows and cheap publications to stir up support for its movement.

The PMRC itself is not an evil organization, but I see them as misinforming, overactive parents who take the music a bit too seriously. People forget that Rock and Roll is rebellious music; it always has been, it always will be.

Even the head of the PMRC, Tipper Gore, admits to listening to early Rock and Roll, but claims that what is coming out now is harmful to children. Oh, how Mrs. Gore forgets. When Rock and Roll started out, it was met with widespread criticism from the media and concern from the parents.

For example, when Elvis appeared on the Ed Sullivan Show, Elvis was only shied from the chest up because his stage theatrics were considered obscene. Little Richard took a lot of heat from the public over the song Tutti Frutti, because of the sexual nature of the lyrics.

The list goes on from the bad boy image of the Rolling Stones, the hard crunch of Led Zeppelin, and the shocking Sex Pistols. The tradition always remains the same no matter what the period in history: music, with that 'k' value. Good Rock and Roll always has two requirements: the first being that it must shock parents and second, it must have good energy to release aggression. Yes, even the father of Psychology, Sigmund Freud, said music was a healthy way to channel frustration.

The overriding question is, where do you draw the line on music and has it gotten too explicit? I say no, because the performing arts and society in general mirror one another, in fact they are both tied together. Right now a lot of people worry about the content in music, but it is so intertwined with sex and violence because society is cranking down on it. Music is not encouraging aggression or unsafe sex, it is merely providing a healthy release of frustration in a socially acceptable way.

I am not saying that a six-year-old child should listen to 2 Live Crew, but if it's made illegal for minors it is that not an extra incentive for any teenager to try to get something that is forbidden to them? By blowing it out of proportion all we are doing is making music more explicit. What is the solution?

I think if it is in this 'sex-free' press through periods of more liberal attitudes and more conservative times every 10 to 20 years or so. Whenever it hits, the more conservative times, these issues cause my serious discussion. For the past 10 years, we have been in a more conservative trend.

However, this by no means makes it OK for the PMRC to start the steps toward total censorship. Only through being more aware of your rights can you protect them. We have had too many close calls in the past (Heller and the McCarthy) to ever allow the minority to rule the majority, even if the cause seems just, it always corrupts.

I've thought these examples provided by history are always trying to be forgotten by some, but they must be learned from to protect freedom. Look around here. In a taste over a year you won't be able to smoke on campus because someone says they don't like it. But, hey, that is another editorial.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Harper Faculty, Administrators, Staff and Students,

Those of you who have been at Harper for many years know how the people here become your family a vital part of your life. Those of you who know me know how much this College and the people studying and working here mean to me.

I've been at Harper as a student and a part-time and full-time employee for seven years. I couldn't say which of my roles has the greatest impact on my life, but I know that the experiences and memories I carry with me will always play an important part in shaping my life.

I wish I could personally thank each of you who have helped me to grow emotionally, academically, socially and professionally.

All of you—students, faculty, staff, administrators—are community members who have been my teachers.

There are a number of people who have been particularly special to me. I hope you realize what your support and friendship mean to me. The last few weeks I have had mixed emotions about leaving Harper. I've been so busy making plans for my wedding, my 'new' house, my move to Ohio, and my new job, that I sometimes forget how much I'm leaving behind. I don't know how I could hope to enjoy working anywhere as much as I have enjoyed working at Harper.

Do you think Harper could open a Minerva, Ohio campus? They could call it the Southeast Center!

7th HEAVEN

By Lisa Ann
Managing Editor

After a prolonged and agonizing wait by their fans, 7th Heaven is making a comeback.

Their sound has changed into a little heavier metal and they've even written a ballad.

"We've tried to make everything better, from Tony taking lessons to the stage show, to writing new types of songs," said Richard Hoffert.

The band is fundamentally unchanged. Chris Senior on bass guitar, Tony DiGirollo on vocals, Richard Hoffert on lead guitar, and Dan Miller hangs away on the drums.

They're going into the studio to do a four or five song demo, which they plan to release June 16 at Poplar Sports Center in Hoffman Estates at their coming out party.

"It's a big indoor place on Hannel Rd. We're going to have T-shirts and everything, we'll be giving away stuff too," commented Hoffert.

7th Heaven will play Stay out West on June 3 in prep for the big one at Poplar. It will be the first one they have played since December 7.

The band made their debut last about this time at Harpo's Battle of the Bands. They eventually fell apart because of illness. Even though they didn't play together any more, they kept in contact. Hoffert and DiGirollo also kept writing songs. Perhaps it was peer pressure that brought them together.

As Hoffert said, "I'd go to see other bands and people would keep coming up to me and asking about the band and I would say, 'I don't know.' I felt bad because I wanted to get out and play again. We all wanted to get out and play, so that's why we decided to do this tape and everything else."

Hoffert continues, "We've got a new tape, a new image, a new stage show and new songs. We're keeping the songs people have told us they really like. Poplar Creek is going to be a great show for us."

Senior elaborated, "We are finally doing all of the things we had talked about before. I've played with other bands since, but they just weren't an enthusiastic as this band. Like most other bands won't do an independent show, or always be thinking of other things to do besides just playing the bars."

What other trials and tribulations have they been through? Have they learned any bits of enduring wisdom?

Hoffert said, "When you have a girlfriend, you have relations with one person, and that's hard enough. But when relationship with three other people. We have our good days and our bad days, and we try to get by. A lot of bands will break up because they are made as one person. But when you find the right people to make it work, it's great. That's why I came back, because I think I'm with the right people."

Any one looking for more information on 7th Heaven merchandise or shows can write to them at 7th Heaven, P.O. Box 66305, Chicago, IL 60666.

Mike on Movies

By Michael Schweisheimer
Harbinger Movie Critic

What kind of a man would give away a classic red convertible Mustang which he just purchased that very same day? A man who thinks he is dying. In the new film Swart! Three, Dabney Coleman is that dying man.

The whole premise of the film is that Coleman's character, Bart Simpson, has just turned fifty and is about to retire from the Seattle police force after thirty years of service as a detective. He has only eight days left to earn his pension. When he is accidentally given another person's medical diagnosis and told he has only two weeks to live he decides what he must do. For his family to receive $150,000 from his line of duty insurance policy, Coleman decides that he must die in action before he retires from the force.

What kept this movie from being a stupid sequence of chase scenes, shoot-outs, and general suicide attempts to it was a heart and a message. Looking at his coffin, or "boxings" as the salesman called them, the morbid little death dealer gave a piece of advice to Coleman that changed his life and also started giving the movie some true meaning. The man basically said life can be wonderful, but you have to live it one day at a time. The rest of the film, while still very comic, centers mainly on this theme and how it affects Coleman and the people he loves.

The effect is very touching and uplifting. The result of the comedy and

Rock's Hall of Shame

By Eric Jason
Staff Writer

I always said I would never make a "best of" list for my column. Well, I intend to stick to this pledge by presenting The Rock and Roll Hall of Shame. The five inductees represent the worst in contemporary music, and in their short rise to the top managed to make everyone violently ill. In fact, this combination will probably cause Elvis to roll over in his grave. So, without further delay, here's the list.

5) New Kids on the Block: This band, even though still popular, will be number one in a few years. It's not the obvious lack of talent and self-ot mentality that makes them so bad, it's just their lust for girls in junior high that makes me wonder.

4) Julio Iglesias: To All the Girls I've Loved Before, who could forget that moving duet with Willie Nelson. Iglesias sounds like a reform Cole Porter and Nelson sounds like he's doing dog calls. Definitely a one-in-a-million combination.

3) Michael Jackson's Thriller: Hey, wasn't this one just great? This album from hell stayed at number one for over a year and dominated the world to break dancing. Besides being the number one selling album of the 80's, it proved that an artist can sell a soft drink and be on fire at the same time.

2) The Saturday Night Fever Soundtrack: All bad things must come to an end and disco got the destruction it deserved. This album showed the upcoming trends of red sequin suits, thick gold chains and had dancing to the American public. Beside the bad trends, a propelled disco's version of the Three Stooges (the BeeGees) to the top of the charts. In fact, there is a direct similarity in appearance between both the Stooges and the BeeGees (with Andy Gibb being the long-haired version of Mo'et), but, of course, the BeeGees weren't trying to be funny.

1) Barry Manilow's Greatest Hits: Was this guy for real? This artist is probably the most made-fun-of because everyone thought he was a joke. I have to admit my parents had this album, much to my shame. Fortunately, the psychological trauma I suffered as a result of repeated exposure to his music, has been completely cured through psychotherapy.

It's a shame that these artists even receive royalties for these songs. I figure, for the hell they put us through, they should pay us for having to put up with it. These artists' contributions to the world of music are constantly trying to be forgotten, but, thanks to light rock stations, elevator music and good comedians, they live on.

Besides the obvious comedy value of this list, it has another meaning. Basically headed lists carry a lot of weight but really don't mean anything and don't travel too far. All this does is take up space in a very big issue, hopefully it proves its point.

Mike On Movies

seriousness mixed in a way to make a very enjoyable piece of film. It is perfect for family, friends, lovers or any member of the human race in need of a reminder that life is worth living.

The cinematographic aspects of the piece are nothing exceptional and some more creative film making could have improved the piece. There are a few scenes where some noddled or a wide angle lens could have enhanced the comedy. But, the way the story was told made up for anything which lacked.

The film had many innovative ways of telling the story. For instance, it never actually stated that Coleman and his wife, Teri Garr, were separated. Instead, it just showed this and it became evident.

The real beauty of the story telling came from the difference between what the audience and the characters knew. Early in the film, the viewers were shown the switching of blood samples.

Then, once Coleman was told he was dying, by some very amusing doctors none the less, he told no one. Now, the audience held two conflicting secrets. First, Coleman wasn't dying and second, Coleman thought he was dying. So, the audience was sympathetic for him, but had no way of letting him know the truth. This created a tension that was constantly played upon for the rest of the film. The fact that audience was made omniscient while the characters were blind to the truth pulled the audience into the film, making them active participants.

Written by John Blumenthal and Michael Berry, this film is a wonderful example of effective and creative writing. My only complaint is the slow beginning and the movie skillfully mutes tongue in cheek humor with beautiful messages about life. It takes a while to get going, but once the plot is set up it starts moving and doesn't slow down. It is a picture definitely worth seeing in the theater or on video.

Dabney Coleman stars as Burt Simpson. Is there any relation to Burt here?

Electric Phase

Shake Your Money Maker, the debut album from The Black Crowes, is a prime example of an album that time forgot. Even though the album is new, it sounds like it should have been recorded fifteen years ago. This by no means is a bad thing. The Black Crowes managed to bring classic blues rock back from the dead.

The Black Crowes sound like a mixture between the twin guitar groove of The Rolling Stones and the good southern sound of the Allman Brothers. The results are pretty good, especially if you have a great singer like Chris Robinson who had a voice more than suited for this kind of music.

The album is very bluesy in nature, particularly on the songs Twice As Hard, Thick N' Thin, and Jealous Again. Because of the blues sound, guitarists Rick Robinson and Jeff Cease have ample opportunity to share good leads and provide solid rhythm playing.

Besides the more bluesy songs on the album, The Crowes include some good of Rock N' Roll on Seeing Things, and with a southern flavor on She Talks To Angels. The best Shake Your Money Maker has to offer is the cover of Otis Redding's Hard To Handle, cranking up the tempo, rock hard.

There will be those who will write off the Black Crowes because they sound much like early Stones, but think of it this way: 1) Who ever said Rock N' Roll was original. 2) Even Led Zeppelin was thought of as imitators and still its consistent, who cares?

If you like good, solid R&R, this is a winner.

Don Ogilvie, Mike Suits (top), Steve Lovisa and Paul Kowalczyk are Flat Earth Society, a local band.

Flat Earth Society

By Steve Hill
Staff Writer

22 The Flat Earth Society has made one of the best independently-produced 'demo' recordings I have heard. The music on Mending and Tearing suggests great possibilities for this local band. The last couple of demos I have listened to have been fairly worthless, with no uniqueness to speak of (with the exception of a promising industrial band called Independent Mechanical Industry).

The songs on Mending and Tearing are polished enough that any further embellishment would be overkill. The Flat Earth Society's style is somewhat similar to bands like Nad Lovers and Giant's of Lowlife. The band, composed of Steve Lovisa, Mike Suits, Don Ogilvie, and Paul Kowalczyk, often plays live shows in the area that are probably worth checking out. (Appearing May 12 at Sanctuary, May 17 at Hollywood East, and this summer at Avalon and Cubana Metro).

Meanwhile, the aforementioned Independent Mechanical Industry's main member Robert Warnock has put together a demo tape called Machinery. Instead of mid-western stompy industrial dance music, the pace is slow enough to remind me of Nine Inch Nails' Pretty Hate Machine album. The song Murder is an especially effective slow song. Machinery is being sent to big-name independent labels likeTVT and Wax Trax.

22 If you thought Revelling Cocks were the ultimate industrial supergroup, wait until this summer when the first release from Pigface hits the streets. Members include the ever-present Alan Jourgensen and Paul Barker (Ministry), etc.; Chris Connolly, Luc Van Arkel, and Bill Rieflin (RevCo); Martin Atkins (Killing Joke); Nivek Ogre (Skinny Puppy); and Trent Reznor (Nine Inch Nails). They spent some time after the Ministry tour in Chicago Trax studios recording material for an upcoming album. Jourgensen recently produced some tracks for the costumed psychometal band G.W.A.R. and is putting the finishing touches on the Ministry live album, due out in June (along with a full-length live video).

22 The summer concert season is already upon us and it looks like this year's loser is Poplar Creek. The Hoffman Estates outdoor venue has lost many big-name shows to the new World Music Theater in Tinley Park, while Alpine Valley in Wisconsin continues to attract bigger shows than ever. The biggest alternative name that Poplar Creek has so far is Midnight Oil while the World Music Theater has booked the megabucks double-bill of Depeche Mode and Nitzer Ebb. Another summer alternative-music tour that will be worth catching is the Wire/Frasure show. Expect a new album from Wire, called Manscape, in mid-June.

22 Since the introduction of After Eight on Chicago's WKRT 93.5 FM, the station's Arbitron ratings have shown a mild gain. The best thing about After Eight is that it happens to be the only outlet for alternative music on a major commercial Chicago radio station. No more struggling to get good reception of WKRT or other college radio stations when you can tune in to WKRT every night after eight o'clock and get a dose of alternative music mixed with the usual WKRT fodder.

Does this mean I'll have to grow up? Yes. I

Lisa

Brad Underwood,
Just my last one time to thank you for know why, but every one tells me I am.

Now I get to tell you. You are pretty special too. You are going to be an awesome Pres

Thanks for putting up with us last minute

P.S. So how are those black sheets?

Mark James,
I'm so glad you were quibbles enough to be

Jan,
I said don't understand how on Earth you make those cookies!!!!!! That must be your secret. I've never thought of the odd pet, am through their stomach routine.
Probably cuz I'm so bad at it. Maybe I should have learned how to be a lady instead of trying to be one of the boys.
Lisa

Harker,
So, that's really your name? Thanks for being so understanding on Thursday. You made me laugh when I needed a mood.
Tan

Mary,
Congrats on finally getting what you want.
Now I could just know what I want.
Lisa

John Fallahae,
Good luck next year. I wish I were going with you. It sounds like you'll have fun.
Lisa

Mr. Fallahae,
You can leave your shoes behind my door anytime. After hearing about your vacation, though, we just might have to kick you out of bed for eating crackers.
Tan

Loose Lips,
It'll miss you and your gossip flashes. Be sure to call and keep me posted.
Tan

Dr. M,
Sorry, we just couldn't fit your full-page picture in the paper this week. (Besides, we couldn't just go changing the format.)
Thank you for all you've done for me and I haven't got a clue where I just know I taught me over the past four years. You're certainly one of the people I'll miss most next year.
Tan

Mike Schwies,
You, my friend, have improved tremendously this year. I hope you keep it up. No one can push a person but himself.
If you continue to push this way, I know I'll see your name in lights one day.
Lisa

Jamie,
Remember when you said that you'd make sure I never sit home on a Friday night when you turn 21? Well, I'm going to hold you to it. It'll be hard to get a hold of me after September because I'm moving and I haven't got a clue where I just know I haven't got a clue where I just know I who I am without guilt, so I'm letting you know in advance that you'll have to put your best thinking and planning into it to conquer it a challenge. A test of resolve.
Lisa

Janitoria, points behind first place DuPage's 193 Blackhawk East took second with 161.

"I figured we would get second, however it doesn't demonstrate how great we did," Zellner said. "I'm really proud of every one of them. They're really a new team outside of a couple of people. It gives us an excellent nucleus for next year."

Despite the fact that no one placed first, several people had very successful days. Sophomore Jerome Taylor brought home a pair of runner-up finishes in the 200 meter (22.6 seconds) and 400 meter (50.18 seconds) races. Another sophomore, Tom Iross took second in the Stepienbach and third in the 1500 meters (4:55.7).

One of the freshmen leading the way was Jamie Burhite, who took second in the Javelin (42.14 meters) while capturing a trio of third-place finishes in the 800-meter (4:77.0 points), discus (102.7), and the high jump (5'1"). Another in Scott Meizer, who had runner-up finishes in the hammer throw (34.26 meters) and discus (122.7), and a third place effort in the shot put (10.74 meters). Burhite, Taylor, and Iross also combined with Cedrick Casan in the 1600 meter relay taking another third place showing with a time of 1:40.9. The trio of Burhite, Casan, and Mike Hynek earned yet another third place finish in the 400 meter relay with a time of 44.95 seconds. "Both relays really demonstrated potential," the coach said. Other men's top five finishes included:

Third place:
Chris Swartz (10 K, 40:11) and acapulchase.
Hynek - 400 meter hurdles, (61.76 seconds)
Fourth place:
Burhite - long jump (5.76 meters)
Fifth place:
Casan - 400 meters (55.8 seconds)

Both teams now move to the NCA National Qualifying Meet at North Central College in Naperville this weekend. This will be the last chance for anyone hoping to qualify.

Outside of a change of record, a change of coaches and the comings and goings of a few players, the Harp Hawks 1990 postseason fortunes didn't change from a year ago as they were ousted in the sectional semi-final by Oakton 7-11 at Lake County Monday. The Hawks finished the year up at 25-17 while Oakton returned to the championship round of the double-elimination tournament. Oakton needed to beat the top-seeded host Lakers twice while CLC only needed one win over the Raiders in order to advance to the Region IV Tournament held this weekend in Kankakee.

"They (Oakton) scored in almost every inning," Head Coach Matt Royer said. "We were able to stay close until they widened the gap which put them over the top."

In advancing to Monday's game, the Hawks fell in the first round to the same Oakton team 7-4 Sunday, but earned a second date with the Raiders by sweeping Elgin 5-1 later in the day.

"I thought that we did O.K. Royer said about his team this season. "We played a lot of first-year players to they know what our system is. I feel that's going to help us for next year."

Women's track delivers

By John Brinckerhoff

When it came down to crunch time at Saturday's NCAA Region IV Women's Championship, symphonies Michele Maxwell and Pam Weider stood tall and delivered. And how! Together, the duo combined for 10 of host Harper's 13 first place finishes en route to 103 total points and team title honors for the fifth consecutive year. By qualifying in five of those events the pair earned a return trip to the NCAAs National Championships, which commence next Thursday in Odessa, Texas.

Maxwell qualified in the 800-meter hurdles (3:20.00), the 110-meter hurdles (1:51.81), and the 400-meter hurdles (2:24.00). Weider qualified in the 1500-meter (5:10.33) and 3200-meter (11:11.00) races.

Maxwell also picked up first place finishes in the long jump (4.69 meters) and high jump (5'11.25"). She along with Weider teamed up with Ann Wishe and Carla Munger for takes in the 400 (34:25 seconds) and 1600-meter (4:33.4) relay races. Weider, Wishe, and Munger along with Rosalinda Saez took the 3200-meter relay with a time of 13:13. LeeAnn Camp added two titles in the shot put (9.88 meters), and the discus (102 ft.).

Jackie Szykowsky closed off the day's festivities with the 5,000-meter championship in a time of 20:19.

In addition, Head Coach Renee Zeltner was named Region IV Women's Coach of the Year for the fifth consecutive year. "It speaks for itself," the coach said. "We had an outstanding group this year. We were able to put two people back to nationals."

Blackhawk East came in second with 61 points, while DuPage took third with 46.

Other Harper top five women's finishes were:

Second place: Maxwell javelin (65.77), Wishe 800 meters (2:41.77).

Third place: Saez discus (82.87), Maxwell shot put (8.19 meters).

Fourth place: Camp javelin (62.77), Munger 400 meters (66.67 seconds).

Fifth place: Saez shot put (6.29 meters), Munger 200 meters (28.92 seconds).

In the meantime, Harper's men's team failed in their bid to repeat as Region IV champion with a third place finish. The hosts scored 116 points, 77

Softball ends season

By Lou Nauer
Guest Writer

While the College Of Lake County baseball diamond was the burial ground for the Harper baseball team's postseason hopes this past weekend, it was the College of Lake County softball team that dug out the grave for Harper's 1990 season.

After losing home advantage due to an unplayable field, the visiting Lancers came to town and swept the Hawks 12-4 in game one and 10-3 in game two in first round NCAA Region IV Tournament play Sunday. Harper ended its season at 13-2.

"We just didn't have it in game one. Head Coach Martha Lynn Bolt said between games, the players started talking amongst themselves to play better in the second game and even though the field didn't show it, we played a lot better, the just overpowered us."

In game one, an eight run inning ending explosion off an injured Nick Bouding did the damage. In the second game, a four run barrage in the fifth inning off Kris Van Acker put the game away for good, thanks in part to three Harper errors.

"I thought that our pitching in both games was pretty good considering that Nicky was injured and those errors in the second game," the coach said.

As of press time four sophomores (pitchers), Chris Ladson (second baseman), and Lisa Devenish (shortstop) were under consideration for this weekend's NCAA Region IV All-Star Game at the Fox-Lane Softball Complex in Hanesville, Illinois.

Rokusek and Boldog named Athletes of the Year

By Lou Nauer
Guest Writer

Steve Rokusek and Nicky Boldog were honored as the 1989-90 Harbinger Male and Female Athletes of the Year respectively, at Friday's Student Awards banquet in the Building A Cafeteria.

Rokusek was a member of this year's NAC Conference and Midwest Bowl

Champion Football, earning honorable mention NAC and Region IV honors as a defensive lineman. He also experienced the right end and fullback positions. As a wrestler, Rokusek came in second in the heavy weight class at February's Region IV championships. At the national meet, he came only one match shy of a berth in the All-American placement round. The Crystal Lake native plans to return to Harper next year to complete his associate degree while completing his sophomore season of wrestling.

Boldog, a freshman, competed in volleyball, women's basketball, and softball. The Schaumburg High School graduate helped the volleyball squad to its most victories in five years. She played a key role in this year's NAC Champion and Region IV Semi-Final Women's Bas-kettball Team with key performances in the Quarterfinal round against two-time defending champ Moravia Valley, and in the Semi-Final round loss to Carl Sandburg. Boldog led the softball team in pitching with a 3.66 ERA highlighted by a no-hitter against Rock Valley earlier this season. She plans to return to Harper next year and is currently leaning towards concentrating on her softball career.
